EMANCIPATION CELEBRATION AT WASHINGTON.

On the 19th last two regiments troops and various associations, composed entirely of black people, as enabled in front of the Executive Mansion, and were addressed by the President of the United States. The event is memorable and significant in several a just. It is worthy of note from the presence of colored troops. Not that black soldiers were unknown in the earlier history of the republic. In the war of Independence black men served in the ranks, side by side, with white men In the second war with Great Britain black regiments were organized, and served with such efficiency and success as to elicit the hearty commendation of Gen ANDREW JACKSON But afterwards, a great change came over the ideas and temper of our people. The Black were oppressed to a much lower position than they had previously occupied A deep contempt was often held for them, and they were excluded from those recognition they were entitled to claim, simply as human beings, under the most unmitigated despotism. Five years ago a crowd of colored people, assembled at or near the Presidential Mansion, and especially under circumstances warranting a suspicion they were looking never so remotely to the attainment of political privileges, would have been summarily dispersed by the police.

It seems proper to note that as admirable appears in the tone and manner of the President toward the people. He comes equally removed from a patronizing condescension and a haughty arrogance. He addressed them substantially as he would have addressed a company of white men indeed, we think his address, in point of style and temper a decided improvement on his recent addresses to white audiences. There is no trace of smug in these utterances.

The President referred with an honest pride to some passages of his eventful career as furnishing proof of his desire that black people, as well as white, should enjoy the blessings of freedom. He could have gone much further than he did without violating any of the proprieties either of his official position or of the immediate occasion Had he pleased, he could have rehearsed these grand promises he made to the black men of Tennessee, that he would be their Moses, and lead them on to the full enjoyment of all the rights of citizenship Indeed, it his purpose remained unchanged, here was a chance wasted, an opportunity unimproved

And this leads us to say that the President's speech is more remarkable for what it does not contain than for what it does Before him stood the representatives of four and a half millions of people who had never produced a coppercent or a trainer who had evinced an unsuspected loyalty, an unflinching devotion, a marvellous patience, and a high order of courage What they wanted most to hear was if the feeble hopes lashed by the veto of the Freedmen's Bureau Bill and the Civil Rights Bill might be again enkindled On this head not a word was vouchsafed. There was even an ominous confession of what avail was of no stately generalities, to tell those eager people, that the man who vetoed those bills was more their friend than the men who passed them through the Houses?

Still, the grappling facts stands in the history of the generation that caste has so far lost its force that black men can approach the head of the government, pay their respects in the usual popular forms to the Constitution and the Law and hear ceremoniously thanked for the compliment they tendered. The world does more.

OUR REPUBLICAN FRIENDS in Allegheny always stand high and true spoke out very firmly and boldly, on Thursday night, on the attempt to displace the Collector of the 24 district and the Postmaster in Allegheny city for opposition's sake. There can be no mistake as to the minds of the people of that district on that subject.

The resolutions characterize the new appointees to the Collector-ship as a man of "facile principles" No description could be more comprehensive and true than this. Ex-Gov JOHNSTON, when he left office as Governor in 1851, stood almost at the top of the heap, as a progressive, in the Whig party; but he lost that position altogether by his course in the Whig National Convention in 1852, in framing and pressing to adoption the pro-slavery platform, which was much more pro-slavery as it came from his hands than it was when adopted, and which proved the death of that party He next gravitated into the Know Nothing party, which he helped to break up, in turn, in 1856, and then joined the Republican organization, but he could not, even then, withhold his hand from factiousness and disorganization for although he supported FREMONT, he insisted upon running on the the same ticket with him as a candidate for Vice President, and got a miserable handful of politicians to put him in nomination for that place Nothing came of his disorganizing movement, because the man was now too weak to work much mischief, but he persisted in considering himself a candidate for the Vice Presidency up to the night of the election. The records of the Electoral Colleges however, do not show that he received any votes for that office.

In 1864 he was so thorough a Radical that he could not conscientiously support Mr LINCOLN or Mr JOHNSON, both of whom were too Conservative for him He accordingly aided in getting up the Cleveland Convention which nominated FREMONT and COCHRANE as candidates in opposition to the Republican nominees. We believe our neighbor of the Commercial was somewhat inclined in the same direction: but its heart was so thoroughly sickened by the fact that that Convention passed by Gov. JOHNSTON in selecting its candidate for the Vice Presidency, that it was saved from lapsing into absolute heresy: but the ex-Governor continued to hold on to the Cleveland nominees as long as their fing fluttered, at least he never openly withdrew his fellowship from them.

Up to within a short time of the present Governor JOHNSTON has been classed as an opponent of the President's policy It was only when the President discerned the eminent fitness which has slumbered without recognition since 1852 that he discovered how thoroughly he and the President were in accord, and how imperatively common sense required him to maintain to the pro Slavery doctrine he enunciated on 1852 He would fain wipe out, as with a sponge, all that has intervened here and two periods, but the people have memories, if he has not, and hence when he speak, they sum up their collection of him in the happy phrase which certificates him as a politician of the peanipides.

THE common expectation was that Mr McDOUGALL, of California, would be expelled from the Senate on Thursday last for questions as "squatter impudence Where and he come from, that he should attempt to stigmatize any one else as a squatter!

THE PRESIDENT ON PATRONAGE. The Washington correspondent of a Chicago paper contains the following

"A few evenings ago, in the course of free and easy conversation with some convivial 'conservative' companions the President said the Republican papers were calling him John Tyler No 2, and denouncing him for betraying his party He said that it was not true that he was following in the footsteps of Tyler, in one respect at least When Tyler broke with his party the conservative turning Whigs out of office and filling the vacancies with Democrats The result was that in a short time he had few on all his offices away and lost his power. He had only as many friends as he had offices to bestow The Whigs ejected were even bitter and active enemies and sought him to death. Look up three of those pigeon holes, said John on They are filled with the papers of office seekers For some of the vacant places there are a score or more of competitors for hundreds of offices not vacant Each one of applicant who pledge themselves to sustain my policy and swear they are John Tyler men up to the handle. So my friends you forcibly perceive that the course I am pursuing secures me as many friends there are applicants for office. And this policy works admirably in another respect In about the months of all the Republican holding offices as they are afraid to open their heads in opposition to me lest their cheat may roll in the basket Now if I should turn round now and say that I was with you in all me like tigers, and these warm and enthusiastic hosts of friends, now hanging for crumbs of patronage would come down to zero the moment I should drop out of the office Hence you see, gentlemen that I am not hollowing in the manner that John Tyler, so far as the dispensing power is concerned John was a fool, he did not understand human nature and the spring of action I profess to be a politician who have studied the nature of office seekers to some purpose

THE Nashville Banner, edited by two ex rebels, one of whom was in the rebel army, while the other edited a rebel paper during the late civil war, says

"But in honest truth, the great majority of the so called Union or loyal men of the South were the merest trash that could be collected in a conflicted community, of no personal credit or social respectability

VALLANDIGHAM called on Thad Stevens recently, and in course of conversation stated that if the President did not immediately begin to appoint Democrats to office he would not retain the influence of a single Democrat three week longer

THOMAS NOEL, who betrayed the Republican constituency that elected him and went over to the Democrats, has announced himself as an Independent candidate in the Third Missouri District.

SOME of the Republican Senators and Congressmen talk of a perpetual session as a means of checking the alleged injudicious appointments and policy which the President may see fit to adopt when Congress adjourns

In order to make every possible preparation to meet the expected visit of the cholera during the coming summer, Dr. Caleb W. Horner, chief medical officer of the Bureau of Refugees, Freedmen, &c., has directed the chief surgeons of districts to execute at once a careful inspection of all relief establishments and quarters occupied by dependent refugees and freedmen under their jurisdiction, and to perfect such sanitary regulations as may be deemed necessary to guard, as far as possible, against the occurrence of cholera or other epidemic diseases, and to meet any extraordinary demands which may arise therefrom. he has directed the medical department of the bureau to be at all times in readiness.

THE corner stone of the monument to be erected over the grave of Stephen A. Douglas will be laid some time during the month of May or June, and the trustees having the matter in charge have invited Wm. H Seward, Secretary of State, to be the orator of the occasion. In reply, Secretary Seward writes. "I may inform you that I should consider it an agreeable duty to accept this invitation, which does not exaggerate the regard in which I hold the memory of Stephen A. Douglas. The last of his days in Washington were employed in consultation with President Lincoln and myself in organizing the resistance to disunion."

AT Memphis, recently, several negroes have been prosecuted in the Criminal Court for keeping tippling and billiard saloons, in violation of the State laws, and their attorneys plead the Civil Rights bill in abatement. Judge Hunter has since rendered his decision in these cases He holds that the Civil Rights bill is the supreme law of the land, all State laws to the contrary notwithstanding, and gave judgment accordingly in favor of the defendants. The Attorney General has signified his intention of carrying the cases to the higher courts.

THE prospects for a fruit crop in this vicinity this season are said to be favorable. The backwardness of Spring has kept the buds in a condition not to be affected by the changing weather.—Lebanon Courier.
