EAST TENNESSEE.

The loyal men of East Tennessee are anxious to have their part of the State get off as a State by itself. They give various reasons for desiring to be separated from the rest of the State, the principal one being that they are not in sympathy with Middle and West Tennessee, those portions of the State being intensely diskyal, whilst East Tennessee is as intensely loyal, and that, if they remain in the State, they will be subjected constantly to the persecuting spirit begotten of the rebelhon and directed specially against them because of their firm adhesion to the government through the darkest hours of the ware.

There can be no question of the loyalty of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people of the certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people of the certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of their gravity of East Tennessee, and its brave people certainly deserve come recognition of t ones. The first effect might be to send loyal Senators and Representatives to Congress; but that would be but a momentary benefit, to be followed, in the end, by a representation in both Houses that would side, on all contested questions, with the South. The permanent effect would be to add one more to the number of Southern States, thus increasing its political power to that extent.

We have had a fair illustration of this in West Virginia. During the war it gave the Union the aid of its votes in Congress; but now that the war is over, its representatives in both Houses vote very generally where a country he was concerning the conditions of the Numancia above weight? We have accounts concerning the condition of the Numancia above weight? We have accounts concerning the condition of the Numancia above weight? in West Virginia. During the war it gave the Union the aid of its votes in Congress; but now that the war is over, its representatives in both Houses vote very generally with the South, and instead of one Virginia, as of old, we have now two. We see nothing of value to be gained by duplicating the power of any Southern State; and however much it may annoy the people of Rast Tennessee to have to submit to the control of Middle and West Tennessee, they have not yet given evidence of the possession of a sentiment sufficiently sevened to enable them, if formed into a State, to stand up for the right in all things in the unavoidable contest between the North and the South.
