THE MARK THROUGH OUT
When the President received the telegram from the Republican party, and had over, if possible, the government to the control of the before they desire to disappear. Peaches are in most of the counties a bad failure, as were cherries. Of apples, pears and quinces there is not half a crop. Grapes, wherever the climate is genial, are abundant, and if not struck with mildew, will be of excellent quality. In some vineyards, which we have carefully examined, the vines are fruited up to the top of the tree. We think nearly all are so. Of the whole, the inventory is a good one. The chief lesson to be learned from it is to rely on Providence and disbelieve the croakers.

RETRIBUTION.
On several occasions we have felt constrained to comment in plain terms upon the extravagance, not to say recklessness, with which large sums of money were expended by the present Congress. We have sometimes thought members were deliberately conducting an experiment to determine the precise amount of the nation's resources could bear, and we have felt serious fears that the process would be carried so far as to lead to wide spread disaster, if not worse.

Several horses in Erie are afflicted with the glanders.
The police are busily engaged in shooting dogs in Washington, D. C.
Morris's Opera House, in New York, on Wednesday last.
The citizens of Indianapolis are estimating anxiously about the short supply of water in their wells.
Father Patrick Donohue, a Catholic priest, died from sunstroke, in Washington, a day or two since.
The New York Tribune announces an intention of bringing that paper out on an evening daily, in October.
