The Raid on the Irwin Street Gambling Hell—Hearing of the Accused—The Mayor Plays a "Snap Game," and Hears of Another of a Different Sort—Discharge of the Parties Arrested.

Yesterday afternoon at three o'clock the parties arrested by the police at a gambling den on Irwin street, at a late hour on the previous night, were called up for a hearing before Mayor McCarthy. Samuel Shore, John Robinson, Con Brown and James Simpson, were the accused, Chief of Police Hague having made an information charging them with being "common gamblers," and with keeping a gambling house. The defendants were represented by Maj. A. M. Brown, Col T. B. Hamilton, and Wilkins H. Robinson, Esq.

Chief Hague, the first witness called, stated he was present at the time of the arrest. He saw no gambling, and based the charge which he had brought upon information received. Officer William Wilson was one of the raiding party, but knew nothing pertinent. David Campbell only saw some "chips," and gathered a pocket full. James Scott saw a pack of cards. David Campbell got on a shed and saw [illegible] Robinson was known as intelligent on the main subject, the alarm having been given before their optics discovered anything tangible. Ward Nicholson, Mayor's clerk, was the first or second man on the shed, from which he could look into the alleged gambling room. saw Shore, Robinson and Simpson in the act of getting up from a table. saw "chips" and cards and two men playing.

John Miller, called as a witness for the defense, testified that he was a partner in business with Mr. Shore—dealing in Stocks and engaged in the manufacture of brick. That during the last year Shore drew out as capital and profits $4,200, and that there was yet due him, as profits, some $300. Shore resided in the city, on Congress street, and, witness believed, owned the house he lived in. That on the shed, from which he could look into the alleged gambling room, saw Shore, Robinson and Simpson in the act of getting up from a table. saw "chips" and cards and two men playing.

John Miller, called as a witness for the defense, testified that he was a partner in business with Mr. Shore—dealing in Stocks and engaged in the manufacture of brick, that
