WHY AND WHITHER?

The possession by Mr. WILLIAM H. SEWARD of eminent intellectual powers has not sufficed to gain him the confidence of those of his countrymen who agree with the drift of his incultations. A sinister aspect, to the popular apprehension, has always appeared in his character and conduct, begetting the suspicion that a wide and irreconcilable discrepancy existed between the decisions of his intellect and promptings of his emotions. Hence, though confessedly the ablest leader of the Republican party, at its inception and through the arduous struggles by which its power was consolidated, he has signally failed to inspire respect for depth of moral convictions. On all three of the occasions when that party has been called upon to nominate a candidate for the Presidency, Mr. SEWARD's claims and pretensions were set aside; and, once at least, under circumstances calculated to touch his sensibilities and humble his pride. That he felt the slight does not admit of denial; that he resolved upon revenge, and has steadily pursued it, is susceptible of the clearest demonstration.

When Mr. JOHNSON was elevated to the Presidency Mr. SEWARD was suspended between life and death in consequence of the murderous assault of PAYNE. Mr. JOHNSON entered on his new duties, giving the strongest proofs of his intentions to bear true allegiance to the men and the principles that carried him up to the Vice Presidency. Indeed, there was a sternness in his declarations that evidenced a tendency to go further than all except the Republicans of the most extreme views desired. He kept on in this way for some time. Till when? Till precisely the period when Mr. SEWARD was so far recovered from his hurts as to resume his wonted activity. Then it was he poured into Mr. JOHNSON's mind the unclean scheme for obtaining a re-election by reducing the loyal North to subjection under the rule of the rebel South. Instantly the President changed front. A complete revolution came over his ideas and sentiments. The partially formed purpose of convening Congress in special session was abandoned. Instead of adopting this wholesome and constitutional measure, a Proclamation was issued inviting, not in terms but in effect, all the most conspicuous rebel chiefs to the Presidential Mansion, in order to concert the contemplated counter-revolution with them. What was this Proclamation? It was an offer of special pardon to rebels holding estates exceeding twenty thousand dollars each. Under it thousands of the rebel leaders made pilgrimages to the White House, and in the conferences that ensued was perfected the agreement for organizing a new party, to be composed of rebels, copperheads and conservatives which should be pledged to wrest the triumph from the victors in the great war, and bestow it on the vanquished.

This Policy was developed in a terrific manner in the New Orleans massacre. The object was, by a bloody demonstration, to strike terror into the hearts of all loyal men throughout the Southern States. Most effectually has the desired end been attained. Now, the President has the entire loyal element of that section under his iron heel, and he means to keep it there.

What next? Instead of listening to Congress the President has issued, through satellites, his edict convoking an unconstitutional and revolutionary assembly to meet at Philadelphia next week. Mark; we make no objection to assemblies of the people for the consideration of public affairs. This is not such an assembly. It did not originate with the people, and has not been managed by them. It was ordered by the President, as a defiance to the law-making bodies of the nation; and has been managed by him and his Cabinet officers. What is this body to do? We do not inquire—in what sophistries will it indulge? by what dissimulations will it seek impose on the credulous? by what incentives will it inflame Cupidity and Ambition? Its managers are experienced and skillful men, and know the advantages which result from a fair exterior. What is its real work? To agree upon the men who shall be sent up to Congress from the rebel States, and with what professions they shall come. The President has shown in New Orleans of what he is capable. It is time the loyal people of the country understood that a repetition of those bloody scenes is contemplated at Washington, and that the representatives of the States and the people, and their defenders are to be the victims.

ARBITRARY ARRESTS.

The whole system of Arbitrary Arrests, as put in execution, during the war, throughout the loyal States, by Secretaries SEWARD and STANTON, received our unqualified disapprobation. Not that we commiserated the fate of most of the men who were summarily locked up; for they were notoriously disloyal, deserving all they got and more too. Nor yet, did we then, nor do we now, deny the right to make arrests by military authority during the actual existence of hostilities. Military law is just as absolutely the law of this land as the civil law; only each must be exhibited in its proper sphere and under appropriate conditions. What we objected to, was that men arrested were not speedily served with specifications of the offences alleged to have been committed by them, put on trial before commissioners or jury constituted, punished if found guilty, and allowed freely to go their ways if declared innocent. Two or three convictions, in conspicuous cases, followed by just punishment, would have put the administration in the right, and prevented a vast amount of trouble. As matters were managed—locking men up; keeping them in duress as long as was thought convenient; and then turning them out without explanation—the Administration was so clearly in the wrong that a decent defence of it was impossible.

When the war subsided, and civil rule again became predominant, the officers ordering and making these arrests unexpectedly found themselves involved in difficulties. They were in turn arrested, charged with the offence of false imprisonment. Among others, Marshal MURRAY, of the Eastern District of New York, found himself in this predicament; and in one case, a judgment for damages was rendered against him in the sum of $9,000, in the Supreme Court of the State.

Finding how affairs were moving, the office holders, who had been proceeded against, or were in danger of having suits brought against them, for summary arrests and military detentions, had sufficient influence to procure, on the 3d of March, 1863, the passage of a law by Congress, exonerating them from all penalties incurred, and providing for the removal from State Courts to Federal ones of all suits commenced, or that might thereafter be commenced against them. Under this law Marshal MURRAY has taken an appeal from the [illegible] to the United States to the United States Court. The latter Court has made an order that the Clerk of the Supreme Court in which the judgment was entered, shall make a return to the writ of error issued in the case out of the United States Circuit Court. But this is not conclusive in the matter. It remains for the Federal Court to decide whether or not it has jurisdiction in the case after its removal. Besides, this puts the matter in a shape to go up to the Supreme Court at Washington for ultimate settlement. Not till this shall be done, and a decision reached sustaining the validity of the Act of Congress referred to, with the officers and agents of the Government concerned in making Arbitrary Arrests obtain a comforting sense of security.

PRESBYTERIANISM SETTERED IN THE SOUTH.

The demoralizing effects of the slaveholders' rebellion in the South is daily becoming more manifest in various forms. Recently there has been developed a phase of this demoralization that will surprise many. The question of the ordination of colored ministers and their relation to the Southern Presbyterian Church, it appears, has been a theme of considerable discussion down South. Reports indicate that the views of the majority of the ministers of that body are at variance with the loyal Church in the North. This new feature developed itself at a meeting of the Presbytery of Hopewell, at its sessions in Athens, Georgia. The subject was thoroughly discussed, and in one of the resolutions it was ordered that "three colored members and licensed exhorters in connection with the Macon church, be set apart by the Presbytery to be Presbyterian ministers, with power to preach the gospel, to administer the sacrament of the Church, to solemnize marriages, and to ordain ruling elders and deacons; provided that these men shall be regarded as ordained ministers in the Presbyterian Church only in connection with their own people."

The existence of an order in this Georgia church, of "licensed exhorters," possesses some novelty, as it is unknown, we believe, elsewhere in the Presbyterian Church. A writer in the Presbyterian alleges this action to be contrary to the scriptures, and plainly subversive of the fundamental principles of the Gospel. It is affirmed by this writer that the action of the Presbytery overthrows a distinctive principle of that Church, and one to which she has clung amid bloody persecution

It is very forcibly shown that the action of the Presbytery destroys the communion of saints. The colored ministers are, in every sense of the term, such but one. The plain meaning of this action is, that while they are full ministers as concerns the colored people, they are simply lay men as concerns the white people; i. e. they cannot preach to, marry, or administer the sacraments to white people. It is in accordance with the Confession of Faith, which states that the Lord Jesus instituted it "as a bond and pledge of their communion with him, and with each other, as members of his mystical body." The communion of saints is likewise destroyed as to the preaching of these colored ministers, for saints, "having united to each other in love, have communion in each other's gifts and graces."

It is further alleged the action of the Presbytery overthrows the doctrine of the parity of the ministry. This fundamental doctrine of the Presbyterian church has ever been maintained amid bitter persecutions. The action of the Presbytery also violates the Constitution of the Presbyterian Church, which requires the Moderator to address the candidate at the time of his license that he is "to preach the gospel, wherever God, in his providence may call him." But the Presbytery of Hopewell changed the form; they license men "to preach the gospel to colored people alone." The last argument urged by this writer is that this action is contrary to the great commission of the Lord Jesus Christ, after which it is claimed the Presbyterian form is modified, and upon which its authority to license, is based.

While it is true that it is the action of but one Presbytery, the movement has been endorsed privately by many ministers, and no Southern newspaper or Presbytery, that we are aware of, has condemned it.

THE PEW QUESTION.

The Church Review asserts that the church of England has grown more in numbers, church buildings, schools, and voluntary offerings of all sorts, for all purposes, ecclesiastical and benevolent, foreign and domestic, in twenty-five years, than in the three hundred years previous. Strange as it may appear the chief element, it says, of its power and of its success has been its deadly hostility to the pew system, and the remorseless and unflinching war which it has waged with pews and pew sales and pew rents in every varied form of the abomination.

Recently-published district returns of English Wesleyan Methodism show that a decline has occurred in several of the oldest districts, where it is alleged, it has been occasioned in good part, by the "exclusiveness of pews," which has been adopted by the Wesleyans. It is stated in the very districts where the greatest decline has occurred there has been "an improvement in church architectures," and in the amount of "money contributions," and an "affectation of gentility" prevails. It is thought by some that this "exclusiveness" has supplanted those characteristics which belong to the earlier period, when Methodism was the "great phenomenon" of the age, "sweeping onward with a breadth and force truly astonishing." The evil complained of in the Wesleyan body does not exist hereabouts to any great extent, as in the East and portions of the West and Northwest. It is noteworthy that two Methodist churches, one in New York and one in Brooklyn, have abandoned the pew system. A writer in the Christian Advocate thinks that if the causes of the decline in English Methodism are correctly traced and truly stated, it is worthy of thought in this Centenary of American Methodism. He proposes to offer a prize of five hundred dollars for a prize tract on the evils of the "pew system" in Methodism.

POLITICAL NEEDLE GUNS.

The Boston Transcript suggests that Andrew Johnson, like Andrew Jackson, had now better be styled the "Hero of New Orleans."

—The Chicago Republican gives the following version of General DIX, amended by Johnson. "If any man attempts to haul down the American flag, ask him if he will accept a national situation."

—Thomas S. Turner, of Freeport, Chairman of the Republican State Committee of Illinois, having gone over to the Bread-and-Butter party, has resigned. He will have a place as Collector of Internal Revenue.

—It is said that if the straight-out Johnson men of Illinois send a full delegation to the Philadelphia "Bread-and-Butter" convention, there will not be a Johnson man remaining in the State during the session of said convention.

—The officers and soldiers of the Union army now in Louisiana visited the South originally to aid Southern Union men in putting down rebels. The President now keeps them there to aid the rebels in putting down original Union men.

—The Troy Times comments as follows upon the appearance of the name of Wm. Shakespeare, of Kalamazoo, signed to the call for the Johnson mass meeting in that city: "Now the meat men turn up about the time 'Conservative' meetings are to be held."

—A Mobile dispatch or a recent date contains the following bit of information: "The project for establishing a radical paper here has been abandoned, as the editors would be mobbed; they having received several anonymous written letters."

Mobile is thoroughly reconstructed after the Johnson pattern. Freedom of the press is not an essential part of "any policy."

—They have a way of "putting things" out west that, to say the least of it, is very expressive. Among the resolutions of a late Union convention in Illinois we find the following:

Resolved, That "treason must be made odious," but that it cannot be made odious by giving rebels seats in Congress, nor by feeding Jefferson Davis on poached eggs and fried oysters.

—The Democratic scheme to nominate Gen. Sherman for President in 1868 is thus spoken of by the South Carolina Columbian:

"If there are two names which we should reject to typify all that is fiendish in human nature, they are those of Sherman, the arch incendiary, and of Logan, his tool."

—The Chicago Tribune estimates the Western majorities for the congressional policy as follows:

	Maj		Maj
Ohio	40,000	Missouri	30,000
Indiana	35,000	Minnesota	6,000
Illinois	45,000	Kansas	10,000
Michigan	17,000
Wisconsin	15,000	Agg. maj	200,000
Iowa	25,000
