A Word to the Players.

Now that the regular dramatic season is approaching we cannot resist the temptation to drop a word of advice to the "player folks," which, if accepted in the kindly spirit in which it is tendered, may have a beneficial influence, not only in elevating the profession in the estimation of the better class of society here, but also in filling the managerial exchequers with that much desired article—money—without which the most self-sacrificing caterer to the amusement of the "dear public" cannot prosper. Since the days of Greek comedy, when the Knights of the "sock and buskin" were carted through the Athenian streets, dramatic representations have been closely allied with those two great agents that have tended more than any thing else to bring the world to its present advanced stage of civilization—poetry and art. Even amid the licentiousness of the Roman Empire the drama stood far above the morals of the period and labored to teach the people that there was something above the gratification of sensuality. In France and England the most ardent votaries of the drama were men of cultures, erudition and refinement, while stage or dramatic poetry form the better portion of the Belles Letters, for which both nations are so noted. When Beaumont's and Fletcher's impure productions had almost the sole control of the stage in Great Britain society was even far below the standard set forth in their productions. We have only cited these facts for the purpose of proving that, instead of being injurious to public morals, the theatre is well calculated, if properly managed, to elevate the mind, strengthen the intellect, improve the morals, and aid the improvement of the masses by teaching them salutary lessons that, if given in a less agreeable form, would have no effect.

That the theatre has met with the opposition of intelligent people can be attributed more to the fact that the entertainment often offered is of such a character as to insure the censure of all well meaning moral persons, while on the other hand, a great deal of this opposition comes from a groundless prejudice against a profession, that the prejudiced parties know nothing about. As a friend of the histrionic profession we would advise managers to exclude all that villainous class of cut-throat dramas in which "heavy man" is forced in obedience to the text to utter profanations that cannot fail to insult the polite ear, and would not be tolerated in private society. Let the lady histrions stick to the habiliments of their sex, for women in unmentionables are an unpleasant spectacle, whether on or off the stage. But above all let us have no more of those comedians who becoming enamoured of their native wit substitute their own vulgarity for the witticisms of the author. They may make the vulgar laugh but they cannot make the judicious grieve," while their buffoonery tends to drive the better portion of the community from the theatre altogether. We trust in the ensuing season this thing will not be tolerated and, from our knowledge of the managers that are to control the destinies of our theatres we will not. Instead of the sensational, nonsensical school, let us have a little more of plays such as Bulwer's Money, Schiller's Robbers, Houms' Douglas, with an occasional interlarding of glorious old Billy Shakspeare's productions, and, our word for it, the receipts in the treasury will be fit in advance of those obtained by playing Jack Sheppard, Dick Turpin, George Barnwell, and plays of such a class as only satisfy the perverted tastes of a few noisy urchins in the gallery. Remember that

"Vulgarity admits of no defence,
A lack of decency is a want of sense."

An Office Holders Reply

The following straightforward letter shows the spirit that pervades all parts of the great Union Republican party, and the willingness to sacrifice self rather than bow down before the shrine of that power that would elevate treason and rob the country of the fruits of a "well fought war." Even the terror of official decapitation has no effect upon such men as the writer of the letter given below:

POST OFFICE, WEST MANCHESTER, PA.,
August 14th, 1866.

Hon. A. W. Randall—SIR: I received your call for the Philadelphia Convention under the frank of Senator Cowan, and being absent from home at the time of its arrival is the reason of the delay in answering it.

I heartily approve of said call, being as I am an advocate of the freedom of speech on all subjects, and the right of any portion of our citizens to peaceably assemble and freely discuss and deliberate on all subjects; and, believing that it is by the diffusion of light and knowledge that darkness is to be expelled from the minds of even Copperheads and traitors.

The emoluments of the office which I hold are not, nor would the emoluments of all the offices at your disposal, be sufficient to entice me in support of a party composed of such material as the traitors in the late rebellion and their Northern sympathizers.

If time lies heavy on your approbation, all right; and if you do not, you will regard it as my resignation, and make an appointment as soon as convenient to fill my place.

Respectfully yours,
WM. B. ROSS, Postmaster.

Assault and Battery.

Geraldine Martin, resides under the shadow of Mount Washington, in the borough of West Pittsburgh, and in order to gain a sufficient quantity of the "staff of life," to satisfy the cravings of a rather robust nature, she takes in washing—or in other words Geraldine is a washer-woman. Yesterday she stretched a line across an open lot owned by Mr. Elliott, and hung some of the fruits of her labor on it. Before they were dry, Mrs. Elliott wanted to occupy the lot for the same purpose, and feeling inclined an owners right to remove all obstructions from her property, she cut the line down, and Mrs. Martin's washing fell to the ground. On being apprised of the occurrence, Geraldine repaired to the yard and without wanting to gather the pieces from the ground, she seized a hatchet and cut Mrs. Elliott's line, and following up the rule of gravitation and attraction, the washing of the washer-woman mingled with the dust. After indulging in some little sarcasms not very pleasing to the polite ear, Geraldine fitted a stick and struck Mrs. Elliott over the head, creating a lump which, the professor of Phrenology would find rather hard to classify. The upshot of the whole affair was Geraldine and Mrs. Elliott, for assault and battery. She was taken before Justice Barker, where after entering bail for a hearing, she instituted proceedings against Mrs. Elliott, for malicious mischief. The latter also gave bail for a hearing.

Highway Robbery.

Owen Owens is, as his name would indicate, a Welshman. He is also a sailor. On Tuesday, after a long voyage, he arrived in Philadelphia, on the good ship Savanah. Having saved all of his wages, he determined to explore the interior and ascertain for himself the character of the natives. The same evening, he left the City of Brotherly Love, and arrived in the city of Smoke on Wednesday afternoon, with two hundred and fifty dollars in Uncle sam's bank notes. Not knowing the ropes, he fell among thieves, and was induced to visit a house of ill fame, where a party of ten took him in charge, with the ostensible purpose of procuring him a lodging, but instead of doing so he alleges that, those parties at 9 o'clock, while "on one of the rounds in town," they knocked him down and robbed him. He is therefore penniless. It is very hard, but it is the same old story. We do not think he will ever see his money again.

Runaway—Man Injured.—A horse attached to a light spring wagon took fright yesterday afternoon on Pennsylvania avenue, near Sandusky street. The driver, Mr. William Bleddale, in attempting to spring from the wagon at the corner of Magee street, fell heavily on the pavement, his head striking against the curb stone, inflicting a wound of some two inches in extent. He was insensible for a time but recovered sufficiently to be able to walk home. The runaway was captured at the corner of Washington street. Neither the horse or vehicle were in any way damaged.

Larceny of Groceries.—Mary was before Justice Lipp, of Birmingham yesterday on a charge of larceny preferred against her by Adam Brubaker. The prosecutor accuses Mary of purloining a quantity of groceries from the cellar attached to his dwelling on Joseph street, in the above borough. Goods resembling those owned by the prosecutor were found in Mary's possession, but as he refused to swear positively that those found were his, Mary was discharged.

Revenue Stamps.—The following note from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to Messrs. Hartman & Lare in answer to a question asked by them, will explain itself:

Gentlemen.—In reply to your letter of the 9th inst.,—Inland Domestic bills of lading and receipts for the delivery of property do not require a stamp under the new Revenue Law.

THOMAS HARLAN,
Acting Commissioner.

Fatal Accidents.—Agatha Saidler and Hermann Lang were killed by lightning in Wheeling on the 12th. A Mr. Kellis Robinson and family were drowned in Wheeling creek on the same day by a sudden freshet in the creek, carrying away their house. The storm in which these casualties occurred is said to be the severest that ever visited that section of the county.

Guillotined.—The axe has again fallen, and another Postmaster has been removed to make way for "my policy." Mr. B. G. Isenworth, Postmaster of Lawrenceville, has been shorn of his official station, and Mr. William Smith has been appointed. The latter gentleman has not yet taken his place, but we understand will, as soon as his commission arrives.

The Big Bell.—The big bell, which was cast on Tuesday by A. Fulton & Son, for the Fire Alarm Telegraph Committee, was hoisted from its bed yesterday afternoon, and underwent a critical inspection. It is a most perfect success. It was cast at the Foundry of S. S. Fowler & Co, Special Caution.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has become so popular that various parties have put on articles calling them Mrs. Winslow's. Please take notice that the Mrs. Winslow of the Soothing Syrup is not connected with any other article.

Bounties and Increase of Pensions.—Mankrell & McComis, 89 Grant street, will attend to the collection of the $100 bounty and the increase of pensions under the recent acts of Congress.

LONDON MONEY AND LIVERPOOL COTTON MARKETS.

NEW YORK, August 16.—The following are associated press and morning paper's special telegrams over the Atlantic cable:

PARIS, Aug. 14.—Prince Napoleon Bonaparte has come from the city on a visit to Switzerland.

The Emperor Napoleon will go from the Tuilleries to the Camp at Chalons on Saturday.

The war against Bavaria may be renewed by Prussia after the expiration of the armistice on the 22d of this month, should no change take place in the aspect now existing in the meantime.

Herr Von Patow has been appointed Chief of Direction of Civil Affairs, on the part of Prussia, in the territory of the Duchy of Nassau, the city of Frankfort and Upper Hesso.
