THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

We publish this morning an article from the New York Tribune on the subject of the National Council of the Roman Catholic Church, which will be read with interest by both Protestants and Catholics.

Important results to our country are likely to flow from the deliberations of this council, and they will be of great importance affecting the religion, the moral and political of our country. That the subject of this council is of such importance is shown by the fact that it has most conscientiously organized committees in the United States to be held up to the eyes of the world.

And there is a necessity for this, for the power that the Pope himself has over his flock is a power that is being gradually weakened, and it is being replaced by the power of the State. It is a power that is being gradually weakened, and it is being replaced by the power of the State.

But should the Pope ever make the mistake of using his power in a way that would be to the disadvantage of the country, he would be acting in a way that would be to the disadvantage of the country.

The head of the Catholic Church in the United States, the Pope, is being gradually weakened, and it is being replaced by the power of the State.

But should the Pope ever make the mistake of using his power in a way that would be to the disadvantage of the country, he would be acting in a way that would be to the disadvantage of the country.
