The Pittsburgh Gazette

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1866.

THE NOVEMBER ELECTION.

In several of the Northern States elections for local officers and members of Congress will be held to day. Let us show which these States are, with the political complexions of their respective delegations in the present House:

	Rep.	Dem.
Illinois	11	3
Kansas	1	0
Massachusetts	10	0
Michigan	6	0
Minnesota	2	0
Nevada	1	0
New Jersey	3	3
New York	20	11
Wisconsin	5	1
	55	18

It will be seen that in five of these States the delegations are unanimously Republican. Hence, there is no room for improvement in them except by increasing majorities in the different districts. In the other four States the Republicans did so well two years ago, considering the odds against them in particular localities, that it borders on requiring the impossible, to demand that they shall do better now. And yet we are not without hope that better will be done. There are chances for gaining one in Illinois, two in New Jersey, two in New York, and one in Wisconsin. At the last Congressional election we gained two in the city of New York by divisions among the Democrats. Similar alienations exist now in the same districts, but whether sufficient to defeat the Democratic candidates can best be determined by counting the votes. Cordially, by means of natural rations, both the absolute and relative number of Democrats have increased.

If to-day the Republicans carry fifty-eight districts in these nine States there will be abundant reasons for congratulations. If a gain shall be made of few or many Representatives, the rejoicing will be in excess.

Elections will, also, be held to-day in some of the Southern States. The statement of them is as follows:

	Rep.	Dem.
Delaware	0	1
Louisiana	0	1
Maryland	2	4
Missouri	5	1
	7	7

Louisiana has not been restored and her five members have not been admitted to seats. The other three States never having passed ordinances of secession have been and are regularly represented. We should be glad to nominate, by accepting eleven Union Representatives from them against four Democrats.

In Missouri and Maryland, by provisions of the respective State Constitutions, adopted during the war, citizens who entered the rebel military service are disfranchised. In both there is much excitement over the existence of this disability. In Maryland President Johnson and Gov. SWANN have been resolved, by the adoption of most extraordinary measures, practically to break down the legal barrier and let the rebel soldiers vote. Their conduct in this regard, is just as revolutionary as it would be in Louisiana for Republican leaders to break through the Constitutional prohibition of negro suffrage, and let the blacks vote. In Missouri, it is notorious that both political parties have been armed and organized militarily for months past, and that there has been imminent danger of bloody collision between them. This has been averted, first by the fact that the Unionists are the strongest, and, second, by the avowal of Gen. SHERMAN that in case of trouble he would stand by the existing State government. In Delaware the Republicans have a vigorous canvass, but against odds. If they succeed, it will be a grateful surprise. So far as relates to Louisiana the New Orleans massacre settled the contest beforehand in favor of the Democrats.

In Colorado the election will be held one week from to-day. The sitting member is a Republican, as the new one will doubtless be.

In South Carolina the election is on the fourth Monday of the present month.

Of this, however, we may be sure, that whatever unexpected reverses or successes may happen on so broad a field, likable in different parts to manly partisan indulgence, the general result will not only be favorable, but will be so grand as to settle the controversy respecting the determination of the loyal people of the country to stand by Congress, and make all their servants, high and low, conform to their behests.

REVIVAL OF THE REBELLION.

It seldom happens that bad men, designing to accomplish mischievous projects, in the sight of the sun, avow the motives by which they are actuated. Commonly they lay claim to zeal for the vindication of some right denied—the redressing of some wrong endured. These professions deceive themselves oftener than they mislead others. Through all the disguises of words the real intention is apparent.

In Maryland President Johnson and Governor SWANN are engaged in a scheme which every loyal man in the nation condemns. This does not prevent them from indulging in high sounding protestations for the vindication of legal order and the due observance of the laws. But, what are they really after? The Constitution of Maryland denies the right of voting to men who have borne arms against the government of the United States. The validity of the Amendment embodying this provision has been called in question before the Supreme Court of the State, and upon full hearing has been affirmed. Special reasons justify such a prohibition in Maryland. That State did not secede. Citizens there who helped the rebellion did not "roll by their State" in doing so, but left it—became runaways and fugitives. Moreover, the doctrine which the President and his supporters pretend to hold of inalienable value—that each State has indisputable authority to regulate the whole question of suffrage for itself—is just as sacred in Maryland as in South Carolina. The forcible abrogation of this doctrine in Maryland, by the general government, in favor of rebel soldiers, in Maryland, might in the course of events, furnish a precedent for the suppression of it in South Carolina in behalf of black Unionists. The short-sightedness which does not see this is not peculiar. It is one of the ordinary infirmities of selfish and dangerous men. Neither of these considerations have weight with the President or Governor. They mean the rebel shall vote, because their voting would be in their present interest. Under pretense of magnanimity and a desire to establish peace on an enduring basis, they seek to restore the rebels to political power, even at the imminent hazard of reopening the rebellion itself.

Hence it is that every man in Maryland who was loyal during the war, and has not since its close been purchased by what Secretary RANDALL calls the President's "bread and butter," is opposed to the removal of the Police Commissioners, while every copperhead, every rebel spy, and every rebel soldier is heartily for the measure.

Judge BOND, by his intrepidity, has added to the many and weighty services for which the loyal men of Maryland and of the nation were indebted to him. Fit companion, in all moral qualities, for the great and lamented WINTER DAVIS, he bears his own mantle and that of his deceased friend. Once, in our hearing, a mutual acquaintance complimented him on "furnishing the brains for the republican movement in Maryland." With admirable modesty he quickly replied—"No; WINTER DAVIS furnishes the brains." But if Judge BOND has not so grand mental endowments as his departed friend, he has great intellectual powers, fortified by an uprightness, proof against all sinister appeals, and moral and physical courage that nothing can damp it.

If the President imagines that the men who saved the nation during the war are not terribly in earnest now, he miserably deceives himself. While they do not mean to be the aggressors they are fully prepared for any event. Deploring the betrayal they have experienced at his hands, they are not cast down, and do not mean to surrender the government, which has cost such sacrifices of blood and treasure, into the hands of its enemies. What they have done once, if need be, they can and will do again.

PACIFIC RAILROAD EXCURSION.

ST. JOSEPH'S, MO., Nov. 1, 1866.

We have reached the bank of the Missouri at this city, after one of the most pleasant and interesting day's travel we have yet had. This morning at seven we crossed the Mississippi at Quincy, with our car attached to the morning train of the Quincy and Palmyra road, ran to Palmyra, only fifteen miles, where we made a connection with the morning train of the Hannibal and St. Joseph road, and thus ran through from the Mississippi to the Missouri by daylight.

The distance from Quincy to this city is two hundred and eight miles, through a very remarkable country. For the first sixty or sixty miles, after reaching the high ground on the six or seven miles this side of the Mississippi, the road runs over an almost unbroken level prairie. There is one stretch of seventeen miles perfectly straight road. Turning off the bottom to the right as it is at sea, and as the car owled along I observed trees gradually sinking out of sight, just as a distant vessel sinks below the horizon on the ocean. It is a sight at once sublime and beautiful.

The soil of this vast plain is very rich, like the prairie's of Illinois, and Iowa, seems to say that the work of improvement was going on briskley, and with all the marks of good taste which distinguishes the ubiquitious Yankee.

Past this loved prairie, the road, for a distance of sixty or seventy miles traverses a gently undulating surface of valuable features—some timbered land, some small prairies, some tracts of what in Pennsylvania we would call "barrens"—but all good soil, as the good crops attested where it was under cultivation. Then we entered upon an extensive tract of undulating prairie, which continued for the most part until we reached this city.

At Palmyra we were joined by several gentlemen, among whom was Captain C. W. MEAD, General Superintendent of this road. Under the efficient management of this gentleman the road is being put in admirable repair, and building, also business. He came through with us, and will accompany us to-morrow morning to Leavenworth. Our party is much indebted to him for many acts of courtesy and attention. When thoroughly balasted, as it soon will be, this road, owing to the extremely favorable ground over which it runs, will be one of the finest in the country. It is the intention of the company to build a bridge over the Mississippi at Quincy, for which Congress has already granted the privilege, under proper restrictions. This will connect it with the entire system of roads east of that river. Another bridge over the Missouri, at Kansas City, will put it in direct running connection with the Union Pacific road, to which we are going, and give the latter road another outlet to the section of inestimable value. At a point some thirty miles east of this city the branch to Kansas City leaves this road, the construction of which is far advanced. It runs through one of the richest sections of Missouri.

To-morrow morning very early, we shall run down the east bank of the river 37 miles by rail to Weston. There we transport our car by boat some six miles down to Leavenworth, where we shall stop some time—probably the balance of the day. Thence we go by rail to Lawrence, where we reach the main line of the Union Pacific road, Eastern Division, and thence to Fort Riley, the ultimate destination for our car. How much further we may go will depend upon the wind and the weather. To-day it has been delightful, only a little too warm. As we came along we saw several prairie fires, and one pretty extensive one. I do not wish to be understood as saying that it was these fires that made the weather so warm.

To show how far it is at present possible to travel in a single car, I make the following tabular statement of the distances and will have run when we reach Fort Riley:

	Miles.
From Philadelphia to Pittsburg,	355
From Pittsburg to Chicago,	468
From Chicago to Quincy,	274
From Quincy to St. Joseph,	208
From St. Joseph to Weston,	37
From Weston to Leavenworth, (about)	30
From Leavenworth to Lawrence,	40
From Lawrence to Fort Riley,	107
Total,	1,519

Our party, including this humble individual, are all very well, and have accompanied by everyday. Nothing can exceed the kindness of the people here except the cordial good fellowship which unites our party one to another.

I will write again from Leavenworth or Lawrence, reserving all my general reflections for the summing up of the whole.

Miserable End of a Miserly Baroness.

The Paris papers report that the community police of the quarter of the Place Vendôme, accompanied by a doctor, recently visited the apartment of a baroness, in order to certify at the request of the inmates of the house, the death of the lady, who was seventy-five years of age. The appearance of the apartment indicated extraordinary neglect. There was scarcely any furniture, the dust of years obscured the window panes, and the paper of the walls was spotted and rotten. The place appeared to be uninhabited from time immemorial, and yet the baroness had lived there for twenty-five years, paying an annual rent of 1,500f. In the bedroom, stretched upon a truckle bed, and partly covered with filthy rags, by the body of the baroness. An examination showed that death arose from weakness caused by want of food. It further appeared that she had starved herself wilfully, and indeed in point of avarice the Baroness would have borne away the palm from Hargrave or Gobseck. N withstanding her considerable fortune, estimated at £30,000 a year, she always went clothed like a beggar, and often collected charity in the street. She lived on crusts of bread, the refuse of cabbages and other vegetables, and such like garbage that she picked up from the dirt-heaps. A few days before her death she left down from weakness, while passing the door to the concierge, from want of food; but she refused to take some refreshment I offered to her, no doubt fearing that she would have to pay for it. She succeeded in gaining her apartment, and was not afterwards seen alive.

THE Indianapolis Herald recently says: A few days since a fashionably dressed young lady, with one of those teeny little guys upon her head, was slowly airing her charms along Washington street, when she passed a country horse munching "stalk oats"—the only cereal, to judge from his appearance, with which he had been acquainted for many a hungry month. A fanciful wreath of green leaves encircling the funny atom of a hat, attracted the attention of old rack o' bones, as I he nipped it. The hat was securely tied under the dimpled chin, and for a while the frightened lady, whose piercing shrieks alarmed the whole neighborhood, was in imminent danger of strangulation. Finally, however, something gave way, and the young lady fled, leaving the old horse quietly munching the wreaths and crown of her hat.

—C. A. Dana has made an offer to buy the New York News and convert it into a loyal paper.

GENERAL NEWS.

—In a speech delivered before seventy thousand persons at a reform meeting in Glasgow, on the 10th instant, John Bright told this story of election bribery in England:

"I was speaking to a member of the Government about the time when the resignation of the late Government was just about to be submitted to the Queen, and I was telling him that I thought the true policy—the constitutional policy of the Government—was to dissolve the Parliament. A portion of his answer was this: a member who sits on our side of the house had spoken to him about it; he said 'My election has already cost me £6,000,' and he added, 'I have, besides, £6,000 more to pay.' He said further, what was very reasonable, that this was a heavy burden that was grievous to be borne; that it put him to exceeding inconvenience, and that if the Parliament were dissolved he could not afford to fight his borough as the case might be, but would be obliged to retire from the field and leave the contest, if there should be a contest, to some one else. You will believe, then, that the Government were greatly pressed by that consideration, and this consideration, added it may be to others, induced them to resign office rather than to dissolve Parliament."

—The New Orleans Bee says: "Among those lost on the Evening Star was Mrs. King, who was bringing hither some twenty or thirty girls for her extensive bagnio on Basin street, in this city. It seems that she has just had a magnificent building, for the purpose of her business, erected on Basin street, at a cost of $18,000, and that she leaves two minor children as her heirs in New York. The question of conveying objections inside with women of ill fame is coming under the head of contracts, contra bonos mores, will therefore likely occur when the undertakers of the building seek to enforce their contract with the deceased upon her representatives. The succession has already been opened in the District Court.

—An exchange in political nomenclature, not a genuine trend in principle, writes thus to the Mobile Advertiser, who had written to him for his views on politics:

"Politics! Bless your soul, I have not read a newspaper since the 9th of April, 1865, and don't intend to do it. I have withdrawn myself entirely from the politics of this country, and don't trouble myself about such things. Farmed as hard to pay soon; and it's none of my funeral, I having died very dead and been buried a year and a half ago."

—A member of the Vancouver's Island legislature, McClure by name, spoke on a recent occasion for seventeen consecutive hours, and then only resigned his seat and retired along, I observed trees gradually sinking out of sight, just as a distant vessel sinks below the horizon on the ocean. It is a sight at once sublime and beautiful.

—A young man named Spencer, of this city, employed in the most fashionable clothing establishment in Cincinnati, received a check for $5,000 to collect for a friend. After getting the check cashed he visited a gambling den on Stark street, where he was deceived of nearly all the money he had with him. He has been arrested on a charge of larceny as bailee.—Chicago dispatch.

—Buckley Gov. Morton, of Indiana, Judge Jas. Hughes, former Democratic member of Congress, but during the last five years a member of the Union Party, and Hon. George N. Julian, are candidates for the United States Senatorship. The contest is said to be between the Radical and Conservative wings of the party.

—The Knoxville Commercial of the 16th says:

"There is in Knoxville, at this time, vagrants enough, both white and black, to fill the house has for months; the two must notorious characters of the town are at present stalking about the public street and disturbing the public peace. Will no one step forward and put a stop to it?"
