THE TREASURY REPORT.

Already, in a general way, we have expressed approbation of some of the main features of Mr. McCulloch's Report. It remains for us to specify on what points we dissent from his views, and to show for what reasons.

The Secretary imagines it possible for the Department over which he presides, if a certain measure of authority be given it by Congress, not only to regulate prices throughout the country, but so to adjust the volume of the currency to the wants of business, as to make the descent from the high elevation of irredeemable paper expansion to the solid bottom of specie payments without creating any uncomfortable friction in commercial affairs, and without anybody suffering serious loss. This is a manifest delusion. It is just as absurd to say that business can be transacted on a falling market without loss, no matter whether the period of declension is limited to six months or extended over six years, as it would be to say that commercial operations could be conducted, for a like period, on a rising market without any profit being made. A given descent must be accomplished, and in achieving it, loss must necessarily be incurred. In some lines of trade losses have been pretty steadily incurred for a year or more, and bottom does not yet seem to be reached. Two years more of like declension, will not be borne easily. Not a few will necessarily fall out by the way, as sick and dying do from the march of an army. If the loss could be definitely ascertained and divided, so that each should take his share, and no more, a prompt submission to the loss would, by long odds, be the best course. Some would, indeed, sink under the load; but as many may fall on any other plan of adjustment; but then, years would be gained for enterprise on a solid basis, which is an important factor in calculations of this sort.

The Secretary must certainly see that the cancellation of some millions of greenbacks every week or month, has a palpable connection with the fall in prices, and with the general uncertainty that pervades business circles. Yet he evidently thinks he can not only go on with this cancellation, but can at the same time diminish the stringency of taxation, without either shaking commercial confidence or incurring the risk of failure in meeting the obligations of the Treasury. Business men cannot be gulled after this fashion. Specie payments cannot be reached so as to be maintained without large abatements in the aggregate of paper money in use. This contraction will shrink values, and men who have recently started in business on limited means; men who have been in business for years, and made money rapidly as the baloon went up, but thought the period of inflation would last forever, or at least their time out, and hence went on branching in one direction and another; and, generally, men who have extended their credit beyond a limited degree, are in serious peril, whatever the Secretary may think.

Then there is the recommendation that the National Banks shall be compelled to redeem their circulating notes at one or more commercial centers. This proposition is sustained by the strongest possible considerations of justice and utility. But what would be the practical effect of it? First, it would compel each bank to hoard greenbacks as a reserve wherewith to redeem circulation, and, second, it would lessen the amount of bank notes in actual use. Bank notes, instead of being paid out, as now, in all the large cities, would be laid aside, and regularly sent home. A distinction would at once be established between greenbacks and bank notes, the latter practically sinking to a discount, however slight it might be. Hence, it is not easy to foresee all the consequences that might flow from this measure. It would certainly tend towards specie payments, but it might subject the present national bank system to a test under which it would give way.

But the Secretary extends his views still farther, and thinks it possible for him virtually to regulate the prices of all commodities, if Congress will only consent to arm him with the discretionary powers he deems indispensable. It is possible the Secretary really entertains these views, not only of the true province of the Treasury Department, but of his special fitness for directing its forces to the most recondite ends. But it is probable Congress will arrive at a different judgment on both these heads. It will be likely to adhere to approved ideas of statesmanship, that the cardinal charge of the Treasury is to collect and disburse what moneys the government may require; its subordinate duty to benefit domestic productive industry all it reasonably can while pursuing the main end, and embarrassing it as little as possible, but over and above this leaving all citizens to manage their own affairs as best they may.

On another point we judge Mr. McCulloch is trenching upon delicate ground. He proposes to abate the excise duties so as greatly to diminish revenue, and at the same time lessen the impost duties so as to leave foreign commerce on as eligible a basis as it now holds. But he manifestly takes for granted that domestic production will range as high, relatively to population, for years to come, as it has for three or four years past. Calculations grounded on this assumption may prove a snare. Production may fall off, and if it shall remain as full as now net incomes may abate. The anthracite coal trade is certainly running at a heavy loss. The tanners are in a bad way. The woolen manufacturers are actually suspending. It looks as if in these, and in some other branches of industry, the Government would suffer at least a temporary abridgement of income. Can the Secretary tell over how many other pursuits the same general causes may throw a blight? In his incapacity to foretell the future he ought to discover an argument against venturing too large a reduction. A surplus is more easily managed than a deficit. A few millions over is better than many millions short. If there is any department of human labor in which the wisdom of the wise is often confounded than another, it is this very matter of finance. The moment confidence is unhinged, no matter how flattering the promises of oracles, a wasting tempest sweeps over the land, and ceases not until its fury is absolutely exhausted.

INAUGURATION OF GOV. GEARY.

It is proposed that the Boys in Blue, and the members of any other military organizations existing in the State, shall participate in the ceremonies attending the inauguration of Gen. JOHN W. GEARY as Governor of the Commonwealth. The suggestion is a good one, and we hope will meet with general approbation. The election of General GEARY was not only an acknowledgement and reward of his own personal services and fitness, but was a distinct and graceful recognition of the merits of the military class, to which he belongs.

THERE is no need for Congress to reopen its quarrel with the President; but there is pressing need it should do its whole duty in a manner at once dignified and resolute. If the President shall elect to renew the old controversy, the responsibility will be on him. If he shall decide to act in unison with Congress, so much the better for the country.

"AGNER," in the Valley Spirit, coastrues the re-election of Hon. GEO. V. LAWRENCE to Congress, in view of his votes, as an endorsement of radicalism? Well, "AGNER, since Mr. LAWRENCE's votes uniformly give you satisfaction, why intimate displeasure? No better test can be invented by which to measure a representative.

MR. THOMAS WILLIAMS's speech, delivered in the House of Representatives on the 4th inst., upon removals from office, attracted much attention during its delivery, and is eliciting the warmest commendations of the press, as a powerful and exhaustive exposition of the law upon that subject.

WE are indebted to General Meigs for a pamphlet containing names of soldiers who died in defense of the American Union, interred in Arkansas, California, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota and Nebraska, and the Territories of Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, New Mexico and Washington.

THE action of the Republican Congressional caucus, and concurence therein of members who were intensely conservative at the last session, show that the northerly winds which prevailed in October and November had a bracing effect on shattered political constitutions.

GEN. J. B. KIDDOO has been appointed Lieutenant Colonel in the 43d regiment, regular infantry. This appointment will be highly gratifying to his numerous friends in this vicinity, and is a just tribute to sterling merit and valuable services.

GEN. SEDGWICK not only seems to have understood what the design of the President was in respect to Mexico, but to have been actuated by a flaming zeal to compass it. Gen. Sheridan understood better his duty to the nation.

MR. RAYMOND, in the House, following the example of Mr. DIXON, in the Senate, has professed repentance, and proposed to walk with the republicans henceforward. While he so walks it will do to keep a sharp eye on him.

HON. JACOB FRY, formerly Auditor General of Pennsylvania, died at his residence in Trappe, Montgomery county, on the 28th ult., aged 64 years.

TO THE DEBILITATED AND

THE DECREPID.—For general debility and exhaustion of the powers of nature, whether occasioned by sickness, fast living, constitutional decay, old age, or any other physical or mental cause, the one thing needful and indispensable is HOSTATTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS. When the life of man seems to be absolutely dying out in the system, and the mind, sympathizing with the body, is reduced almost to a state of inanity, this fine restorative comes in time to lift the sufferer out of the slough of despond, and replenish and invigorate both the frame and the intellect. An old farmer in the Valley of the Monongahela writes thus to Dr. HOSTETTER: "I can compare the operation of your Bitters upon me to nothing but the effect of a rain after a long dry spell in the fall of the year. The rain falling on the parched earth is grateful and cooling, and your wholesome medicine seems to have called forth a new crop of life and spirits in me." And this is truly the effect of this grateful and powerful preparation. Ladies of weak constitution, or whose strength has been impaired by sickness or age, find it a most efficacious, and delightful Tonic, and it is administered with great success in marasmus or wasting of the flesh to young children. In fact, it is a much easier and surer remedial for the nursery than anything advertised especially for that purpose.
