RELATION OF PENNSYLVANIA TO THE WEST

We have endeavored to keep our readers well posted in regard to the progress of the Union Pacific Railroad...

The most northern of these rival lines is the Union Pacific Railway, which begins at Omaha in the west State of Nebraska...

The Union Pacific Railway, Division, begins at the mouth of the Kansas river, at the twin cities of Kansas City and Wyandotte.

The course of both the Plate and the Kansas rivers, from the mouth of the Missouri across "the Plains" is very nearly from west to east.

From Kansas City to Philadelphia the shore distances are respectively 2,000 miles, to St. Louis, 1,200 miles, and to Chicago, 1,000 miles.

We thus see that the distance between Kansas City and New York is less than that between St. Louis and New York...

It is well for the whole country that these two competing lines should be competitors, for the benefit of the West.

How, as Pennsylvanians, are we interested in this contest? This is the question we wish to discuss this morning.

The Union Pacific Railway of the West is the natural one for Pennsylvania, for Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and St. Louis...

Other men than President Johnson, and cooler than he, by large odds, have been the champions of the Union Pacific.
