On the contrary, there is much to be said in their favor, when or ganized on a proper lasis and conducted in a reasonable spirit. Every workman has a right to fix the price at which he will sell his industry, and to remain idle will sell his industry, and to compensation. But when they attempt, by any means whatsoever, to prevent other men from selling their labor, when, where, and at what rates they see fit, they become not simply trespassers upon the rights of those particular men, but enemies to society. Employers, either separately or in concert, have just the same right to determine what they will pay, as workmen have to determine what they will receive. If employers do not see fit to pay the rate demanded, that is their privilege. If workmen do not see proper to toil for the pay offered, they are only answerable to themselves for refusing. In this result the rights of employers and workmen are exactly equal. There is, and can be, no oppression on either side. Labor is like any other commodity in the market, and, in the long run, the price of it, will be setted by supply and demand just as the price of coal, iron or flour is settled. If there is too much labor of any sort on the market, or, which is the same thing, too much of a particular product, the price of it, will recede, just as inevitably as streams subside after spring rains. standing still is equivalent to a reduction of wages. A man who works for three dollars a day, and has steady employment the year round, carns precisely as much as the man who has four dollars a day, and has steady employment the year round, carns precisely as much as the man who has four dollars a day, dut is unemployed a fourth part of the time. Besides, he spends less unaccessarily. Being engaged, he does not incur those, incidental expenses which seem unavoidable when one has nothing to do.

Take an illustration of this matter on a large scale. On the 12th of last Janu. By a. strike occurred in this city and vicinity. At least four thousand skilled workmen and six thousand laborers were thereby thrown out of employment. It is a low estimate to put the average wages of these ten thousand men at three dollars a day when engaged. This amounts to thirty thousand dollars every twenty-four hours. The 'strike has already lasted seventy-four days, without with the same of the loss. If an advance of wages should result from the strike, and it should be immediately determinable how long the advance would last, then the gain could readily be computed. But no such alvance has been yielded, nor is it likely to be.

Another view romains to be taken. The difference between the owners and workmen is two niaths; that is, the puddlers ask nine dollars a ton, whillow the proprietors offer seven dollars. Suppose the larger sum should be secured and remain the year outs. Three months have been lost in the strike. On this basis one-fourth would be wasted to gain two-inithis. The dead loss is manifest to all who have even a superficial knowledge of numerical proportion. But it must be added, that by far the larger part of
