THE AMERICAN CONFLICT.

When Mr. HORACE GREELEY announced his intention to write a History of the Great Rebellion, a general apprehension prevailed, which was shared by most of his admirers, that he would prove inadequate to the task. Not that he was supposed to be deficient in natural endowments for so high a purpose; but it was conjectured that his professional discipline, and his active participation in political movements in this country, for the long period of thirty years, had measurably, at least, unfitted him for the function of a historian. They who succeed as newspaper writers, and especially those who rise to real eminence in that species of composition, attain a condensed and sententious style. They use only the main points of an argument, and these are compressed into the fewest possible words. Details, collaterals, elaborations and embellishments, they mostly exclude, because there is not room for them. Long habit, in these respects, induces a sort of second nature which is not easily overcome. Few minds are so versatile and flexile as to work effectually by two or more distinct methods. The historian, on the other hand, produces many of his highest special effects, and contributes to the general beauty and value of his performances, by an entirely different manipulation of his theme. Minuteness, elaboration, the drawing of all hints, suggestions, surmises, facts, and inferences, to one focus, serves to throw the march of affairs into stronger perspective, to disclose as no other method can the motives by which potential actors were influenced, and to reveal the relation to each other of causes and events which would otherwise seem to be disconnected or incongruous. Moreover, the historian has space for ornamentation. He is not restricted to the necessity of presenting his thoughts in skeleton, but can round them out into all the fullness of strength and beauty, appealing for cognition not alone to common sense or reason, but to all those sensuous faculties which commonly exert a greater sway than the understanding.

Mr. GREELEY has happily disappointed all the forebodings of failure that were felt. If he has not achieved so decided a success as to take place in the front rank of historical writers, he has produced, almost immeasurably, the best book on the war, and the causes which led to it, which has yet issued from the press. Indeed, it seems quite improbable that his work will be superseded for half a century; and the final historian of the Great War, when he shall appear, will find therein a profounder appreciation of underlying principles, a deeper philosophy of cause and effect, a truer delineation of the chief actors, and a wiser forecasting of results, than in all the books that have so far appeared.

What is more surprising still is the admirable balance he maintains in dealing with men against whom he has stood in an attitude of sharp antagonism through all his public career. He comprehends their position and estimates dispassionately the motives by which they were impelled.

In speaking thus strongly we do not wish to be understood as intimating that Mr. GREELEY's work, either in conception or execution, is unblemished. Perfection is not the state of man in general, and any man in particular. Both man and his works are liable to criticism. Defects are discernable in the most excellent. But the wonder is that under the circumstances of nearness to the events, of sharing earnestly therein, and of existing personal exasperations, he has contrived to narrate events so faithfully, and discriminate with so large a measure of impartiality.

The first volume is devoted to a presentation of that long train of causes, mainly palpable, but often recondite, which alienated the people of the South from those of the North, and at last led them to a desperate resort to arms as the only expedient that held out an assurance of separation. When this volume was issued some months ago, a large section of the people were inclined to deny the accuracy of his portraiture, or, at least, to charge him with an exaggeration, on certain points reaching to the region of caricature. Much of this censure is now abated and withdrawn. With the subsidence of the excitement of the struggle, southern men do not conceal that the discrepancy between social institutions in the North and South, was at the bottom of the estrangement. And this accords with universal experience, that the political institutions of a nation repose on one basis, and its social organization on another and different foundation. Attempts will be made by argument and persuasion, and, if need be, by fraud or force, to reconstruct both so as to render them congenial and harmonious.

The shadowing Mr. GREELEY has given the picture in this respect may be varied by masters who shall reproduce it in the future. A shade may be deepened here, or lightened there; but the outline he has drawn will remain essentially unchanged, and the general expression will not be greatly modified.

In the second volume Mr. GREELEY enters upon a field repugnant to his tastes, and for which preparatory studies had not particularly fitted him. He ventures within the confines of military operations, examines and criticizes the plans of commanders, pronouncing judgment on the details of execution, depicting battle-fields and their complicated operations, and summing up the conduct and result of campaigns. Complaint is made that he discloses learnings; that he distributes praise and blame. How else should history be written? What the student desires to know is not simply the end of a great contest, but when and how that end was helped or hindered. While Mr. GREELEY has been careful to let his conceptions of the merits or demerits of particular commanders appear, he has presented the facts so fully that every reader has the material out of which to form a judgment of his own.

In preparing these volumes Mr. GREELEY has rendered an important service, not only to his country, but to his historical investigation; and has given his name an honorable place in permanent literature.

EDWARD AVERY, who assisted in procuring an abortion upon a woman of St. Louis, has been convicted and sentenced to three years imprisonment in the Penitentiary. The punishment was much too light, for examples are especially needed in these peculiar times.

ST. LOUIS wants better drinking water. It is suggested that the supply be drawn from the little Meramec river.

A NUMBER of the prominent citizens of Chicago have memorialized the Board of Health, praying that rigid sanitary measures be at once adopted, in view of the approach of the cholera next summer. No movement towards reform has yet been made in this city. If the dread pestilence appears in this country during the present year, Pittsburgh cannot possibly escape a visitation. Her streets, alleys and by-ways are in a wretchedly filthy condition, much worse than at the corresponding season last year. Let all prepare for the scourge while yet it is time. Sanitary reform should at once be made general and everybody should see to his premises, and do all in his power to aid the energetic Street Commissioner in cleansing the city. The danger is imminent, the work must go on.

WE have received the initial number of the Republican, a Radical journal published at New Orleans by Messrs. S. L. BROWN & Co. It bears the recommendation and endorsement of Generals BANKS and BUTLER and other Radical leaders of the North. It is a neatly printed folio journal of twenty-eight columns, much smaller than this paper, although commanding ten cents per copy, or sixteen dollars per annum. It is intensely Radical in tone, and will be devoted to the interests of the Union Republican party. We wish it all the success the enterprise should warrant.

THE CINCINNATIANS had a rare feast of diluted whisky last week. Over one thousand barrels of the beverage escaped at the burning of a distillery, into Deer creek, and the fluid was pumped up to the basin which supplies the city with water. Temperance folks were thus compelled to indulge in mixed drinks for once in their lives.

THE street cars will continue to run on Sundays in Baltimore. It is a narrow minded policy which forbids their running in any city, upon the Sabbath.

THE Odd Fellows of Michigan will celebrate the 46th anniversary of the introduction of the order into that State, at Detroit, on the 26th inst.

THE Congressional donation of land to the Indiana Agricultural College has been purchased by G. F. Lewis, of Detroit, for $207,843, cash.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL.

[Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.]
WASHINGTON, April 10, 1867.

A great deal of interest is manifested among the generous people of the North on the question of supplying the needy multitude in the rebel States with food. The joint resolution of Congress making an appropriation for this purpose was so long and warmly under discussion in the House, and so many and various were the amendments offered, that I observe the public are in doubt as to what shape the said resolution finally took. It may therefore be well to print a copy of it, and here it is:

[PUBLIC RESOLUTION—No. 28.]
A Resolution for the relief of the Destitute in the Southern and Southwestern States.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, That the Secretary of War be and hereby is empowered and directed to issue supplies of food sufficient to prevent starvation and extreme want to any and all classes of destitute or helpless persons of the people in those Southern and Southwestern States where a failure of the crops and other causes have occasioned widespread destitution; that the issues be made through the Freedmen's Bureau under such regulations as the Secretary shall prescribe. And to that end the Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed, through the Commissioner of the Freedmen's Bureau, to apply so much as he may deem necessary for the purposes aforesaid of the unexpended moneys heretofore appropriated to supply freedmen and refugees with provisions or rations. Provided, That the expenditure shall not extend beyond the present appropriations, already made for the Freedmen's Bureau.

Approved, March 30, 1867.

So that really no definite amount was set apart by Congress. General Howard has, however, on calculation with Mr. Stanton set aside "out of the moneys heretofore appropriated to supply freedmen and refugees with provisions," $500,000 to begin with and this will be made to go as far as it will to supply corn and meat—pork or bacon—to all classes at the South who are suffering.

This supply will be distributed through the agents of the despised "nigger" bureau, at the rate of one bushel of corn and eight pounds of meat per month to each adult, and one-half that amount for each child under fourteen years of age. This supply, eked out by hunting and fishing, or perchance by some regular work for wages—if the chivalry at the present stage of "chivalrousness" can see it in that light—will, it is thought, carry them through to the first of August, when fruits, berries, early vegetables and the like may be had for the gathering, or bought at small prices in the markets, at which point the present needy ones may take up the burden of life for themselves again.

The reports from South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama are really distressing. However wicked and lazy and thriftless the people there may have been, it is the duty of every Christian to give out of his abundance to save from distress for want of food. It appears there from statistics which may be considered reliable, that not less than fifty-three thousand people—principally in the three States above named, but many in Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, and Mississippi—are absolutely in danger of starvation. On the basis of distribution above named, these people will consume by the first of August about 155,000 bushels of corn and 6,200 pounds of pork, or its equivalent in bacon. The cost for purchase and distribution of this will reach $450,000. This is the lowest figure, i. e.: it is the smallest number of hungry we count upon. This will yield to adults one pound and five-sixths per day of uncooked corn and four-fifteenths (a little over a quarter of a pound,) pounds of pork or bacon, to sustain life. To one accustomed to the abundance which thrift and industry yields in Pennsylvania, this will seem indeed a narrow margin over and above the bare sustentation of life.

It will be perceived that the law authorizes such a distribution only as is "sufficient to prevent starvation or extreme want." Thus an opportunity is afforded to the benevolent to add such amounts of money or other articles as they may desire to give, which can be distributed through the New York Famine Relief Committee, I think, of which Rev. Edward Bright is corresponding secretary, at No. 29 Park Place. Just what shape private gifts should take is open for consideration to each. The point is that the government has undertaken "to prevent starvation," and over and above that these people must depend upon benevolence. Thus anything like luxuries, gifts for the sick, the delicate or disabled, clothing, etc., etc., must come from the abundance of the North. It seems well, however, to avoid giving indiscriminately to wandering agents, self-constituted committees of the South. The movements I have heard of there, have been constituted on the basis of aiding only the disloyal. There may be exceptions, and doubtless there are. I know that one aid society was started in North Carolina and a paper issued with a "Whereas, The people of the South are suffering for food on account of the wrongs and oppressions put upon them by the people of the North!" Now on such a paper your correspondent for one would be unwilling to write his name for a large amount! Then, in another case, money had been given to certain parties—church parties—in the South for destitution, and they refused to give a cent of it to a suffering widow with a large family, on the avowed ground that she ought to expect to suffer for she and her family had always stood up for the "Yanks," and in this way she had justly brought upon herself what she was enduring!

What, therefore, is to be avoided in giving is, that your money shall, while going to the "church parties" referred to—for they too are susceptible to starvation, if not to the chidings of common sense—also reach the lonely widow, whose husband died under the starry banner. RADICAL.

A Mystery Solved—A Supposed Murdered Woman Found.

The Richmond papers have for some weeks been speculating on the circumstances connected with the body of a murdered woman on the Dunker farm, some four or five miles below that city, on the 28th of February last. The Examiner of Wednesday last has a lengthy account, headed, "The Dunker Farm Murder—The Body of the Murdered Woman Identified—Probable Clue to the Murderer—The Mystery Solved." The mystery has, however, not been wholly solved, but the theory and statements of the Examiner's article have been solved in this city, and in a manner agreeable to parties who had lately been suspected of connection with the murder, and which show, also, that the victim is yet unknown. According to the Richmond account, it appears that about the 1st of January last, Miss Victoria Foster left her father's house, in Goochland county, to go to Richmond, whence she was to come to Baltimore, on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Calista Owens, and by some means was not heard from afterwards. On Tuesday a brother of the missing young lady arrived in Richmond, and on having described to him the clothing of the woman found murdered, and certain scars and marks on the body, at once concluded that it was the body of his sister. On going to the Richmond police headquarters, the young man thought he identified the gloves, shoes and other articles found on the murdered woman, as having belonged to his sister. This revelation led to the articles inserted in the Richmond papers, and the officials in that city became satisfied that Victoria Foster was the victim. A young man named Aurelius L. Brooks, who was last seen in company with Miss Foster, and who, a few days ago left Richmond, was at once suspected as the author of the tragedy. It was supposed that he had come to this city with an uncle, Mr. Lafayette Brooks, and telegrams were immediately sent here requesting their arrest. On Thursday morning the elder Mr. Brooks was arrested by officers Barnes and Roison, at the Baltimore and Ohio railroad depot, as he was alighting from the cars, and delivered over to detectives Smith, Peirson and West, who detained him during the day, in expectation of capturing the younger Brooks, who, they had reason to believe, was in the city. On Thursday night the officers repaired to the dwelling of Mrs. Owens where they found Mr. Aurelius C. Brooks, and arrested him, on the charge of having committed the homicide, but as they did so, Miss Victoria Foster, the supposed murdered lady, appeared from an adjoining room, and announced herself as being alive and well. Of course both gentlemen were at once released, and after due congratulations and explanations the parties separated in a good humor, the officers a little chagrined, no doubt, in being baffled in what they considered "a big thing."—Baltimore Sun.

DR. CHASSIER'S EMPRESS.

LA COMPOSITION IMPERATRICE, POUR LES CHEVEUX.

It has long been known that the hair, by mental exertion, by excitement, by disease, and in fact by age, loses its vitality. In the great perfect circulation, loses its vitality, turns gray and falls off. That eminent French chemist, Dr. CHASSIER, has provided a complete antidote, and one at the same time a beautiful dressing for the hair, durable and finely perfumed. It is an exquisite, far preferable to any toilet article; this is the finest article for the toilet that has ever been presented to the public.

IT IS NOT A DYE.

It will not soil the finest linen. It will not gum the hair. It is free from the disagreeable smell of sulphur. It relieves the scalp of dandruff or unpleasant irritation. Prevents the hair from falling out, or easily falling. Causes the new hair to grow. It will restore gray hair to its natural color, or the money will be refunded in every instance.

As this preparation is comparatively new in this country, the proprietors present the testimonials of well known persons as to its excellence. Directions in French and English. Sole agent for Pittsburgh,

MR. W. MILLER SAYS:

PITTSBURGH, September 4, 1866.

MESSRS. HOSTETTER & SMITH, Pittsburgh, Pa.—Gents: I think I am only doing the part of a good citizen when I testify to the great benefits received by me from the use of your Stomach Bitters during the last five years. Sojourning for a time in the oil regions, in 1861, I had a severe bilious attack, which, in connection with were bilious attack, which, in connection with dyspepsia, left me in a very weak condition. I was advised to try your Bitters, and having procured a bottle, found that they worked like a charm upon me, eight pounds having been added to my weight in the space of one week, and new life seemed to have been infused into my system, so much so that I have been induced to use them every summer since that time. As a tonic, I think they are invaluable.

This summer, having had a similar attack, (and as before, much reduced,) although under the treatment of an A. No. 1 physician, I was again obliged to have recourse to the old Bitters, and with the same good result, having gained six pounds within a few days. I purchased a half dozen bottles a few weeks since, and purpose to use them regularly as a tonic.

Wishing you every success, I remain,
Yours, gratefully,
WILLIAM MILLER.

PINUS ABIES, OR CANADA PINE.

There exudes from the inside bark of the White Pine, which grows abundantly in all the Eastern States and Canada, a honey-like, sweet substance, highly impregnated with that terebinthinate principle which has long been valued as a remedy, in various diseases of the human system, especially those of the mucuous tissues. Dr. G. W. Swett, of Boston, has compounded from this material a medicine called POLAND'S WHITE PINE COMPOUND; which has met with great favor in those maladies where the turpentines and balsams are supposed to be valuable.

For Gravelly Affections.
Diabetes in young or middle aged people.
Diabetes in old people.
Stoppage of the urine.
