of the field of the properties allowed by the first day of April, and as the first day of Apr saders."

Several points are here brought out in the first department of the garden, which deserve to be sharply discrimina-ted and considered, to wit:

That if the "late Confederate senti-Try and apple trees trained in every shape." ted and considered, to wit:

That if the "late Confederate sentiment," that is, the feeling in which the rebellion was conceived and prosecuted, has any friends in the Northern States, they are members of the "Democratic party was and is the party of treason. What it sought, and still seeks, is not to give the Southern States and people the full measure of their rights in the Union, and under the Constitution, but to enable them to defy the Government, break up the Union, and establish new forms, subversive of genuine liberty.

That if the Democratic party did not take its stand, on battle fields, by the side of the South—or, as one of its General states and party of the South—or, as one of its General states are stated in every shape of the ring and the states are stated in the proper season will doubtless be further adorned with rich tempting its side of the South—or, as one of its General states are stated in every shape of the ring and the proper season will doubtless be further adorned with rich tempting its consideration.

The UNITED STATES DISPLAY.

With indefatigable energy we travelage the proper season at a half hours about the season are all fours about the season are sent and the proper season will doubtless to side of the South—or, as one of its General season are season as a season and a season are season as a season are season as a season are season as a season

THAT APPEAL.

THAT APPEAL.

In desping the application of the State classified from the fact that the best of the wind in the state of the application of post of the demonstration that the state of th checks and balances, supposed it would arrive at. Indeed, there was no other rational conclusion admissible. To admit the Supreme Court could interpose by hijunction, or by any other process to prevent Congress from enacting a particular law, or to prevent the carrying of it into effect by the President after it was placed on the statute book, would be to confound all elementary distinctions. This power once admitted to belong to the Judiciary, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to limit its application. Consider this point. The Democrata, while the war raged, insisted there was no rightful authority in the government to coerce a State. Had a majority of the Judges been of that opinion, under the principle now contended for by Judge Stankers, they could-have placed an absolute injunction on the prosecution of the contest, and so have given the rebels an unimpeded field. This would be to concentrate most of the functions of government in the Judges, and would destroy the finarmony and order of the pollitical system.

The Conatitution makes the President amenable to Congress for the abuse of the powers entrusted to him, and provides the manner and form in which he shall be proceeded, against; but it ig gives the Supreme Court no control whatever over him.

The Gurant Exposition.

The Gurant Exposition of the contest of the built done in the full present of the functions of congress but we fear mas its representative here, and control with the decision now made is only per liminary. The main question will come up in the regular order of business ifflet case sind be betty on the calcedar. It is not probable it will. Long before the case on the hearth of the limitary Government Act will be lived to the calcedar. It is not probable it will. IC AND ALTERATIVE.

That if the Democratic party did not take its stand, on battle fields, by the side of the South—or, as one of its General phrased it, did not "inaugurate war in these Northern bills and valleys in aid of the rebellion"—it was not for want of will or inclination, but because it was restrained and cowed by the strength of the loyal sentment prevailing among the Northern people.

That the democratic party was pledged to resist the coercion of the revolted States, and would have made its pledge good, had not many of its prominent men, at the critical moment, taking their stand on the loyal side. The patriotism of the democratic loyalists, was their own that party was what prevented the party. Their separation from that party was what prevented the party from hoisting its true colors and making common cause with the Confederates.

That, as the democratic party failed to redeem its promises, not through want of disposition, but because such men as BUTLER, Looan, and Forney, bolted, and contributed to the formation of such and contributed to the formati
