CONSERVATISM.

The Conservatives of Tennessee recently assembled in State Convention at Nashville. Naturally enough, a majority of the delegates were rebels, whose disloyalty was so conspicuous as to disfranchise them under the laws. Of course, they were stoutly opposed to all vigorous or violent measures on the part of the national government and its supporters. If they had only been allowed, as they desired, a monopoly of harsh proceedings; if they had been permitted to make war on the public authorities, without having war made on them; if they had been suffered to spurn and repudiate the Constitution, instead of being constrained to submit to its revision and enforcement; if they had been tolerated in the wildest views and the most lawless conduct, to the extent of setting up a hopeless and perpetual despotism over millions of the native inhabitants of the country; their ideas of conservatism would have been fulfilled. For, the fact stands out in the history of this country, as of all others, that a Conservative is necessarily a Fanatic, not of the present, nor of the future, but of the past. Go back through the ages, and everywhere you find him at the congenial employment of building bastiles, working thumb screws, hot pinchers and racks, and lighting the fires of autodafees. At frequent intervals, he plies the trade of framing penal statutes designed to furnish him with victims; to stop the development of new ideas in science, morals and religion; and to prevent darkness from being introduced upon by light. PAUL, before he was inoculated with the "pestilent heresy," was one of such; but he was quite another man after he became a radical. Then he was vitalized with human sympathies, and gave the world an impulse forward which it feels and responds to even now.

Mr. ELIJAH WALKER, of Harding county, was made President of this State Convention. He was vouched for by the gentleman who nominated him as "loyal" all through the great struggle. But his account of himself did not sustain this encomium. He made it a matter of congratulation that he had never before taken any part in political affairs. He was in Tennessee during all the agitations that preceded and attended the rebellion. He witnessed the attempt to take that State out of the Union; but his patriotism was of so placid a kind as not to be excited to resistance. He saw deadly blows aimed at that vitals of the government, and made no efforts to ward them off. He saw treason rearing heads on every side and hissing its hate at the Union, and conspiring its overthrow; but he was too eminently conservative to meddle with politics. He stood by, at best an unconcerned spectator, while great crimes against law and order were perpetuated; and was too dignified or too consenting to interpose to prevent the continuance of the wrong. Only when the government gets the upper hands of the criminals, and proposes to subject some of them to moderate and compassionate discipline, does he get excited, and allow his feelings to betray which side he was on all the while. He was not afraid DAVIS, LEE and JOHNSON would do violence to the national constitution or its defenders, but his fears are wonderful that the republican majority in Congress will touch that great instrument irreverently, with at least the tips of their fingers. This is genuine conservatism; only of a mild type.

Mr. DORSEY B. THOMAS, of Maury county, was a more advanced specimen. He did not conceal that he was a rebel; and maintained that people who believed in secession had a right to favor it. He forgot that by parity of reasoning they who believe in coercion have a right to favor it, especially when the Constitution and laws are clearly on their side; and that having effectually coerced the rebels they have acquired all the rights of conquerors in addition to what they had before. When men of sense appeal to the sword, invoking the God of Battles to decide, they comprehend that they have taken their case out of the Judicial Department, and that if they fail it is unmanly to whine and seek to avoid the consequences of the arbitrament they challenged.

Following the latest Conservative fashion this Convention was supplied with a negro orator. He was fitly chosen in point of intellectual qualifications, for he is represented as both illiterate and stupid. On the patriotic side an outfit for the service demanded of him was equally appropriate; for he had deserted from the Union army in the face of the enemy and had received the most degrading punishment. It is farther known that he had served three years in one of the Pennsylvania penitentiaries. Whether he obtained that experience in consequence of conservative indulgence, or an unaccountable perversion of radicalism, no data is furnished for determining.

The whole drift of the speeches was in denunciation of the government, first for having resisted the rebels, and afterwards, for not taking them to its arms as entitled to the highest confidence and promotion.

Now, it must be admitted the Conservatives are in an unpleasant situation. They indulged high expectations of immense and substantial achievements, in founding a government of their own, that should not simply subordinate radicalism, but exclude it. Under this government there was to be no new and disturbing ideas; no discussion and revision of old habits; no reaching forward to a better condition of society. They failed miserably, and now claim the prerogative, as sufferers, to chafe and grumble. If they would only stop there, a decided disposition would be disclosed to indulge the dolor. Only when in defeat they assume the port of conquerors, and presume to dictate what shall and what shall not be done; do their lamentations and captiousness become seriously offensive.

THE Post informs the public that the GAZETTE charged for advertising the Southern Relief Movement in this city. In reply we have to state that the advertisements in question were sent to this office from the Post, with instructions to charge that establishment.

If the Post had evinced half the zeal to put down the rebellion it has displayed to relieve Southern destitution, there would be less suffering in that section demanding aid. Its present zeal leads to the inference that it seeks rather to subserve some business or political end of its own than to give vent to its superabounding benevolence.

It seems probable that Judge SHANNODE, of Philadelphia, will be the Democratic candidate for Supreme Judge.

REPUBLICAN PARTY AT THE SOUTH.

It will be remembered that soon after Mr. H. G. RAYMOND, Chairman of the National Republican Committee, joined President JOHNSON in his scheme to break up that organization, the Republican members of Congress designated a new National Committee. This latter body has entered in earnest upon the work of organizing the Republican party throughout the Southern States. It does not confine its efforts to correspondence with here and there an individual, and the circulation of documents among such as are supposed to be favorable to the enterprise, but is giving much attention to organizing numerous subordinate agencies, to providing for public meetings and to sending representative northern men to address the people.

Mr. H. W. WILSON went South some days ago, under the auspices of this Committee, and was followed by Mr. WM. D. KELLEY and Mr. J. W. NYE. While neither of these gentlemen possess talents of the highest order, they are justly entitled to rank among the truly representative men of the republican persuasion, for they have not only been in the advanced rank, but have maintained a rare steadiness and consistency. WILSON and KELLEY are widely reputed throughout the South. NYE, though less known, is decidedly superior to either of them, in tact, versality and brilliance, as a rostrum speaker.

So far, we do not think Mr. WILSON'S Southern speeches have been successful. Whether he was piqued by the abstention of the leading whites from meetings he was announced to attend, or unconsciously allowed somewhat of the bitterness of old controversies to re-appear, it is not safe to decide; but an under-tone of superiority was allowed to run through his discourses which good taste should have led him to suppress. He represents the victorious party in the great controversy, which has signalized its magnanimity beyond all parallel in history, whatever its opponents may say to the contrary. That party has imposed conditions, lenient in their nature, but which necessarily call those who are required to comply therewith, when they had hoped, through bad advice and deceitful promises, to have no exactions laid on them. As that party has been magnanimous, and means so to be to the end, it would be well to have it to reported by the manners and bearing of its agents. Parties must and will be formed anew at the South. Organizations cannot long survive the issues upon which they are founded. At the South the past has been literally swept out. In individual minds many of the former states of feeling remain, and will be more or less controlling for short periods. But the new facts will assert their claims and speedily range men into parties in accordance therewith. Because a man was a Democrat under the pro-slavery regime, it does not follow he will remain one now that slavery has dissolved, and universal freedom been established. After a little, when the Southern States shall have resumed their places in the Union, and the advantages of the new status shall appear, great mutations will arise in Southern political circles. What we insist is that Republicans sent on popular embassies into that section should go carry themselves as to quicken those mutations.

NIGHT WORK is reputed to be prejudicial to health. The N. Y. Tribune, in announcing the retirement of Mr. D. P. RHOADES from that concern, says:

"His connection with THE TRIBUNE, dates from the first number of the paper, April 10th, 1841, and since that time he has been in charge of the distribution of its editions, attending to the demands of agents and carriers, and sending the Express bundles—a difficult and important duty, which required him to be in the publication-office at 9 p. m., and to remain until the entire edition of the paper had been delivered in the morning. With the exception of two years employed in the composing-room, Mr. RHOADES has been absent from his post but six nights in 26 years, and not once from sickness."

This goes to show that regularity of habits is of more importance than that rest should be taken during the darkness of night.

THE operations of the gang of Kentucky "Regulators" to which our telegrams referred in brief terms a few days since, are faithfully detailed in a correspondence published on our third page.

Our New Possessions—Russian America.

The following article, translated from the Cologne Gazette, probably gives as intelligent and dispassionate an account of the territory as can now be presented:

If the cession of the whole of Russian America to the United States is ratified, it will be a very important event; not because the acquisition of a large tract of land by the United States promises an increase of power, or for territorial extension is not desirable, and Russian America is no paradise; yet it may prove an eldorado in time, and its situation on the Northwest coast of the Continent will be of great significance. The territory is 11,500 (German) square miles in area, lying on that north-west slope of the Rocky Mountains; has many snow-capped volcanoes, and is densely wooded in the valleys, and on the rivers and inlets of the coast range. The coast has many harbors, shut in by the Prince of Wales and Queen Charlotte's Archipelagoes. The Kossack icebergs first discovered, and bringing furs, which were explored by Behring 80 years afterward, and received his name. The volcanoes are generally very high, and streams are abundant, though unemployed. The climate is very diversified, and much milder than between the same parallels on the eastern coast of America or Eastern Asia. The coast as far north as the peninsula of Alaska, has mild Winters and cool Summers, with abundant rains, very favorable to vegetation; but fruit trees do not prosper. There are scarcely 700 Russians among the 70,000 inhabitants, just one to a hundred; 1,500 are half-breeds of Russians and Indians. Only 15,000 Indians are civilized, and the rest are scattered over the vast region. Esquimaux inhabit the eastern half of Alaska, and there are about 2,300 Aleuts in the eastern portion; they also inhabit the islands of their name. The seat of government of the country is New Archangel, containing 2,300 inhabitants. Twenty-five years ago, it had not a population of more than 850 souls. The timber and furs of the country became very useful when the Russians settled on the Amoor; up to that time, it was more of a burden than a blessing. For America, the case is quite different. This purchase annexes the middle portion, on the west of the British American regions, that England has long regarded with a covetous eye. The north-western coast of America is out of the regular course of commerce. This will now change, and the year 1867 will be the first step in a new era for it.

About the middle of January, the Colorado arrived at Shanghai from San Francisco to open a regular trade across the Pacific, and the steamer Great Republic, of 4,500 tons, is soon to follow. The latter company reports the line already laid as far as New Westminister, the capital of British Columbia.

Steamships and telegraph lines will unite those distant regions to the civilized world and give them new life; and lands that were once called desert wastes will become mines of untold wealth to a persevering and industrious race of people. But the greatest good of this treaty—far more important than the acquisition of territory—is the winning of a cordial good understanding between the two enlightened nations of the northern hemisphere. The friendly relation takes place at the very time when Napoleon III. is hoping for the Western American Union, in speculating upon the establishment of a throne in the West of the World. The French, therefore, have hated to see this friendly feeling increase, and they say in contempt: "What concern is to be well sailed on the United States afford? They have no possessions in the Old World; but they have abundant means, quite enough to make an offensive and defensive alliance, and such trifles, of immense importance, the Czar. Now that Russia is casting a longing look on Western Asia, her views begin to come out of the importance of a friendly union with a mighty naval power on the Western Continent.

For these reasons the negotiations in Washington are watched with great anxiety by France and England.

As Prussia has a good understanding with the United States, as well as Russia—has the entente cordiale between Washington and Petersburgh, in case of war in Europe, may be more beneficial than detrimental to the cause of Germany.

GENERAL NEWS.

—A boy of fifteen, in Montreal, has married his brother's mother-in-law, aged fifty.

—The Democrats of Indiana and Illinois, urge the claims of Senator Hendricks of Indiana, for the next Democratic nomination to the Presidency.

—Three young men, traveling agents, or "drummers" as they are called, connected with Boston and New York houses, have been arrested for alleged connection with the murder of the man Fitzgibbons, at Montpelier, Vt., last Wednesday evening.

—A Washington correspondent of a New York daily says: "The reports for some time in circulation that General Sheridan, of Freedmen's Bureau notoriety, is willing to enter into full fellowship with the Republican party, are thought by some persons to find confirmation in the fact that in his capacity as collector of New Orleans he has made appointments entirely satisfactory to the Radicals of that city.

—Louis Napoleon's present position is thus stated by a London Journal: "Ordered out of Mexico, defeated at Nickelsburg, defied in Schleswig, resisted in Luxemburg, shamed in Auxerre, with no further room for—to France and new sacrifices to demand from his people, the Emperor, to keep his seat, must accomplish some great thing. His claim to reign is success, and in Mexico and Germany, at home and abroad, he has of late been unsuccessful."

—After Herschel V. Johnson had addressed a recent political meeting in Georgia, a colored brother put the case to him personally in this style: "If Gov. Johnson is really your friend, and wishes to see all the people prosper, why don't he accept the reconstruction and supplemental bills? There is a reason that he should be thankful that he has the privilege of coming here to-day to speak to you and to advise you. He has reason to be thankful because he has not been hung."

—The present Duke of Wellington is said to have reduced his income by extravagant expenditures from seven hundred and fifty thousand to seventy-five hundred dollars a year. He has a good excuse. His only brother, Lord Charles Wellesley, is a hopeless lunatic, and he himself, as the consequence of a drunken frolic, at Constantinople—in point of fact a midnight raid upon the Sultan's seraglio—was the victim of a fate which precludes the possibility of his transmitting name or fortune to issue.

—Robert W. Hughes, of Abingdon, Va., one of the most polished writers of the South, once a preeminent secessionist, and editor of The Richmond Examiner during the war, declares himself on the present political position in these words: "I avow a radical change of opinion on many of the leading points of politics. More especially am I ashamed of the practice which the South has pursued from the beginning of this great and eventful controversy of ascribing attainable good, attainable right, attainable justice; for a good, a right, a justice for the latest part abstract, intangible, and of doubtful value."

CONSUMPTION.—This Scourge of humanity, this offer of civilization, which carries away has insinuated itself into all classes, grades and conditions of life. Neither sex, nor rank are exempt from its ravages. Its icy hand falls alike upon the sentinel in the snow-fort and Bishop in his cot. Some of the prominent symptoms are Cough Expectoration, Shortness of Breath, Irritation about the Lungs and Chest, Darting Pains in the Side and Back, Emaciation and a general Debility, all of which indicate the approach of that fell disease, Consumption. No disease has baffled the skill of the medical profession more thoroughly than this, and the reason is manifest. Physicians have been in the habit of treating the symptoms instead of the disease, and in this way have failed. It is therefore well suited to chronic coughs, and as a remedy for old and debilitated cases of asthma. Many persons who at first only took a bottle of this medicine, to try, afterwards came back and got a dozen, or half dozen, which resulted in perfect cures of diseases of the bladder and kidney of years standing.

Diabetes, a disease that has been looked upon as among the incurables, is immediately relieved by it. Notice the certificate of Asa Goodwin, published some time ago.

The United States Dispensatory, speaking of the pine, says: "Oil is prescribed in balsamic pills and other forms of the ordinary pectorals; in piles and chronic inflammation or laceration of the rectum; in chronic rheumatism, and in various forms of rheumatism." It is exceedingly valuable in all gravelly affections, blood spitting, and when there is red and white mucous discharges, which will sometimes occur in local evacuations; and instead of sickening, as do other forms of spitting, it only lowers or quiets the system. Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. Sold by all druggists in the town, country or state. Be sure to call for DR. KEYSER'S Great Hemlock Pain Wood street. ap20

PINUS CANADENSIS.

A tree which is abundant in Canada, Nova Scotia, and the more northern parts of the New England states, and is also found in the elevated and mountainous regions of the Middle states, and abounds in medicinal virtues. Dr. Lewis, of Boston, has prepared a medicine from the sweet inside bark of the pine tree, called PULMONARIA OR WHITE PINE COMPOUND, which is one of rare value in all debilitated states of the kidneys. It acts like a charm in all diseases of the mucous membranes, enabling them to regain their lost tone and energy. It will be found well adapted to all those diseases where Buchu has been tried and failed. It is likewise well suited to chronic coughs, and as a healing balm for old and debilitated cases of asthma. Many persons who at first only took a bottle of this medicine, to try, afterwards came back and got a dozen, or half dozen, which resulted in perfect cures of diseases of the bladder and kidney of years standing.
