

The Pittsburgh Gazette
WEDNESDAY, JUNE 5, 1867.

THE REPUBLICAN COUNTY NOMINATING CONVENTION, which assembled yesterday, had a very harmonious session. In the course of the meeting, there was hardly a word of contention. H. Walter was re-nominated for Prothonotary by the strong vote of 124 to 47. He has made a superior officer, to whom every one deserves and majority. He obtained over two-thirds of the votes of 144 to 6. As a man he is beyond compare, and his wealth, in an excellent way, serves for County Commissioners.

ANCHALDIT PITTORNO more votes than his three contestants put together. For Coroner, William Clark was selected, and he received 98 to 47, though his rival is a most capable man. For Jury Commissioner, a new office created by the Legislature, Charles Froude was selected.

For Sheriff, the Legislature will not be made till September.

DECREE IN ROME. — A decree of the Pope, which has appeared in most branches of manufacturing industry, although a revolution of the impulse of states on foreign goods, which is equally liable to them, has been foreign to the Pope's mind. His Holiness is related to the effect, that the increase of soldiers soldiery was not necessary to put the domestic producers in a position to compete with their foreign rivals, but that it was necessary to create monopolies which would enable the home manufacturers to increase their profits altogether, beyond the cost of production. This is the reverse of the Tariff we voted. As some of the clergymen who signed the decree were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

Now, what has been the result? The Pope's decree has been followed by a fall of fully forty per cent. Instead of the reduction of the Public Debt contributed very much to the increase of the same.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while

the clergymen for Free Trade were also.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the refusal to increase the import

duties was right, and that the wrong

was in letting the Pope's decree stand.

It is now evident, in some quarters,

that the excise duties had been kept as they were.

THE EXCISE DUTIES. — The seeking

of these advantages, were absolutely convinced in their judgment of the case; while the