RIGHTS OF THE BLACKS.

A colored Bishop, at a recent Republican Convention in New Orleans, made a speech so sound in tone and doctrine as to be deserving of special commendation. He administered excellent advice to those of his own race, urging them to moderation in their demands, to forgetfulness of past injuries, to good-will towards the whites, to temperance and orderliness in their social habits, to industry in the pursuit of their proper callings, to frugality in expenditures, and to earnestness in the acquisition of learning.

On this latter head only did he venture a suggestion that could awaken controversy even in New Orleans. He spoke strongly in favor of a common school system, to be supported by a general tax upon the property of all the inhabitants, and intimated that under such a system the children of black parents would have equal rights with the children of white ones. That he had the inherent equities of the case on his side cannot well be questioned. It would appear plain enough, as an abstract proposition, that what is bought at the common expense, must be held for the common use of all. This proposition has special cogency in a community where the population is about equally divided between the two races, and where each race is taxed upon many millions of property. But it may be questionable whether the best way to get immediately an efficient common school system in Louisiana lies through the enforcement of this proposition.

What education, in the technical sense, we received, was got in common schools, where no distinction was made between whites and blacks. Black citizens were voters, and the two races shared in common what the common purse supplied. Nor was there a distinction of white classes and black classes. Children of both colors mixed in the same forms indoors, and on the same play-grounds out-doors. They may have caught the measles of each other; but we think nothing worse. That was in the early days of democracy, before it became effete and conservative.

The demand to mix the two races in private schools rests upon an entirely different basis, and can be sustained only dogmatically. A good deal of nonsense was recently written and printed on this subject in consequence of a case that happened in the Female College of this city. Mr. TILTON, of New York, who is more celebrated for dialetic subtlety than for keen discrimination—for brilliant rhetoric than for sound sense—for vehement declamation than for accuracy of statement—wrought himself up into a frenzy of vituperation. To us it seemed plain that what was bought with private money was for private use; that if private individuals founded a seminary of learning, with their own money, they had the same right to determine what should be taught therein and who should be taught, as each of the contributors had to decide what persons he would invite to dinner at his own house, and what viands he would have prepared and set before them. If any parent applies for the admission of his child to such a school, and gets refused, he has no more right to demand a reason of the managers than a lady who has fished for an invitation to her neighbor's party, and and failed to get it, is at liberty to demand why she was overlooked. It makes no difference whether the dissatisfied parent is white or black. Social rights and courtesies are not determinable by act of Congress or the General Assembly. If Mr. TILTON and other gentlemen see proper to educate their daughters in a private school, in company with black girls, that is their privilege, provided they build and endow the school; but it is sheer impertinence for them to insist that gentlemen whose tastes lead them to adopt a different plan shall not do as they will with their own.

This natural and inherent distinction between what is public and what is private is ordinarily understood well enough. But just now there is a tendency on the part of some leaders of opinion to ignore it, that makes the assertion and maintenance of it a matter of prudence.

Doubtless, the time will come upon the earth, even as in heaven, when men and women will be rated for what they are intrinsically worth; when social distinctions will not depend on the amount of money a man has, nor the lawful business he follows, nor upon his place of birth, nor upon his color, nor upon any other immaterial peculiarity. But we can conceive of no possible contingency in which all men will be compelled by statutes to associate socially with all other men. That would be decidedly too much of a thing, whether good or bad. There is, and can be, no other rule in social life than to allow intercourse to be regulated by elective affinity; that is, to let those who are conscious of congeniality with each other, associate to such a degree and on such terms as they shall find mutually satisfactory.

HARPER'S NEW CYCLOPEDIA.

There is evidently a disposition in these stirring times to discard the use of dry, tedious writings upon theological and scientific subjects, and prefer works of reference, such as Cyclopedias, Dictionaries, and others, alphabetically arranged. For this reason, publications of this sort are becoming more and more popular on almost every branch of knowledge. By the publication of the "Penny Cyclopedia," and that of "Appleton's," scientific and valuable information has been widely disseminated. This new Cyclopedia, prepared by Drs. McClintock and Strong, seeks to accomplish the same mission for religious knowledge. Cyclopedias usually pass over these matters very cursorily, but this volume treats such subjects as they deserve.

The scope of the work is very comprehensive, and it is believed more so than any other extant. The contents take in a wide range of subjects. In the department of Biblical Literature, are every proper name, place, Scripture word, animal, plant, mineral, alluded to in the Bible; general Biblical topics, noted manuscripts, Oriental language, and Rabbinical subjects. The Theological part embraces the doctrines of Christianity, treats of every Ecclesiastical body, with a history of the heresies, controversies and all non-Christian religions. Religious Biography embraces sketches of every branch of the Church. This department is treated with great completeness, fullness, and accuracy. Part third, on Church History, gives a full account of the rise, progress and present condition of the Church; and the Ecclesiastical Statistics of every Church and country.

From this brief outline of its contents, will be seen the magnitude of the undertaking and the immense labor it required to prepare it. Embracing all the research of modern times, and of the publications of merit on these topics, the value of this Cyclopedia cannot fail to impress every one. The labors of thousands of investigations, and the wealth of whole libraries, are also all concentrated, digested, systematized and prepared for the reader. The whole is wrought out in a scholarly and scientific manner. Everything has been carefully revised, and a very large proportion of the articles are either wholly or in most important parts original. The department of Theological and Ecclesiastical literature, has been under the supervision of Rev. Dr. McCLINTOCK, a distinguished writer and scholar, who was for several years pastor of the American Chapel in Paris, where he did valuable service in showing the English and French the true issues of the rebellion. Dr. Strong who had exclusive charge of the department of Biblical Literature, has long had the reputation of being one of the finest scholars of the day. As the author of a work entitled "Harmony and Expositions of the Gospel," he has attained a wide popularity. The theological views of the editors are so carefully guarded, that according to the testimony of those entertaining different doctrinal views, there is nothing of the sort to be detected in this initial volume. Among the leading contributors, are Professor George F. Comfort, on Christian Art and Archæology; Rev. Dr. Hoblich, on Bible Societies; Rev. George Lansing Taylor, Dr. Harbaugh, Rev. Dr. O. H. Tiffany, Professor A. J. Schem, on biographical and miscellaneous topics.

The work will embrace six volumes of a thousand pages each, royal octavo, and the whole copiously illustrated. The first volume—just out—comprises A. and B., and has three hundred and seventy wood cuts. Its index presents an array of 3,016 titles, alphabetically arranged. It is printed on fine paper. The text is handsomely illustrated, valuable maps are supplied, and in a word, the vast resources of those princely publishers have been lavishly bestowed, to render this Cyclopedia every way deserving of extensive patronage. The book is sold by subscription alone. Cloth, $5 per volume; in sheep, $6; in half morocco, $8. The publishers have appointed Rev. Robert Hopkins, a well known minister in this county, agent for Western Pennsylvania, who is worthy of confidence. Subscriptions are received by J. L. Read, Bookseller, Wood street, near Fourth.

CITY SUPERINTENDENT.

The Board of School Directors for this city have decided to elect a City Superintendent, at half-past seven o'clock, on Thursday evening next, at the Third Ward School House. The Commercial urges that in view of the Consolidation movement it will be well to postpone this election.

We think our neighbor misapprehends the case in some important particulars. The Act of 1835 consolidated the wards of Pittsburgh, as they then were, for school purposes. The Consolidation Act, passed at the last session, is silent on the subject of schools, and only refers to property in school houses, (sections 52 and 54,) to provide that it shall not be transferred to the city. We apprehend, therefore, that until further legislation shall be obtained, whatever else may be Consolidated, the School districts of the other municipalities will not be conjoined with those of Pittsburgh as now existing. It may be, if Consolidation shall carry, that the Schools will be brought under the control of a single Board, but that is a matter to be determined hereafter.

The new School Law, passed at the last session, enacts that no person shall hereafter be eligible to the office of Superintendent who does not possess a diploma from a college legally empowered to grant literary degrees, a diploma or State certificate, issued according to law, by the authorities of a State Normal School, a professional certificate from a county, city or borough Superintendent of good standing, issued at least one year prior to the election, or a certificate of competency from the State Superintendent. The meaning of this is, that no man shall be chosen Superintendent who is not well educated, and eb competent for the duties of the place.

We shall not undertake to say whether the choice shall be made now or postponed, but we do say it is of the greatest importance whenever the election shall be made, that a man suitably qualified be put into the position.

FARM, GARDEN AND ORCHARD.

June.

June is the month of greatest summer beauty, for now the trees put on their freshest robes of green. Coleridge calls it "the leafy month of June." Along with the foliage the flowers come out in their loveliness. The conical bloom of the chestnut, the pedant flowers of the locust and the snowballs of the gardener rose, stand in beautiful contrast to each other. The forests are now clothed with brilliant verdure and the prairies variegated with flower-gems. June is the month of roses, for it is then they come forth in all their beauty and freshness, and repay the careful cultivator with a profusion of bloom. To a lover of nature's charms June is a month of pure delight.

Beautifying the Homestead.

When a rural homestead has been beautified by the proper arrangement of fruit and shade trees, evergreen shrubs and flowers, how joyous seem the leaves and flowers of June. The variegated blossoms of the orchard give promise of an abundant supply of fruit, and nature seems to delight in assisting art to make everything useful as well as ornamental. The ancient Romans considered June the most propitious month for great undertakings, and matrimonial engagements were generally completed in June, May being especially avoided, as under the influence of spirits relative to happiness. All those pagan superstitions were retained in the Middle Ages, and many others were introduced, some of which continue to the present day in some European countries.

Green Forage.

The necessity of having a supply of green forage for soiling stock is every year becoming apparent. Rye, vetches, millets, peas and oats, maize and clover, Peruvian and Guano may be used for this purpose with good effect. When rye is sown in the usual time in the fall, it affords a large supply of early food early in the spring, and is well adapted for forage for horses. When rye begins to form grain in its top it is fit for soiling, and should be superseded by red clover or vetches. The latter make nutritious food for horses and hogs. Every farmer should have a few acres of them to come in succession. This can be done by having a few weeks between each sowing.

The Orchard.

The orchard demands attention in June, although amid the hurry and pressure of other work, it is sometimes forgotten at this time. Pruning should be attended to, as the present month is a good time for performing the operation, the wounds healing up quickly and the new wood ripening sufficiently to cover them. The trees should be brought into proper shape by removing such branches as cross each other, or fill up the centre of the head and keep the sun from ripening the fruit. Some persons cut away the lower limbs, thus exposing the lateral branches to the action of high winds and the direct rays of the sun. Between the claims of pruning and non-pruning, a middle course is safest. Wounds made by the saw or knife should be coated with a solution of gum shellac if this is not available, white paint may be substituted. When once brought into proper shape, trees may be kept so by pinching off the unnecessary shoots as fast as they appear.

Grapes.

Grape vines should be tied securely on their trellises to prevent them from being blown down by high winds. Cedar posts, with strong wire stretched horizontally on them, make the cheapest and best trellis, for the limbs of the vines take hold on the wire and support the branches. As soon as the leaves expand predatory insects assail them. The insidler sorts of these should be destroyed by drenches of soap suds, lye, etc., the larger picked off by hand. Mildew is very destructive to the grape. It is said to be caused by an excess of carbonic acid gas, and as this cannot exist in a soil containing a sufficient quantity of potash, the disease may be prevented by applying such liquid or solid manures as contain this ingredient. Soap suds and wood ashes are specially adapted for applying in this case. Sulphur has been found very effective in preventing mildew.

Root Crops Among Corn.

To grow successfully 100 bushels of corn on two acres of land, the ground should be plowed in the fall, in corse furrows, and left as light as possible without dragging or rolling, and should be stubble ground. This will give the frost a chance to kill, by freezing, the worms which have burrowed for the winter. In the spring plow fine, running the furrows a waving land west. Mark out, or otherwise, the rows, running them north and south always. Cultivate as often as it will answer to do so—that is, as soon as grass or weeds begin to show much. Plant every other row in the field to cabbage, rutabagas or carrots. This will give a good circulation of air between the rows of corn, and the corn crop, a valuable supply of roots for thus grown for winter feed for cattle and horses. It costs but little more to raise from 100 to 125 bushels of corn to the acre than it does to grow ten or twenty, as usual. One hundred and twenty-five bushels have been grown to the acre, each alternate row being cut down. The way to do it is, keep the soil light and loose, especially if a dry season, as land stirred draws moisture through the night. Never roll the ground for corn crops. A good free circulation of the sun and air is the life of the crop, and with the roots well covered the farmer will be richly paid. A farmer who once adopts the practice of planting his corn in north and south rows, with every row in small cross-potatoes, cabbage, carrots, ruta-bagas or parsnips—will never go back to the old way of all corn in the field and potatoes outside, and a few cabbage and other roots in small beds in the gardens. Such practice helps men to starve their stock for want of roots in the winter, and mortgage them in the spring to the lice, murrain and crows.

Useful Herbs.

Every garden should have a collection of useful herbs. A small bed, or large tuft, of each will be sufficient for supplying the requirements of a large family. Sage and thyme are much prized for stuffing, seasoning, etc. Pennyroyal, peppermint and spearmint, sweet majoram and winter savory, burnet, balm, basil, etc., are all more or less useful in various ways. Nearly all these plants may be propagated by cuttings or slips, and also from seed.

A Strange Story.

The New York correspondent of a St. Paul paper is responsible for the following remarkable story:

There is a young lady in this city by the name of Miss Mary A. Mills, who has set a very worthy example to all her sex. She was born in Hartford, but her father parents when quite young. By the kindness of friends she was sent to Ellingham Seminary, Vernon, Ct., where she graduated over a year ago. She is a good Latin scholar, well versed in modern literature, and keeps books in double and single entry. She is twenty one years of age, and when she came out of school she was forced to support herself, but had a great aversion to New England factories. She came to New York a stranger, with nothing to help her except a few letters of introduction, expecting to take a clerkship in a store; but, upon investigation, would turn up her mind that she was not calculated for the occupation, and came to the bold determination to establish a real estate and life insurance agency, and, I am happy to say, is meeting with that success which is so justly due her. The profits of her first years' business, which has just ended, is over $3,000. At present she has an estate of over $150,000 in her hands to settle. She is destined to make her mark among the business circles of this great city. The only fault I find in her is that she is a little extravagant in her living; but pass her name around, for she deserves praise.

Insects.

The predatory insects which are so destructive to the orchard and garden should now be assailed with every weapon of defense and offense. The tent caterpillars' nest should be collected and destroyed. The worm picked out of their lurking places in the trunks of the apple, the peach and the quince. The cocoons of the apple-moths searched for in the crevices of the bark of the trees and other suspected places. Bark lice overwhelmed in deluges of strong lye, soda solutions or soap-suds; the curculios jarred from the plum trees; the pear and cherry slugs dusted off the foliage with dry ashes, or any other kind of dust. If the rose bug worms have evaded all the "true protectors" and reached the leaves, a plentiful dusting with dry ashes applied while the dew is on, will dislodge them. The flea-beetle and striped bug may receive their quietus by the introduction of a few small chickens among the plants which they infest.

Weeds.

Moist days in June are the best time for eradicating troublesome weeds, such as the yellow dock, Canada thistle, burdock, mullien, etc. The roots should be dug up and exposed to the sun until they are dry, and then burnt. The yellow dock is propagated both by roots and seed, so are the Canada thistle, burdock, etc. They should be dug up before blossoming, so that there may be no chance for the seeds to fill. We have frequently seen Canada thistles ripen their seed although the plants were cut down when in blossom. They should not be allowed to grow on any part of the farm, as they are alike injurious to cereal crops, meadows and pastures. Some farmers are very particular about weeding in large crops, but exceedingly careless about their meadows and pastures. Grass land should be kept as free from weeds as cereals and green crops.

Mr. GEORGE MUIR, of Armstrong's Coal Works, Penn township, Allegheny county, speaks as follows of the

REV. E. A. WILSON'S

Great Remedy for Consumption:

"I was reduced so low with consumption that I was unable to leave my bed, and my physicians informed me that they could do nothing more for me, my case being utterly hopeless, that I had not certainly over a month to live. At this stage I was fortunately induced to try E. A. WILSON'S REMEDY, and to-day I am as well as any man in the world. If there are any who doubt this statement, they can call and see me, (or peradventure address) and I will give them all the particulars of my extraordinary recovery.

A NATIONAL MEDICINE.

One can hardly pick up a newspaper or turn a street corner now-a-days that he does not find, staring him in the face, the announcement that Prof. Sozodont, or some other quack medicine which is a panacea for all the ills that flesh is, or may be heir to. Three "wonderful" discoveries usually in existence of a few months, then disappear from public notice. The reason of their sudden extinguishment is apparent. They were humbugs. At the outset all medical preparations have an equal chance for success, as all are equally unknown; but the chaff is soon winnowed from the grain by the practical test which an unprejudiced public applies to all things. There are but few preparations of medicine which have withstood the impartial judgment of the people for any length of time. One of the few which we have now in mind, and which has been a long time familiar to nearly every household in the land, is compounded in HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS. Their unbounded universal sale, and their emphatic endorsement from all portions of the country, conclusively demonstrate that they must be a specific for the ailments for which they are recommended. Before, however, a stated list of these diseases of the throat, bowels and liver, in that early territorial district known as Pittsburgh, be regarded as a sure cure, the manufacturers think they are bound to have the article perfect, and for home use this is certainly the case. Sold by druggists in this city.—Extract from the Monitor (Iowa,) Courier, Feb. 7, 1867.

PINUS CANADENSIS.

A tree which is abundant in Nova Scotia, and the more northern parts of the New England States, and is also found in the elevated and mountainous regions of the Middle States, and abounds in medicinal virtues. Dr. Swett, of Boston, has prepared a medicine from the sweet inside bark of the pine tree, called PINLAND'S WHITE PINE COMPOUND, which is one of rare value in all debilitated states of the kidneys. It acts like a charm in all diseases of mucous membranes, enabling them to retain their set tone and energy. It will be found well adapted to all those diseases where Buchu has been tried and failed. It is likewise well suited to chronic coughs, and as a sudden specific for old and debilitated cases of asthma. Many persons who at first only took a bottle of this medicine, to try, afterwards came back and got a dozen, or half dozen, which effected radical cures of diseases of the bladder and kidney of years standing.

Diabetes, a disease that has been looked upon as among the incurable, has immediately relieved by it. Notice the certificate of Asa Goodnow, 93 Hudson some time ago.

The United States Dispensatory, speaking of the pine, says: "It is prescribed in leucorrhœa, piles, and other diseases of the urinary passages in cases attended with diminished secretion of the bowels, in chronic catarrh, affections of the lungs and consumptive habit, and in the scrofulous diathesis as containing the principles of white pine, and when a thorough trial and faithful use of PINLAND'S WHITE PINE COMPOUND, light and consciousness promptly attended to.
