POWER OF THE PRESIDENT.

We have already recorded the fact that the organ of the President at Washington was counseling him, as a matter of high and imperative duty, to disregard the laws, whether Constitutional or statutory, so far as this course shall be necessary to the consummation of his plans. Coming from a journal holding only ordinary relations to the Executive, this might be regarded either as a momentary ebullition of passion, or as the wayward inspiration of an unbalanced intellect, rather than as the suggestion of a possible and near contingency, which swift-coming events might put into the category of the inevitable. Coming from a journal which has not only the ear, but the confidence of the President—which is notoriously inspired by him, and not he by it—this must be taken as the formal announcement of a settled purpose—as the deliberate proclamation of a scheme long brooded, and now thought to be ripe for execution.

This does not take us by surprise. Such an upshot would be but a natural and necessary conclusion to the principles upon which the President has acted for the last two years. It would simply be carrying his doctrines out to their legitimate practical consequence.

The President has steadily deduced his speeches and relative position in the government, not from the essential genius of popular institutions, nor yet from the Constitution, the Laws, and the decisions of the Supreme Court, but from the analogy furnished by monarchies. Instead of regarding himself as under the laws—as a servant thereof—bound, not to question, dispute or dictate, but to execute implicitly and faithfully all rules, regulations, and laws enacted by the supreme authority—he has constantly set himself up as having vast and indefeasible rights of judging, demurring and refusing in respect to what is laid on him as an obligation. He has not said, in terms, "I have natural, hereditary and inalienable authority, overtopping and dominating all other in the land," but he has acted it all along.

Now, the key-note to his whole policy is sounded by his mouth-piece, in the suggestion for suppressing the law-making and law-expounding departments of the government, and openly assuming that all substantive power resides in the Executive. This is following exactly on the track of all the giant usurpers who, in past ages, have overthrown governments founded on the rights and will of the people. The feeler is put out to see if the men of this country are sufficiently tame and subdued, or grown so weary and disgusted with the task of maintaining their liberties as to be likely to give way under the vigorous case.

Under the Government of the United States the President has only power and authority to execute the laws. He derives these from the laws, and from no other source whatever. Getting all his prerogatives from the laws, he has only such as they confer. He is the agent or instrument for carrying the laws into effect. He is not above the laws, or on a level with them. He is under the laws, in the capacity of a servant. His authority proceeds from him. It all comes from the laws. Nor is his duty lessened or modified by any opinions he may hold as to the character of any of the laws. As a man, he has the same right to approve or condemn particular enactments as any of his fellow-citizens; but as President he is under the highest obligations to see that all the laws are respected by being obeyed. It is the part of wisdom for the President to put honor upon government by the people in taking special care to see that laws he is known to dissent from are faithfully executed. It is easy for a magistrate to magnify and guard those enactments which run specially in his way of thinking; that are congenial to his sentiments; that conduce to the success of his policy. The test of genuine fidelity, however, lies in his giving proper force and effect to the laws he does not like, but would repeal if the power of making and unmaking statutes was confided to his discretion.

While on this matter we may as well advance a step farther. An impression obtains in some minds that in dispensing the honors and patronage of the government the President may rightfully discriminate so as to make appointments conduce to the rendering of certain laws nugatory, or to their absolute repeal, because he is unfavorable thereto. Whatever patronage is lodged with the President was put there for the purpose of enabling him all the more certainly to fulfil his chief duty of carrying the laws into effect. If he so use patronage as to defeat the laws, he becomes an offender, and may be rightfully stripped of the power he misuses. It is not for him to judge whether he has done his duty or not. The authority of determining that matter is given exclusively to Congress. The two Houses are not at liberty to proceed through malice or ill-will, but if in the exercise of a sound discretion, they believe the President has either done those things he ought not to have done, or has left undone those things he ought to have done, they are bound to prosecute and try him for the delinquency.

THE ANTIETAM DEDICATION.

That the consecration of a Cemetery for the patriots who fell in defence of the Union, should be used to promote the ends of such men as Gov. SWANN, of Maryland, and the obnoxious principles of which he is the representative and type, is one of those deplorable incidents that mark the character of the times upon which we have fallen and the nature of the influences which go out from the national capital. That the loyal Governors present by special invitation upon the occasion, should not only be ignored, but be treated with undisguised contempt, shows that a patriotic cause was employed to disguise a most criminal intent, and to aid in preparing the way for the restoration of the disloyal element of the power which was wrested from them on the field of battle.

The Union soldiers who were in attendance, by that instinct which is superior to reason, and which served them well in many of the great exigencies of the war, comprehended at a glance the situation. The sentiment, like an electric shock, was communicated to the whole mass of people. It was this that produced that call from multitudinous voices, rising and swelling like the clamor of tumultuous waves, for Governor GRARY to address the excited and indignant masses. Popular as the Governor justly is, this was not an evidence of his popularity. Deserving as he eminently is, this was not a tribute to his desert. Courageous and skillful as he doubtless was in the field and in the fight, this was not a testimonial to his prowess. He was there as a loyal Governor—best known that particular assemblage of all the loyal Governors present. He was hailed as one—as the representative of all of them, and of those great constituencies by which they were elevated above their fellows. The wrath of the people against the President and his copilotters, expressed in those calls upon Governor GRARY, was the significant circumstance. Those calls came from bosoms that felt a holy ground was desecrated, no matter what semblance of respect was maintained; that the sacred cause for which the honored dead, lying there, lost their lives, was traduced; and that instead of canonizing the slain, the real design was to lift treason out of its humiliation, to endow it with power, to make it potent for mischief, and even to crown it with the garland of victory.

The President, doubtless, comprehends better now that it is not easy to deceive the people in a case like this.

ANTIETAM.

The following spirited poem from the pen of CLARENCE F. BURLEIGH, of New York, was read at the dedication of Antietam Cemetery. It was selected out of a large number of contributions, some from the most popular verse writers of the country, and will amply repay perusal, and prove exceedingly interesting to the brave men who figured in the scenes so truthfully described:

Upon a bright September morn,
Five years ago to-day,
The pleasant hills of Maryland
Arrose and smiled in May.
While Autumn's leaves were strewn around
In purple and in gold,
Like bleak autumnal blast o'er which
The plague at midnight rolled.

The Pheasant beat his long tattoo
Where soon the drum would play,
And merrily Antietam Creek
Went singing on its way;
But many a tattered banner thrilled
Upon the Armory wall,
As if it felt some mother's child
Of a tempest soon to fall.

The tramp of Lee's battalions
Is thunder in the distance tells
A storm is darkening near;
While stretched along yon bristling hill
The metal flies of fire,
Like leaden clouds that soon would burst
In ruin and disaster.

But 'round the flag of Freedom
Her stalwart yeomen stood,
Resolved its stars should never set
Till they went down in blood.
Not flower of speech lost on the blast
Had answered her appeals,
But marches like a gathering storm
Or avalanche of steel.

With every bamlet adding
To the thunder of their tread,
As if the Revolution's graves
Were giving up the dead,
And stalwart fighting in their dreams
The Punic wars again,
Woke, as the bugle's call was sobbed
On red Antietam's plain.

The combat opened; and between
The valleys whistling then
From every sulphur cloud, were heard
The cheers of Hookers men
And where the yellow corn had waved
Artillery sowed the fields
With shot and shell that make it still
An iron harvest's yield.

Mid showers of grape and canister
Along our lines of dine,
The form of Reynolds struck with
The Arm of Sixty-Two,
Beneath our flag the Lord of Hosts
Fought on like sweating sod:
For traitors to their country
Are traitors to their God.

In Freedom' holy brotherhood
The saxon and the Gaul,
Shoulder to shoulder as they fell,
Shared Glory's crimson pall.
The Pennsylvania shakedown and
And Western mountaineer,
Across the swarthy raider lay,
With empty musket, here.

Here fell the dauntless Mansfield,
Whose streaming locks of snow
Could never for a moment chill
The fiery heart below;
And ponder tonight that Burnside
So gallantly did hold,
Is now a classic name with the Pass
The spartans held of old.

Young Rodman, as he precipete lay,
Still waved his flag on high;
And faintly with his dying breath
Sang to a battle-cry.

Well might Duryee, as true a knight
As ever conched a lance,
Smile grimly to behold his Zouaves
With springing step advance;
Or in their front, Hartsuff's brigade
Of Erin's hardy sons,
Passed not till they were looking down
The muzzles of the guns.
The burly form of Hooker
Towed on the surging flood,
Till he had shown a riflemen
The color of his blood;
While Sumner, Meade and Sedgwick,
Like sabres flashing bare,
Saw sprinkling breast like regulars
The living cantonade.

Historic Mount! such deeds
Have made, with brilliant gleam,
A Mission of very strain;
A Nile of every stream!
And nevermore would Europe boast
Of her scarred Pyramidens,
Could she have seen the work that day
Done by our volunteers.

Four times you wood was won and lost
Where lay the foe intrenched,
And to its fall our hearts did cling
As to a talisman;
To scarlet rain bedrenched,
When onward went the hallowed troops
That never charged in vain,
Our hero-scarred Green Mountain Boys
And remberemen of Maine!
And from their main line of intrenchments
The veteran ranks within
Were hurled, as if each bayonet
A thunderbolt had been.

Abl sweetly by the planter's porch
The orange tree will rise,
But nevermore its every bloom
Will cheer his wistful eyes;
For many a crimson life has blood,
That blade or bullet drew,
Will shake its ripened fruit, beyond
Spring with a redder hue.

Thin grew the host that fought beneath
The fallen stars and bars—
Like gray wolves back-ward, inch by inch,
Reeling to their den—
Unto the cover of their works
The best of hordes retired;
And upon upon the dust of strife
The evening sprinkled dew.

The martial strains rose from our camps;
And as the wounded listened,
The berrulees hand was clenched again—
Again the plated pulsated.

Some thought of dear ones, who afar
Would name them from the pillow,
Or maidens who that night would sit
Alone beneath the willow.

Some thought of stately marble halls
That in the city towered,
And others of an humble cot,
Amid the vines embowered.

Yet wheresoever their thoughts were turned,
As memory's magnet drew them,
The spot was hallowed by the name
Of "Home Sweet Home" unto them.

But when the morn in beauty broke,
Those heroes who had striven
So nobly for their home, had found
A better home in Heaven.

Then softer grew the hard brown hand,
As, with a woman's care,
Rough soldiers gently bore away
Their fallen comrades there!

But when the last long trench had closed
Above unnumbered slain,
All grades forgot—an army lay
Encamped beneath this plain!

Yes! in dark barracks underneath
Rest those who once in cypress wreath,
To serve both as glorious raised,
To traitors with dishonor stained;
But, till with those who blessed still
At Marathon and Bunker's Hill,
By loncer trump than battle drum,
They're marshaled for the last review.

No more the pulse that beats so true
Will quicken at the loud tattoo
Ascends as sparks from the camp,
Or signal fires that the presented train;
But hands unseen will hither bring
The earliest wreaths of spring;
And gentians who have viewed with awe,
The ruins of that haunted shore,
Where storm and battle overspread
The silent cities of the dead.

And every step brings through the gloom
An escape from the storied tomb,
No longer o'er the deep will roam
To leave a helpless orphan at home!
For every clod we tread to-day
Is moulded from some hero's clay,
And, looking downward from the skies,
Some loving mother's maternal eyes
Of blood's warm a tenderer glow
As on this scene he gazes now.

I feel a God-like presence near—
The Great Emancipator's here!
O Death! where is thy sting! O Grave!
Where is thy victory now!
For valor rendered, doubly crowned

A SOUTHERN EDITOR.

EDITORS GAZETTE:—The editor of the Workingmen's Advocate is devoting himself to the dirty task of traducing and abusing the Republican candidates, and especially our candidate for Senator. To attempt to follow him in this foul work and to expose his falsehoods would require more time and room than all the papers in the State could afford.

It becomes, however, a fit subject of inquiry, who the editor of that sheet is—where he came from, and what are his views on national questions; and this much we have ascertained, viz: that he was lately brought here from Kentucky; that he was there employed on the Louisville Journal; and that he is believed, by some of those who know him well, to be thoroughly Southern in his sympathies.

Will the people of this loyal county permit themselves to be dragooned by one suspected of Southern sympathies, and be dictated to by one who comes to them with the taint of disloyal Kentucky upon him. Is it any wonder that a party under such a lead should naturally rally to it all those who in this county arrayed themselves against the Government during the war?

The loyal people of this county will not tolerate the intermeddling in their politics of any Kentuckian who cannot show a clean, loyal record. Most especially will they not permit such an one to traduce some of their best citizens, and spread before them, day after day, column upon column of shameless mendacity.

A movement headed by a Kentucky editor, fostered and encouraged by all the leading Democrats in the county, with leading Copperheads as delegates in its County Convention, and a prominent Copperhead at the head of its Assembly ticket, can never receive or merit the confidence of the people of this county. It is got up wrong. Every element, about it is suspicious. The loyal men in Allegheny county cannot be fooled into association with those who opposed them during the war.

Hidden Treasure.

More than once we have heard rumors of treasures having been buried in Fayette county; what degree of reliance can be placed in them is for each to judge for himself. About two years ago the rumor took this shape, that in olden times there resided somewhere near a creek a man who, hermit-like, shunned the intercourse of his fellow men. He was reported to be the possessor of immense wealth, whether obtained under the auspices of Lafitte or not, was not said. Suffice only our hermit was killed by the Indians, and with him was buried the secret of the place where the money was deposited. To-day the rumor assumes this form, that under the Mexican rule, a conducta was started from Washington, in this county, under charge of sixteen Mexicans, who had in their charge the small sum of $7,000,000. They took the trail leading through this place, and when near Buckmar's creek, perceiving Indian signs, they buried the money. The Indians attacked them and killed all but three, whom they carried away into captivity. Four years ago, the surviving prisoner having escaped, returned to the scene of the deposit, confided the secret to a gentleman, and the two were about to make discoveries. On the journey, the Mexican's horse stumbled, threw and killed his rider. The companion is reported to have spent much time in digging for the lost money, but not being able to unearth it, made his secret public. We hear that a party, on the strength of this information, is now engaged in the hunt for this treasure. When they find it, we shall report the fact.—La Grange True Era.

—On Friday last the Union Pacific Railway had completed 450 miles of track west of Omaha, being within 40 miles of track to put down to reach the new city of Cheyenne, at the base of the Rocky Mountains. The company expect to have this link completed by the 10th of October, when the great editorial excursion train will pass up the Valley of the Platte, en route to the Rocky Mountains. Last October the excursion party penetrated 271 miles west of Omaha, being within twenty miles of the crossing of the North Platte. In one year from that date, 240 miles will be added to the length of the road, making a total of 517 miles from the Missouri river to the Rocky Mountains.

—Gov. Morton, as well as Speaker Colfax, disclaim all responsibility for a paragraph which "sixteen reasons" why Gen. Grant should not be nominated for President. Mr. Colfax authorizes the editor of the South Bend Register, his old paper, to say that "the utterly republican and consistent tone of the paper, and all of its charges and insinuations against Gen. Grant, from beginning to end. Nor does Mr. C. believe that any friend of his had any agency whatever in its preparation, printing or circulation."

DR. CHAUSSIER,

Has provided a preparation, and at the same time a beautiful dressing for the hair, entitled the Finest article for the toilet that can ever been presented to the public.

IT IS NOT A DYE.

It will not soil the finest linen. It will not stain the hair. It is free from the disagreeable smell of other preparations. It will not blister the skin, or cause irritation. Frequently one half from the hair comes out from the effects of dyes. Raises the hair to grow. It will restore gray hair to its natural color, or any color desired, in a few days, in every instance. As sole proprietor in compartively new in this country, he confidently presents the testimonials of well known persons as to its wonderful merits. Ladies and Gentlemen, try it.

WEAR AND TEAR.

When the constitution is weak and the system depressed by labor or sickness, the nervous fluid, which makes such tremendous drafts upon the body and mind, unless some healthful counteracting tonic is resorted to, pre-mature will ensue, and the disease creep unawares upon the victim of neglect. But if

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS,

Which is a genial and purely vegetable stimulant, be timely administered, that repugnant will realist and bathe the veins of epidemic and changes of temperature need not to this end of the year, which is discouraging to many of the feeble.

There is no active and permanent vitality in this remedy, which will not of great benefit to the broken down and shattered constitution. It is the only tonic of which the alternating principle is perfectly pure. It is this is the essential principle of sound rye, which is admitted by analytical chemists to be the most harmless of stimulants, and this yield is refined from credit-like which belong to it as it comes from the manufacturer. The other ingredients are composed of medicinal plants and herbs, and contain not one harmful element in all their composition.

CURE OF FISTULA.

DR. ESTERS:—I write to thank you for your kindness and scientific management of my disease, for which I called to consult you some time in January last. You will remember that I had a complication of diseases which finally ended in a terrible fistula, which had been advised to "let alone" on account of a harassing cough, which it was feared might arise as my lungs. I knew that the popular as do of treating diseases like mine was by a cutting operation, which, if successful at all, would naturally throw the disease upon the internal organs, or vital organ, on account of the suddenness of the cure and the immediate check to a discharge which I was accustomed to, and relied on as my sure provision of Nature to get rid of some morbid condition in the system. I feel perfectly satisfied that your method of treatment, purifying to the system, and local applications to the fistulous part, must cure, if anything could. I gladly submit my case to a gentleman, and am happy to report myself well in every particular, with sounder and better health than I have had for years. I would also add that the applications you made were almost painless, and has left me a new man, with all the energies in vigor of restored health.

Yours, gratefully,
C—.

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

THREE NEW MUSIC BOOKS.

MASON BROTHERS, 596 Broadway, New York, have just published the following important New books:

THE TEMPLE CHOIR. A new collection of CHURCH MUSIC, by DR. F. LEMAND, assisted by LOWELL MASON and WILLIAM B. BRADBURY. Containing an unusually large amount and variety of new matter; many New Tunes; Anthems, &c., by the Authors and other publishers' composers. Its Sunday School Department is very attractive and complete; it has a fine collection of new tunes and part Songs for choir practice, and is very rich in Anthem departments.

This is the first time Dr. Mason and Mr. Bradbury have been united in the authorship of a collection of Church Music.

It is in plain, clear type, mostly one part on a staff, 64 pp., large music size. Price 75 cents, or $72 per dozen. To facilitate examination, we will send a single copy by mail, postage paid, on receipt of music or books of a short or round size.

A NEW METHOD FOR THE PIANOFORTE, by WILLIAM MASON and E. S. HOADLY. Ready early in October.

This valuable book, presenting the best results of modern experience in piano teaching, in the light of the latest and practice of the most eminent and successful teachers, containing a course of instruction, forming a course of study and exercises, from the first rudiments to the most finished performance.

It will carefully progressive, fundamental principles, so far as possible, those minute directions which the best teachers are accustomed to give their pupils; teaches the art of fingering by a few clear, concise systems which gives important and hitherto needed directions for training the hand; teaches the true mode for accomplishing vocal music, reared and secular, and affords sufficient instructions in harmony for those who wish to extemporize interludes and short pieces; presents a system of time and rhythm, entirely invented by Mr. Mason, and used with great success in a private class for years; contains a most complete and choice collection of pieces from the best composers, suitable to be used as recreation, every one of which is believed to be real favorites.

It is elegantly manufactured, with illustrations, 160 pp., large octavo. Price $1.50.

Any piece, song, or piece of music, will send it free, on receipt of price, for introduction.

THE GOLDEN CENSER, by W. F. SHERWIN and E. O. EXCELL. A New Collection of Hymns and Tunes for Sunday Schools, containing upwards of 200 pages, with a copious selection of the old ones. Great care has been taken to exclude objectionable words.

This is believed to be the most attractive and best book of its size. Price, in paper covers, 35 cents each, or $25 00 per hundred. In boards, 40 cents each, or $30 00 per hundred.

One copy, paper, to any Superintendent, for introduction, for 20 cents
