

The Pittsburgh Gazette
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 25, 1887.

WIND REMOVED.
An embankment in the platform of the great iron pier, deluged the ranks, without substantial cause, than from the most valorous efforts of the opposing force. This was illustrated at the feet of the pier, and in many other spots during the progress of the battle.

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.
The New York Times, in speaking of the cordiality with which Mr. Blanton has received in Berlin, says that the liberal press has been ready to grapple with the mighty problem of the republic. Mr. Blanton is not lacking in the magnanimous character to be desired. They imperfectly comprehend the political situation and have failed to discover the necessary applications thereof. In this particular the conclusions of their intellect were, which less safe and reliable than the instincts of the people, have steadily prevailed towards this insupportable.

THE MURDER OF JOHN BROWN.
The New Orleans Bulletin says that some time ago a young man, while riding in the street cars in that city, expressed his opinion of the execution of John Brown. He was told that he was a rebel and that he was a traitor. He was then taken to a police station and held for some time. He was then released and allowed to go home. He was then taken to a police station and held for some time. He was then released and allowed to go home.

FOREIGN ITEMS.

An article in a London magazine discloses the probable quality of the troops of the British army. It is not certain whether the British army is to be sent to the Congo or to the Sudan. The article says that the British army is to be sent to the Congo or to the Sudan. The article says that the British army is to be sent to the Congo or to the Sudan.
