The Pittsburgh Gazette

GLEANINGS.

Pennsylvania furnishes 73½ per cent. of all the coal used in this country.

Carlotta Patti is creating a sensation in Hungary. The hungry generally do like patties.

A man named Bray, in Skowhegan, weighs 440 pounds, which is a heavy weigh for a bray.

Abraham Lincoln's debts when he was killed amounted to thirty-eight dollars and thirty-one cents.

German women of Philadelphia make $1,50 per day by going into the country and husking corn and taking the husks for pay.

Miss Anna Dickinson is not to be married and is not going on the stage, but is in Boston, has sore throat and will lecture when it is well.

Gen. Imboden, of the Confederate army, is about to test, before the Supreme Court, his right to vote in Virginia, where he was late a member of the Legislature.

Rhode Islanders claim that their State is the most densely populated in the Union. The New York Post says that this may be true, as Rhode Island is such a little State that the people must squeeze close or leave.

Three great scenic pieces are running to crowded houses now in New York. The renowned "Black Crook," "The Devil's Auction," which is in its sixth week, and "The Mid-summer Night's Dream," which is in its fifth week.

The Indians in the west predict an unusually early winter, and a severe one, with an unusual depth of snow. They give as a reason for this last, that the autumn was excessively dry, and what we did not get in rain we shall in snow.

The Emigration Society of the Old Dominion has raised $10,000 to bring emigrants to Virginia. They had better bring sheep, for the emigrant who cannot pay his own passage will do no more work than a good Southdown and yield neither wool nor mutton.

A new phase of the Trichinæ movement or scare is now announced. Codfish are full of worms, which live all through the salting and boiling and chopping and frying necessary before they come up wriggling in the nicely browned codfish balls. Sensitive persons must now stop using codfish as they long ago did pork.

The Democrats are evidently impressed with the idea that what they call the great reaction was only a sport. Senator Buckalew, in a speech in the Quaker City, recently, asserted that the voice of the minority was not sufficiently respected in this country, and called upon the people to demand a legislative alteration in the laws regulating the thing. The Honorable Senator will shortly be out of office.

A strike has occurred among the chorus singers of the Italian Opera in New York. These unreasonable choristers want to receive their arrears of wages, which the Maretzek, of course, will not allow herself to be forced to pay. The affair has become so serious that the whole New York population is actually suffering for want of opera, and what is worse, they will be perfectly destitute of this necessary article for at least a week, all on account of the absurd demand of these haughty chorus singers, who positively assert that they and their families cannot live on nothing. The absurdity of their demand is patent to every eye at once.

How Gen. Buell Scared Mr. Johnson.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial relates that during the Buell Commission, Andrew, the Military Governor of Tennessee, charged General Buell with being a traitor, for that Buell had attempted to evacuate Nashville and was prevented only by the active interference of said Andrew. This Buell pronounced false, and yet the Judge Advocate of the Commission could never get the vociferous and patriotic Andrew into court to face Don Carlos. And when, at last the witness, Andrew, aforesaid, sent in his deposition, General Buell, in a published defense, pronounced it false, and its deponent a perjured scoundrel. Of the perjury we may have doubts, but of the lack of pluck there is no question. A little circumstance occurred in Cincinnati, highly illustrative of this fact. While the Commission was in session Johnson passed one night in the Burnet House, on his way to Washington. The night of his arrival he was serenaded, and in his speech responding to the compliment he indulged in a bitter denunciation of Traitors. The crowd gave the attack significance by crying out "Buell, Buell," and Johnson ascented. The little gamecock of British blood with arms folded at his window, in a room of friends listening to this pleasing little drama. The next morning Governor Andrew Johnson entered the dining hall for breakfast, and seated himself half way down, with his back to the wall, facing the guests who were breakfasting. In a few minutes, and before Buell made his appearance, marching into the hall in full regimentals, with his sword clanking at his heels, to show that he was not under arrest, and followed by two aids, he paused for a moment, as he laid down his hat and gloves. The air seemed heavy in an instant with tidings of a coming scene. The play of knife and fork was suspended, and the very waiters stopped their busy attention. Eyes turned uneasily from General to Governor.

No one who has seen Buell under any circumstances, is he scarcely necessary to say that his presence is impressive. Rather under the middle size as to height, he is erect and exceedingly well proportioned, while his squarely cut, handsome face is lit up by a pair of eyes seldom given to a human being but for command, and as those eyes fell on Johnson, a thrill ran through the assembly. With an exceedingly unpleasant scowl, the General stalked the half length of the dining room to where Johnson sat—and, pausing within five feet of him, gazed indignantly in his face. A flash as of lightning passed over Andrew's countenance, and his eyes fell on his plate. Johnson is not capable of much expression in his heavy face, but there was no mistaking the pitiable, cowed look that came up then. After a pause of a minute, General Buell picked up his chair, and bringing it down with a bang that made Johnson jump, sat down and coolly ordered his breakfast. Johnson incontinently finished his own. The man capable of that part in such a scene is not the man to exalt a coup d'etat. So we are safe from everything but disgrace.

Fashions in Silverware.

[From the New York Mail.]

Sets of solid silver are coming into use by all those who can afford to purchase them. They will always find more favor with the wealthy than the white metal plated ware of American or European manufacture. Strange as it may seem, American manufacturers of sterling silverware are better able to suit the American taste for such articles than the European, with all their famous artists and years of experience. It is almost impossible to give the reader a list of the prices for which any piece of solid silver can be obtained, as they fluctuate with the rise and fall of gold. There is no limit to the number of prices which one may purchase for a dinner set—it is only bounded by the length of one's purse. Some are content with a four hundred dollar set of four or five pieces, while others spend as many thousands. One of the latest styles tête-a-tête sets is known as the globe pattern, the dishes, pot for hot water, etc., being spherical in shape, with highly ornamented handles, knobs, etc.

A very chaste and elegant tea set, which finds much favor with the refined and educated, is of the antique form, and perfectly plain. In the butter dishes the globe pattern is almost the universal favorite. For dinner sets it is in the highth of the mode to ornament each dish with medallions or figures in solid silver, as symbolical of the articles they are supposed to contain. A dish for roast beef has the heads of oxen for handles, while a venison dish is ornamented with a beautiful model of a deer set in solid silver. Waiters are of numerous shapes and sizes, and elaborately engraved. A novel article for a pic-nic box has made its appearance in the shape of a quaint looking owl, its head being perforated with small holes for the lid. Two bright eyes are set with precious stones, and when the silver creature is placed upon the dinner table it has a decidedly quaint appearance.

Salt dishes are in great variety. Many of these are supported by human figures, others have the feet of animals, while still another variety is wrought into handsome baskets.

Of sugar tongs, salvers, pie-knives, crumb-knives, spoons, ladles, forks, etc., the variety is almost endless. These form very handsome bridal and holiday presents.

—The Germans of America are preparing for a vast International Festival, in which the rifle clubs, the singing societies, and all the vast army of orchestral unions of the Old World and the New, are to be reunited in the city of New York, in one mammoth exhibition of skill and emulation, such as the world has never before witnessed.
