The Pittsburgh Gazette

A WINTER NOCTURNE.

BY WHITTIER.

The moon above the Eastern wood
Shone at its full; the hill-range stood
Transfigured in the silver flood,
Its every bush a diamond bead.
Its brown slope's basking weeds did wear
Their coats of mail and feel no care,
For each a world and each a height
Must thing that tin warning light,
Which only seemed where'er it fell
To make the coldness visible.

HAPPINESS.

BY P. J. E. LOVELL.

What fooled I then should shrink with him
That sake it not; but he who hath
Watched o'er the waves thy fading path
Will never more on ocean's rim
At dawn or eve, behold returning,
The high-heaped canvas shoreward yearning;
Then only teachest us the core
And tamest thinking of the More.
Then, who first showest us thy face
Turned o'er the shoulder's parting grace,
And whose the footprints we can trace
Away from every mortal door!

EPHEMERIS.

—Brignoli, the awkward tenor, is betrothed.

—There are seventeen cities in the State of New York.

—Lotta does the Grands Duchess in a way that quite startled Testee.

—What portions of the body are the best travellers? The two wrists.—Judy.

—Is Mr. Seward going to purchase Jerusalem? A faint rumor suggests the query.

—Monsieur Maresmet is stoken of as the most promising new composer in Europe.

—Mrs. Kemble's readings in New York are said to be as effective and beautiful as of yore.

—Paul Murphy is loaing in Paris where he is playing chess. Ichabod, Ichabod! is his cry.

—Gen. Grant, it is said, spends a couple of hours each day with Mr. Stanton. They are inseparable friends.

—The New York Custom House is to have a weather vane, the shaft, or outside indicator of which is forty-six feet long.

—The following was contributed to Punch by a fashionable young married woman: "The latest thing out—my husband."

—"Vermin-like" is the latest epithet which the refined Democratic press has invented or scraped up for Secretary Stanton.

—Victoria Regina, besides having her quiver full of children, has a new quiver with twelve members of a still more recent generation.

—Twenty millions of francs is the nearest approach to Monte Christo-ism that Dumas has been able to make by the sale of his novels.

—Four dollars is the price received now for a peck of tomatoes in New York. An exchange suggests that it is very expensive packing.

—The recently appointed Consul to Osaka, is to call this week for his Consulate. According to the latest reports it is rather a turbulent sort of a place to go to.

—There are 13,716 gold watches in use in Philadelphia and 1,410 silver ones. There are also upwards of forty millions of dollars worth of personal property in that city.

—Two hundred dollars a year, each is the tax which Brigham Young exacts from those men who prefer single blessedness to the state of polygamical wretchedness.

—Lotta was called out nine times on the occasion of her farewell benefit in Philadelphia last Friday. The tenth time she was called she refused to come, pleading fatigue.

—Miss C. M. Hunting is a new American prima donna who is being successful in Europe. Copenhagen was the scene of her first triumphs, and Riggoletto was the opera.

—Auerbach's novel "On the Heights" has been translated, and is soon to be published. If the translation is good our non German reading public has an immense treat in store.

—The latest literary work of the Queen of England, the Highland Journal is to be translated into French. Perhaps the scene might be transferred to the French Switzerland or to Savoy.

—The "hand of glory" superstition, so graphically portrayed in the "Ingoldsby Legends," has been revived in England, and has resulted in several successful burglaries. The hand of the law is reaching for it however.

—Some eastern exchanges are troubling themselves about the disappearance for a time of the Headley's, from the literary world. It is too much to hope for, but would it not be a very excellent idea to send the Abbott's to look after them.

—Julia Dean Hayne, an actress who triumphed once from the sheer force of her incomparable beauty, but who returned after a long absence—in the accident, only to find that her power of attracting had departed, died last week in New York.

—Brignoli brought out an original symphony in Philadelphia on Friday last under his own direction. In some parts he became so excited that he beat to pieces with his baton a pile of music lying on the piano in front of him. The instrument was also slightly injured.

—Boston is prettier than ever over the White Fawn. We are pleased to see, however, that the Boston papers agree with us in declaring Mlle Lupo to be the best danseuse in the troupe, which is the same as appeared in Undine in this city some time ago.

—Cheap readings are to be established in New York. They will meet with as great success as in England, if the same class of readers can be procured. Imagine Mr. Seward, Geo. W. Curtis or Prof. Longfellow reading to the million! And yet Gladstone, Anthony Trollope and Swinburne do it in England.

—An Irishman and an Englishman, antagonistic as usual, quarreled at Cairo, Ill., a few days ago, and a duel was to be the result. The preliminaries were arranged and the meeting was to take place at five o'clock on the following morning. During the evening, a spiritual meeting was held to cloak their intentions. The still spirits triumphed and the inimical parties awoke at ten o'clock next day lying side by side in the same bed. Harmony was the result.

From India.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 20, 1867.—Sir John Lawrence, Governor-General and Viceroy of India, has lately held a levee in the capital of the ancient Kingdom of Oude, Lucknow, which has become ever memorable for its siege during the rebellion of '57. These levees—called durbars—are an imitation of the receptions held by the Grand Mogul of Delhi, for the purpose of receiving the homage of dependencies of the Empire, and of having their oaths of fidelity renewed. They are kept up for the purpose of exhibiting to the native element the power of Great Britain over the Indian feudatories, but none had been held from the annexation of Oude to the second conquest in '57. It is difficult for anybody who has not witnessed the festival to form an idea of all the splendor exhibited. The Rajahs of Oude had answered the appeal of the Viceroy by appearing in large numbers at the capital, with their elephants, servants, jewels, and all the ostentatious elements of Oriental luxury. Five hundred elephants, covered with blankets of gold-thread and silk, the majority of them carrying on their backs turrets of massive silver, made their entrance, with the Rajahs and their families clothed in the richest silk garments and ornamented with bracelets, collars and chains of diamonds, emeralds, rubies and pearls. On the day of their solemn entrance into the city the Viceroy took the lead of the cavalcade, riding on an elephant of immense size. After he had stopped on an elevated spot, the Rajahs passed in review. His second under a parasol, held above his head by two servants. The parasol is the emblem of the highest dignity in Oriental countries, and it is a curious fact that the parasol is found on the box reliefs of Ninevah over the head of every Assyrian king—this custom having not only preserved itself for centuries, but spread from the shores of the Ganges to those of the Tigris, for there is little doubt that India was inhabited and civilized before Assyria was—for, westward did the course of empire take its way" at that remote period and less than in our modern times.—Cor. of the Phila. Bulletin.
