VERDICTS. In the case of Margaret Stafford, tried for the larceny of a small piece of pork, the jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the defendant was discharged. In the case of the "widow M'Nutt," indicted for the larceny of nine yards of carpet, reported yesterday, the jury failed to agree upon a verdict, and were discharged other at that point.

A HUSBAND AND TWO WIVES. The first case called was that of the Comminonwealth vs. Bridget Keday. Indictment, assault and battery. Eliza Keday, prosecutrix. This is a somewhat singular case. It appears that both parties claim one and the same man water that both parties claim. ie man—whose name is Jno. Keday—for a husband. The story runs that John was first married to Bridget many years ago in Ireland. Fifteen years ago John left Ireland and Bridget, and came to this country. Here, after a brief courtship, he was united to Eliza, matri-monially, and after this twain had resided together for more than ten resided together for more than years John was slightly surprised one day at seeing Bridget, his first choice, who appeared before him in all her loneliness, fresh from the "sod," so impressing John the nleasant memories of "Lang with the pleasant memories of "Lang Syne," that he at once forsook his Ameri Syne," that he at once forsook his American consort, and set up an establishment on Webster street, in the Sixth ward, which has for some months been inhabited without molestation by Mr. Keday and his lawful wife—"which is Bridget." On the 20th of last January, however, Eliza, it appears, went to the house on Webster street for the purpose of seeing, about a child or some children which she claimed belonged to her. A fight ensued, in which, it was alleged. A fight ensued, in which, it was alleged, Bridget struck Eliza, not only with her fist but a very severe blow upon the head with an iron poker. The jury convicted, and the defendant was sentenced to pay a fine of one dollar and the costs of prosecution.

TRIAL FOR ARSON. Lythe Wright, a negress, aged fifteen years, was placed on trial on a charge of arson. James Clark, of Peebles township. was the prosecuting witness. He testified that on the night of the 5th inst., at eleven o'clock, he discovered his house on fire. The flames when discovered, had not gained much headway, and were easily extinguished. About a half hour afterwards fire vas discovered in another house near Mr. Clark's. This house was occupied by ciars. This nouse was occupied by an uncle of the young negress, who satisfying himself that the building was fired by an incendiary, instituted inquiries which elicited from the defendant a confession elicited from the defendant a confession that she had set both buildings on fire. She said: "she was mad at Clark, and wanted to roast him." Nothing was offered by the defense. The jury found a verdict of guilty. The prisoner was remanded.

BLISS BAWDY HOUSE. The case of the Commonwealth vs. Rachel Bliss, indicted for keeping a bawdy house on Wayne street, in the Fourth ward of this city, was called up. The defense was represented by Messrs. Swartzwelder and Collier, and the Commonwealth by District Attorney Duff.

The first witness called by the Commonwealth was Thomas Smith, a police officer, who testified that he had been in the house of the defendant twice within two years. On of the detendant twice within two years. On the occasion of one of these visits he saw Mrs. Bliss and one girl. He had gone to the house in company with Officer Sarber to make an arrest; the person for whom they had a warrant was not in the house. ness had often been in the neighborhood of the house of the defendant, and had seen "ladies and gentlemen" going in and com-ing out at all hours. It was proposed by Commonwealth to show by this witness the character of the persons that frequented the house, for the purpose of determining the character of the house itself.

Defendant's counsel objected, citing authorities to show that evidence as to the character of the persons who frequent the house was not competent to determine the character of the house itself. Objection overruled.

Witness was then interrogated as to the character of the women who frequented the house. He replied that he had talked to them himself; they were reputed to be lewd

Preston & Co.'s Iron Mills, an immense mass of rock and earth, becoming detached mass of rock and earth, becoming detached from the hill, which at that point rises to a height of a hundred feet or more above the level of the track, and seemingly overhanging it, fell instantaneously, blockading the track for over a hundred and fifty feet in length, and destroying a portion of the iron mill, more than fifty feet long. At the time of the accident the mill was in full operation, and ten or twelve nien were enraged at work at the twelve men were engaged at work at the rolls under that portion of the building desrous under that porton of the bunding destroyed, which was a shed thirty feet wide by fifty feet in length, attached to the main building, but fortunately they all escaped uninjured. They had been anticipating a slide for severil days, and it appears were on the lookout for it. The damage done to the mill, beyond the destruction of the shed mentioned, is comparatively small, as none of the machinery was injured to any extent. The shed destroyed was not directly opposite the mass of fallen earth and rock, but at the extreme end, which accounts for the whole structure fell. The railroad company are by far the greatest sufferers by the accident, as it will require an incalculable amount of labor to remove the obstacles now on the track, and if the weather should continue wet there is a strong probability of another fall fully as large as the first. Mr. Hughart, president of the road, was on the ground in a very short time after the occurrence, and with his usual energy and promptness in attending to the interests of the convergence. ing to the interests of the company, had a wrecking train and squad of hands at work removing the earth and rock, within an hour after the accident. Fortunately for the ompany they have engines and cars on oth sides of the obstruction which will facilitate its removal, as it will enable them to work at both ends, and will prevent it from seriously interfering with travel while the work is being done, and we are informed that the passenger trains will make their

Incendiary Fire—Barn Burned at Six Mile

Ferry. A fire evidently the work of an incendiary, occurred at Six Mile Ferry, Monday night, by which the barn of Mr. J. Risher, of the firm of Risher & Wilson, coal dealers, and all its contents, including a valuable horse, was totally consumed. About eleven o'clock flames were discovered issuenoven o clock flames were discovered issuing from the barn, which, owing to the combustible nature of the building and its contents, spread with such rapidity as to render futile all efforts to save the building or anything in it. Among the property destroyed, in addition to the horse referred to, stroyed, in addition to the horse referred to, which was valued at three hundred dollars were a buggy worth two hundred dollars vo wagons valued at two hundred dollars each, ten tons of hay and a quantity of feed. The building was worth about three thousand dollars, making the entire loss over five thousand dollars, on which there was only a partial insurance.

It was evident from the first that the fire was an incendiary one, but distinctive proof of this was found vesterday morning. Nailed to the door of a blacksmith shop, standing near the burned barn, was found a paper on which was written these words:
"Mr. Risher, this is the first, but it won't be the last." It is diought that some of the one must be recent employes of the firm, who are now on a strike, are guilty of the outrage. The written paper is in the hands of an officer, and may lead to important results.

James P. There has been material change in the style and finish of trimming buttons, and a change for the better, as we noticed in that de-partment many fresh and handsome specimens of crotchet, bead and satin buttons, with elegantly wrought fringe drop ornaments, together with new styles in Roman pearl buttons. Promenade scarfs in delightful shades of color and rich material, and the "Chessepot" and "Safety-guard" ties will probably be all the fashion a few weeks hence. Among the new things found at Eaton's is the "Dickens collar, paper, which is rapidly crowding all others from the track of popularity.
