'Tis the wild and windy March, And the month the question rettled That 'tis time to mend the arch And to scour the rusty kettles. Time to set the but to rights.
Where the girls and bays togethe.
Tend the furnace fires o'nights
In the rough and rainy weather;

Time to hew and shape the trough, And to punch the spile so hollow, For the snow is thawing off And the sugar-thaw must follow.

Soon the blue-birds and the bees
O'er the stubble will be winging;
So 'tis time to tap the trees
And to set the ux a-ringing. Oh, the gladdest time of all the year is the merry sugar-making. When the swallows first appear And the sleepy buds are waking!

AN ENGLISH VIEW OF IMPEACH-

No American journal has expressed a clearer conception of the origin, progress and present culmination of the present movement to free the Republic from its most dangerous enemy, than is contained in the annexed paragraph from the London

The House of Representatives is proceeding steadily and warily in the impeachment of the President. There was some appear-ance of precipitation in the sudden change of tactics which resulted in the passage of an impeachment resolution so soon after its apparently final rejection; but we now know enough to understand the movement. In the duel which Mr. Johnson has forced on Congress he has at least exposed an unguarded point, and the watchfulness of his antagonists has enabled them to strike a decisive blow. There could be no doubt that his administration was altogether hostile to the laws he administered, nor that he wished to encumber or obstruct the policy of the Legislature; but it was rather in the spirit than in the letter of his Administration that the hostility manifested itself. His correspondence with General Grant revealed him still more clearly in this attitude of illegality, and proved that he was desirous that his subordinates should act in opposition to the law, though he would neither do so himself nor give them -Bierstadt is engaged on some very large written directions to do so. Such an attitude was at once seen to be a moral justification of impeachment, and the proposal was therefore revived. But men cannot be tried and condemned for their intentions unless those intentions have assumed the form of deeds, and Mr. Johnson's illegal inis stated by a writer in the Cincinnati ably illegal actions. He had foolishly hoped Chronicle.

Buffalo Harbor is to have a breakwater which will cost $3,000,000. That amount which will cost $3,000,000. That amount of money would make Erie a better harbor The proposal for impeaclment was, therefore again rejected by the moderate feeling. -Madame Schroeder Devrient, the most of the House. But the very failure of the renowned person who ever trode the boards revived proposal seems to have given Mr. Johnson courage. Either under the idea that Congress had begun to fear him, or gooded by the taunt that he had asked Gen. -A. J. Davis has just published a new Grant to do what he himself was afraid to rigmarole about spiritualism, clairvoyance do, he made the false move for which his and such other matters as belong to the opponents had been waiting. In the attempt to remove Mr. Stanton and to pass over General Grant in defiance of the Tenure of Office act, he had committed a misdeinal "Little Samuel," just as if he were the original "Little Samuel Woke," familiar to the citizens of the nursery.
