Something about the Benireni Bust.

The Philadelphia Bulletin says: In Saturday's paper we told the story of steadily refused to continue his classical this fine work of contemporary art, whose studies: His mother spealed to M. Poir-merit received the equivocal compliment of son, and implored him to recall her boy to tempting the antiquity mongers to foist it on the world as an antique: The correspondent of a Boston journal, finding himself at Flor-in a tone more threatening than encou ence in the centre of the scandal, dishes up the matter by the column for the appetites of his Athenian constituency. It will be enough for us to select a fact or two as hearing on this controversy, grown into such an agitating one for the French connoisseurs. There is no longer a doubt as to the author of the bust. Bastianini, the actual sculptor, is a young and poor artist of Florence. Of his personal distinctions we only got the fact that he is "square-browed"-a Florentine trait, indeed. It appears to have been his trick to model portraits of Italian celebrities of the Renaissance, and sell them in dead silence to art-liucksters. In his last letter he reveals the fact that a bust by him of Savonarola had been the object of a similar dispute on a small scale; this previous sham-antique, after having been bought (doubtless at a moderate art-price) and exposed as a curiosity. was afterwards ex-plained into a modern imitation; for, "when the artists Banti and Costa had learned from me that the bust of Girolamo Savonarola me that the bust of Ground Savonarous was my work, they at once published the fact in the Biforma, without trying to turn the world topsy-turvy, as at Paris, for the bust of Benivieni." The letter a bit of the bravura of an Italian "man of honor," closes with a challenge to the Superintendent of the Louvre to deposit 3,000 rancs (just a tithe of the price paid by the Musee for the "Benivieni,") as payment for a second terracotta, to be artistically the equal of that under dispute. It is addressed to a friend and patron, Dottore Forese, a savant and man of leiters, proprietor of a museum of vertu in the island of Elba. This gentleman has watched the whole story, from the carliest scoops and rakings of the sculptor's thumbs in the clay, to the exaltation of the latter as a thirty thousand franc antique in the Louvre; he has an anecdote or two which tend to stamp the latter history of the bust as odious and excessively little to the credit of French honor. The carver-youth Bastianini, of course. is poor, and cannot always afford to deterioriate his "antiques" by scratching his signature on them. These niceties of feeling are reserved for his letters, where they come out in the most manly and chivalrous On tae contrary, the name of Benivieni, the imaginary original (of whom no real portrait is known) was imprinted on the work in carefully-imitated antique letters. The "anecdote or two" refer to the troubles of this poor genius.

The first French purchaser, de. Nolivos, visited him in his studio in 1867. The authenticity of the work had at that time been seriously hreathed upon. "So it is you," said the mortified and therefore furious Gaul. "who pretend to be the author ! You are a cheat and an imposter. Come to Paris and we will put you in Charenton 12

Gounod at College. It seems that, when a boy at college, every effort was made to destroy his musical genius. His professor, M. Poirson, was in despair. His parents intended him for the Ecole Normale. On its being announced to him that he was to go up for the necessary examination, the boy burst into tears, and stern professor accordingly sent for him, and in a tone more threatening than encouraging, said to him: "So you wish to become a musician?"

"Yes, sir," replied the terrified boy, "But that is not a profession." "What sir, the profession of Beethove of Mozart, of Gluck; is not a profession?"

"But," interrupted his interrogator, "you must remember that Mozart at your age had already music composed worth publishing, whereas you have only scribbled notes on paper. However, here is your last chance; fyou really are a musician, you can set vords to music."

The old man copied out the poem "Joseph," "Apeine au sortir de l'en France." The boy rushed up to his school desk, and after studying the subject, wrote an air and accompaniment, which he brought back to his professor and showed to him pale with emotion. He felt that on his judgment his future career depended. He sang it to the old man, who listened in amazement, and led him to his drawing room, where he made him play the accompaniment, on the plano. Those present were entroptured by the beauty of the composition, and it was at once decided that young Gounod must follow the bent of the undoubted genius with which he was gifted.

Object Teaching Extraordinary. Perhaps the most striking example of obect teaching, if we consider the instruction sought and the attainments of the class, is to be found in the recent tour of inspection of the mines, furnaces, mills, bridges and public works in the Lehigh Valley, by the stu-dents of the Philadelphia Polytechnic College. These young men had been pursuing their scientific studies for nearly two years, in the various departments of mining, metallurgy, engineering, &c., and an invitation to aid their studies by an examination of the great industrial works of the Valley of the Lehigh, was extended to them by the proprietors of the works in the vicinity of Catasauqua. During two full days, in a special train placed at their disposal—one of their own number acting as engineer of the locomotive-they visited most of the points of interest to them, stopping long enough to make the examination as full and satisfactory as possible. Every process of the iron manufacture was witnessed, from the removal of the ore to the drawing of the fines wire. The reduction of the ores of zinc, and the conversion of that metal into the white oxide used as paint, were examined. The dimensions of furnaces, the cost, method and amount of production were ascertained. This was followed by a critical examination of the various bridges, with measurements, sketches, &c. It will thus be seen that while the foreign correspondents of some of our American cotemporaries are writing with deserved commendation of similar p Paris and we will put you in Chardword i deserved commendation of similar participation of the students in the German would have done. He flew, relates Forese, at the insolent Frenchman like a fury. That is precisely the old Florentine method of de-tis precisely the old Florentine method of deexcursions by the students in the German

The Doctor Forese, who will be recognized, by all but the sore French connoisseurs, as unimpeachable testimony, promises a pamphlet which will ventilat the practices of the antique hucksters, and the history of this scandal in particular. The title will be "The Tower of Babel."

What Came of a Photograph. (From the Carrolton (Ill.) Patriot.]

A friend who knows whereof he speaks gives us the particulars of a little bit of roance, the actors of which are residents of this county, Less than two years since there arrived in the eastern part of the county, from Switzerland, a young man of goodly appearance and fair educational acnts. So well pleased was he with his new home that he soon reported to his friends across the water the many advantages that an honest, industrious im ligrant found here. A young lady in Switzerland -an entire stranger to him-Hearning from a lady friend of his happy situation in Amer-ica, wrote him through friends that she would like to visit his adopted home, and along with the letter she forwarded her photograph with the letter she forwarded her photograph. He was pleased with the picture—the features were fair to look upon, and the letter indicated a well educated mind, so he sent her his photograph. Thus com-menced a correspondence that in a few months attracted her across the ocean to meat the man she had her across the ocean to meet the man she had learned to love meet the had never seen. With a friend she arrived the last of October at Tugcola, Douglas county, when her unknown lover met her as she alighted from the cars-inquiring, like one of old, if she were his Katherine and there he, first, saw, her and first kissed her as his affianced. Within two PICKLES, NUTS &c., days the couple thus strangely and romanti-cally brought together, word married, and on their way back to the residence of the young man's employer in this county, where they have since lived, both doing acceptable service for one of our enterprising farmers.

and both seemingly as happy as if there had beeu a five years' courtship. A Vale College Professor on Novel Read-an article on novel reading: Cannot the spirit of love and the gospel be taught us in a novel as well as in a Sun-iday school story ?. I would that our Sun-day school literatura had more genius to bouch the hear, and preach the gospel to bouch the hear, and preach the gospel to rich and poor. We want a Christian litera-tere, that will take us by the hand, and lead us down into the stodes of the wretched and even of the stodes, of the wretched and even of the stodes, in the stode us that there are human hearts, men, women and children, still, though servibly changed into the form of beasts by the Circean touch of sin.

Ing Prof. Hoppin, of Yale College, says in an article on novel reading:

the form of beasts by the Circean touch of sin, and teach us how to pity and reach and enefit these.

A French Story. Here is an anecdote of one of the last bal de l'opera in Paris. Before the principal enof the Doctor Forese, he alluded to the trance stood a group of men chatting, hugh-Benivieni portrait, and asked for an opin-ing and criticising the maked couples as ion- Upon the Italian authority relating they arrived. Two black dominos, very legantly dressed, walked up the steps, the lady limping and saying : "Charles, do let us go back." I cannot walk. I cannot even stand." One of the observers of the scene remarked, "That's what comes of putting a big foot into a little shoe." The lady turned high price he had paid for it. That is to say, the work never left the palace in which it was deposited after the de Nolivos sale; but ble last evening if a fool of a coachman had not trodden upon it, and crushed it with his brutal heel. If you can find in Paris another foot that can go up and down five flights of stairs in this slipper, I will acknowledge that my nose is a foot long, and my foot as big as a king's." Since that time the gen-tleman has devoted all his time to finding the owner of the slipper.

THE largest orange grove in Florida is on the Indian river, thirty miles south of New Smyrna. It contains fifteen hundred trees, and covers about fifteen acres. Every-where in the State you will hear "Dummitt's Grove" spoken of. I have heard of no other grove of more than five hundred trees. At St. Augustine there are avenues inclosed by beautiful: orange hedges, but these are sour trees. In a very few years, however, there will be many large orchards and thou-sands of small ones. With its climate and soil the State should supply us with most of. our tropical fruits and much other tropical our tropical truits and much other tropical produce. Coffee, tea, arrowroot, guayas, bananas, pincapples and coccanuts have been grown with success within the limits of the State. All of these are now cultivated on a small scale, bul we can expect no great production of them for some years, but the on a small scale, but we can expect no great production of them for some years; but the oranges are already planted. Their cultiva-tion is no experiment; for they have been raised with profit for two hundred years. If as many trees are planted for a few years to come as have been planted this year, the orange crop of Florida will soon be worth twice as much as its total productions are worth now. CONFECTIONERIES. HENRY W. HORBACH,
