wool, consequently the cry of short wool does not alarm any one, nor cause buyers to rush upon the market. The result is, we are a very quiet conservative tradehaving something very unusual for the wool trade. The repeal of the tax on manufacturers' sales is having its legitimate effect, but as the woolen trade received the most exciting and stimulating influence during the war, people must not be surprised at its ig longer depressed than any other branch of business and requiring more time to recuperate, yet we may expect that as one branch of husiness after another rallies that the woolen trade will follow in their wake, it may be with slow and tardy steps, but notwithstanding this it will come. Fine cassimeres are now selling well, and manufacturers of these goods are increasing their production, causing a better demand for fine wools, and stiffening prices to some extent; even extra fleeces are now more inquired for, in view of the light stocks on hand and keeps prices steady for this class of wool. Medium and coarse wools are so scarce that there dees not appear to be any care about them whatever; nobody is disposed to hold. them for better days, and nobody seems dis-posed to pass them by expecting to do better, but those using these grades of wool take them at fair rates.

Superpulled wools are in very good de-mand, and bring full rates and quick sales. Extras are now in better demand, inasmuch as they are better grown, and come nearer the staple of the fleece than a monthsor two ago. But pullers are determined, to a great extent, to destroy the value of their best skins by pulling along with them a certain amount of the shorter grown, which ser-iously injures the sale of the whole, and diminishes the value; they think they make money by such a mixture, but in reality they are heavy losers. If they would take more pains in sorting and washing, we have no doubt they would find it greatly to their benefit. Buyers now scrutinize wool very closely, and there is no doubt now but the better conditioned any kind of wool is, the more readily it will sell and command the best prices. Medium wools, which yield any amount of delaine, are very scarce, and consequently delaine wools command relatively high prices, although the manufac-tured article is not selling either freely or at remunerative prices. Domestic combing is very scarce and commands full prices. Canada is also scarce, but the demand is quite up to a few, weeks ago. California, Oregon and Texas are in good demand and sell readily at good prices. Foreign wools move slowly, although there is sometimes a trade of this kind affected. The advance in the price of wool in England, and the improvement there in the goods market, has not been without its ef-fect on this market; on the whole, we may say that trade is generally reviving, but we do not anticipate any great rush in business in either wool or woolens this Spring, nor do we look for a great advance in prices, but we do hope that business will be a little more steady. more steady, not only from now to the clip, but afterwards. We think the time is coming when it will be easier to do business than it has been the past few years. The sales for the week include 150,000. lb. 18.8

they may be more readily seen and gathered up. This is the most easy and rapid way of getting rid of this caterpillar, as a single lip of the shears prevents the hatching of a whole nest. If any are accidentally omit-ted they may be destroyed after hatching, by the use of the swab. In the absence of pruning shears, the blade of a knife may be inserted, like a hook, in the end of a pole, and if made as sharp as a razor, will cut off the twigs by a single jerk.—Country Gentleman.

The Teeth of a Horse.

At five years of age a horse has forty teeth -twenty molar or jaw teeth, twelve incisor front teeth, between the molars and incisors; but usually wanting in the mare.

At birth only the two nippers or middle incisors appear. At a year old the incisors are all visible n the first or milk set. Before three years, the permanent nippers have come through. At four years old the permanent dividers next to the nippers are cut.

At five the moppers are cut. At five the mouth is: perfect, the second set of teeth having been completed. At six, the hollow under the nipper called the mark, has disappeared from the nippers, and diminished in the dividers.

At seven the mark has disappeared from the dividers, and the next teeth or corners,

At eight, the mark has gone from the corners, and the horse is said to be aged. After this time, indeed, good authorities say that after five years, the age of the horse can only be conjectured. But the teeth gradually change their form, the incisors be-coming round, oval and triangular... Deal-ers sometimes bishop the teeth of old horses; that is secon them ont to imitate the mark. that is, scoop them out to imitate the mark; but this can be known by the absence of the white edge of the enamel which always sur-rounds the real mark, by the shape of the teeth, and other marks of age about the animal.-Rural Gentleman.

A Culous Story.

The New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Enquirer is responsible for the following curious story: Every one knows of Elias Howe, the Every one knows of Lins Howe, the famous sewing machine man, who died at Bridgeport, Connecticut, a few months ago, and who was supposed to be worth at least four or five millions. He had long enjoyed a monopoly of his lucrative trade, and had a patent that brought him one dollar for every, sewing machine made in the United States. When his estate was settled his executors declared that it was not worth more than declared that it was not worth more than $600,000, at which his heirs raised a huge bout, out, at which his here maked is high outery, charging the executors with fraud of the most gigantic character. Legal exami-nation was made, and the figures proved (instead of larger than had been stated) to be represented by zero, a number of debta having been discovered that were before unknown. This is the story in the vicinity of Bridgeport, and the heirs of Elias Howe, who had expected to be made rich by legacies, are doomed to dreadful disappoint.
