The Pittsburgh Gazette.

THE FAREWELL.

Sweet were the days we've spent together,
Sad must the hour of our parting be!
Through the broad [illegible] summer weather,
Pleasant the path [illegible] for thee;
In the [illegible] west, where the sun is setting,
Deep through the shadows lies my way;
And I must onward with step unshrinking—
Thou knowest all that my heart would say.

What shall I give thee for farewell token?
[illegible] speech, [illegible] love or with care?
Think of the words that we have spoken,
Take them for wishes, and count them for prayer;
Oh! be thou wise when life, caressing,
Would woo thee to linger, would win thee to stay;
Keep in thy soul its earliest blessing—
Thou knowest all that my heart would say.

Oh o'er my soul will a sudden yearning
Bring back the days we are leaving behind;
Bring me thy footstep, no longer returning,
Bring me thy greeting, so gay and so kind;
How shall I bless thee? No longer beside thee,
I can but love thee, and loose thee, and pray;
Yet will God love thee, and keep thee, and guide thee—
Thou knowest all that my heart would say!

EPHEMERIS.

—Jean Ingelow is thirty-eight years old.

—A dog crusade has been begun in Chicago.

—There are nine Mormon temples in London.

—Sergeant Bates, like Washington and Napoleon, has his imitators.

—Judy calls an unsigned will a nameless deed, thus taking the will for the deed.

—One of Du Pont's powder rolling mills exploded on Saturday. No one was hurt.

—Mandarin Burlingame will sail from San Francisco for New York on the 30th inst.

—"Johnson will die game if he dies at all."—Exchange. What sort of game, hare or fox?

—If ten New Yorkers own one-tenth of the assessed property in that city, how many own it all?

—The unfortunate Giraffe in the London Zoölogical Gardens is suffering from two yards of sore throat.

—Matthew Arnold describes Hepworth Dixon's book as a history of the Mormons by one of themselves.

—The Duke of Wellington owned twelve overcoats, but a young lady in New York has eighteen cloaks, all new.

—The Tomahawk says the cradle is the nutshell in which every boy appears a kernel (Colonel) to his mother.

—Charles Dickens' net profit in America were $100,000 in gold and three large packing cases of miscellaneous presents.

—"Hens," says Basil, "are very dangerous animals, especially when they begin laying about them pretty vigorously."

—Howard Paul has gone to Rome. How hard Paul was treated the last time he went to Rome, some eighteen centuries ago.

—Mrs. G. H. Pendleton patronizes the "German." This is supposed to be a dodge to win the Teutonic vote to her husband.

—Parson Brownlow does not want the Vice Presidency. There are many men who don't want it—until they think they can get it.

—Anna Dickinson has found her voice again. We had hoped that it was still for ever, but it seems to be still for womens rights.

—John Brougham has abandoned his ancient line and has taken to the heavier roads of the drama. He is writing a play for Booth.

—The Boston Post says that nearly all of its readers are early risers. We take this to be a delicate way of hinting at a limited circulation.

—Sir John Pakington has the chicken pox. The baronet has some time ago achieved the mumps, whooping cough and measles.

—Mr. Dickens went to the Circus in New York and saw the Cynocephalus. What he thought of it is still as riddle-iculous as the sphynx.

—Cardinal Bonaparte rides in the carriage with the Pope. He is only a young Cardinal but will, he hopes, some day be able to ride alone.

—John C. Green has given Princeton College $120,000 and a deed of a farm. Why will not some one do likewise for our own University?

—Queen Victoria has been to the church which William the Conqueror used to attend. She didn't see Bill however, and only staid a short time.

—Two suicides per day is all that Paris can do in that line, and she only does that much because otherwise business would be dull—at the morgue.

—Rossini dotes on asparagus. He wants his grave to be covered with a bed of these vegetables, although an oat or two would be more appropriate.

—The Pall Mall Gazette is called the "most implacable of censors." We should style it the most polished of journals and the best paper in England.

—An editor in Algeria was punished not long ago for predicting a famine. Now the French government has sent $80,000 to relieve the famishing Algerians.

—A man starved himself to death in the jail at Danbury, Conn., because he couldn't get out; otherwise the starvation process would have been carried on elsewhere.

—Missouri has passed a law to prevent husbands from abandoning their wives. It is supposed that this act will decrease the number of abandoned women in that State.

—Her Majesty's theatre is to be rebuilt at a cost of $825,000. Walesey is to lay the corner stone. He has gotten so used to laying now that he rivals the hens themselves.

—Mr. Wentworth Dilke has written a new book about America, called Greater Britain. It is said to be fresh and fair, two qualities which rarely characterize an English work.

—Heenan has turned storekeeper. He did it in New York, and his shop is under what once was known as the Maison Dorée. He expects to attract the jeunesse dore as his customers.

—The Boston Post speaking of the effect of a bright day on the Hub, says: "Washington street was radiant with the bloom of female beauty. Some seemed natural and some—acquired."

—Old King Louis, of Bavaria, left eight coffers, one of which is to remain unopened until [illegible] and the rest until 1918. What are these coffers? Perhaps to make a a dam in the tide of curiosity.

—Swinging on a trapeze by the teeth is the latest acrobatic feat in London. It is supposed to be the invention of a dentist who has a large supply of false dentals on hand and for sale.

—Lotta is in Cincinnati doing up Little Nell. Lotta is also doing up the Cincinnatians. There is an excitement about her in that smoky city, but Lotta don't care. Like the eels, she is used to it.

—Mr. Carlyle owns a farm at Craigenputtock, Scotland, and when he writes to his tenant about the management of it, it is said that his letters are as intelligible and sane as those of any other man.

—Tennyson has come back to us, not in silly driblets of still sillier verse, but in another grand poem, where the legions who look upon him as "the great poet" can revel in the consciousness of his genius.

—The mystery of the "Life and Passion of Our Lord Jesus Christ" will not be performed again at Ammergau, in the Tyrol, until 1878. Baroness Tautphoeus gave an excellent description of it in Quits.

—La Marquise de Gallifet is going to Africa in search of her husband. The poor Marquis when he fled from his conjugal relation had probably no idea that she would follow him and carry the war into Africa.

—An exchange says "the Greek fire at Buckingham Palace is paralleled by the brimstone in the United States Capitol." This exchange may be set down as pretty far gone, if he already begins to smell brimstone.

—The latest agony in Berlin is for a family, to retire and leave the gas turned on. The next morning, there is plenty of mourning for the family is dead. Several families have introduced this novelty with suffocating success.

—Buffalo, not being satisfied with water works, now thinks of having pipes laid from the principal breweries of that city through the streets to the various houses of the citizens. A beer meter would decide what each was to pay.

—The Boston Post calls the Ku-klux-klan excitement a humbug. If the Boston Post man had his house burned down and his own throat and those of his wife and children cut, his opinion, if he had any left would be slightly altered.

—To the list of conundrums, who was the first man? who was the oldest man? etc., etc., it is proposed to add, who were the most disappointed men? and the answer will be, the heirs of Elias Howe, Jr., who expected millions and got nothing.

—Dickens said Curtis was the very best speaker he ever heard. And yet he can't speak half as well as he writes, in witness of which statement see "Lotus Eating," "Trumps," "Potiphar Papers," and "the Easy Chair," in Harper's Magazine.

—Father Ignatius, in London, is desponding; he has been treated badly; his monastery, at Norwich, England, has been turned into a cheese warehouse, and what is far worse, no one will martyrize him by ridiculing his habit of going about in a gown, barefooted.

—An insane man living in Foxdale, Isle of Man, threw his five children into a well, attempted without success to treat his wife in the same way, and then jumped in himself. Help arrived and all were taken out, but the man himself and three of his children were already dead.

—Poor William Seward, once the greatest of the great statesmen of the country, honored with the best seats in the high places of the country, and now "on Friday Mr. Seward sat on the floor of the Senate Chamber" and nobody said William wilt thou not go up higher?

Dana, in the Sun, has tried to nominate Mayor Hoffman for President, Minister to the Court of St. James and Governor of New York. Like Phæton who once tried th drive the sun, he seems inclined to run things into the ground. We hope that his punishment may not be as severe.

—Mrs. Cady Stanton calls General Grant "a drunken soldier." Mrs. Stanton ought not to be so severe; she should reflect how dreadfully poor, little, insignificant Grant, who is merely General of the Armies of the United States, must feel when he learns what the great Mrs. Stanton thinks of him.

—The London Spectator says "Gifts of princely amounts—amounts which would yield fortunes in mere interest, have been repeatedly made to great American cities, to colleges, to libraries, and during the lifetime of the donors, but we can scarcely recall an instance of the kind in Great Britain."

—In London on the 6th of June the Newspaper Press Fund people will have a banquet at which H. R. H. the Duke of Cambridge will preside. Why this gentleman is thus chosen, we are unable to learn. He has never been a newspaper man, and if it is on account of his rank, why it is sheer snobbery.

—Arkansas furnishes artificial legs to all persons in that State who lost their natural ones in the war. As the National Government supplies ex-Union soldiers who need them, with false limbs, this may be considered as a mask of charity to cover up the fact that ex-rebels who are cripples receive false limbs from that State.

—Mrs. Senator Spragues bonnet is thus described by an enthusiastic contributor to the Philadelphia Press: She has copied her bonnet from the pansy or wood violet. A single flower of lilac tinge, large enough for the 'new style,' rests upon her head, and is fastened to its place by lilac tulle so filmy that it must have been stolen from the purple midst of the morning.

—Most of the American magazines and reviews this month have something about Boston in them. The Boston publications of course do, as they have always done. This is all supposed to be a sort of conspiracy which these sons of the Pilgrim Fathers have entered into to bring their town prominently before the public, partly to try and induce an influx of strangers to patronize their new hotel and partly to try and overcome the bad effects of Mr. [illegible]
