An incident occurred in this city on Wednesday evening and Thursday morning in which more than an ordinary amount of strategy was exhibited, by one of the parties at least. It was a stragetic affair on both sides, but the parties who undertook and made the first flank movement were beautifully outflanked in the end. The facts are as follows: Mr. J. S. Baldwin, a contractor for the construction of the Nicolson pavement in Memphis, Tennessee, requiring a large quantity of lumber to fill his contracts, went to the and the Allegheny river to to procure the article. He purchased twenty thousand dollars worth of lumber and hired John Walters, Daniel Fleming, D. S. Krotzer, James McKizic, Charles Krotzer, J. W. Young, John Frudand A. J. Toy to raft and run it down to Memphis. They started with the raft several days since, and on Wednesday evening arrived at Herr's Island, where, the owner of the at Horr's Island, where the owner of the lumber having declined to pay them their wages until their contract was fulfilled, they tied the raft up, and went before Al-derman Herron, of the Ninth ward, and had an attachment issued against it, al-leging that Baidwin owed them $400, which leging that Baldwin owed them $400, which he refused to pay. Walters, Fleming, D. S. Krotzer and McKizic remained on the raft to prevent the owner from running it off during the hight. This was the first movement and would have probably been successful had those who made it had a litsuccessful had those who made it had a little of their opponent's cuteness. In order to counteract this march which they had stolen upon him; he went to the Mayor's office and made information charging the entire party with conspiracy. Officer McCready and several others repaired to the raft early Thursday morning and arrested the parties who had possession of it and took them to the Mayor's office. Baldwin followed the officers, and, it appears, had previously contracted with a tow boat to take his raft down the rivor. As soon as the raft was down the river. As soon as the raft was elear he signaled the boat, which took the raft in tow and the proprietor on board and left for some "port below." The parties who had been arrested stated the case to His Honor, who, suspecting all was not right, sent an officer for Baldwin, but the officer failed to find him. Information was with intent to defraud his creditors, and warrant issued for his arrest. He has not been arrested yet, however, and it is hardly probable that he will be. The conspirators were held in their own recognizance for a hearing to-day, when they will most prob-ably be discharged. They had a quantity ably be discharged. They had a quantity of clothing, a gun, and several other articles on board, which, they allege, were carried away by Baldwin, and information was made against him for larceuy. This, we presume, is another piece of strategy in order to reach their opponent by requisi-

A Case of Larceny and its Consequences. Bridget Murphy, a lady of Celticorigin, husband, when a circumstance occurred which has perhaps destroyed her domestic happiness forever. After having remained with her for some time, he gave her an order on Captain Grace for he gave her an order on Captain Grace for $15, alleging that the Captain owed him that sum of money and would pay the order; as soon as presented. Bridget presented the order yesterday and the Captain refused to pay it, saying that he did not now, and never had, owed Hugh anything. Information was made before Alderman McMasters, charging Hugh with obtaining heard under false pretenses: A warrant board under falso pretenses: A warrant was issued and placed; in the hands of officer Prescott, who went to Walker's Mill, where Hugh resides, in search of him.

Boy Drowned. Betwen four and five o'clock last evening. Michael, Brough, a boy aged nine years, was drowned in the Allegheny river near the St. Clair street suspension bridge. He, in company with several other boys, was playing on some oil flats which are moored therecand in stepping from ope to another slipped and fell in between them. The current being quite strong at that point he was carried indea one of the flats. His companions have the elem, when several men panions gaye the alarm, when several men ran to his justimeet, buttoo latete do more than take his lifeless body from the water, after it had been carried undor the boats. Coroner Clawson being absent from town on official business, the body was removed to the residence of the parents of deceased, and an inquest will be held this morning.

Interesting.—An amusing scene, to persons having an appreciation for such entertainments, occurred at the Union Depot yesterday. Two females, who, it appears, are relatives by marriage, met in the waiting room of the depot, and immediately a quarrel began. Criminations and recriminations passed, and at length one being the better talker, said something the other could not "gyallow," and she "went to her selection and the "went for her selections are the best grant of the "mill" the officers interfered and stopped the disgraceful proceedings.

Death by Suicide. The Deed Deliberately Meditated-Letter Written by the De-mood. He retired to his room on Monday last, when it is presumed he committed the deed, although it was not discovered until nate man was tired of life:

"CINCINNATI, Ohio, April 24, 1868.
"To the Coroner of Cincinnati:

DEAR SIR—As you may be called to serve me in an official manner, please note the following suggestion: A telegram addressed to my father, W. K. Adams, Esq., 31

Bank street, Cleveland, Ohio, may relieve you of some care and responsibility. you of some care and responsibility. Respectfully yours, &c., "C. W. Adams."

"P. S.—You may render a verdict as follows: Weary with the battle of life, disgusted with the past, displeased with the present, without hope for the future, satiated with the sorrows and afflictions as well as the joys of life, whether my destiny is fulfilled or not, Fate snuffs the candle and says—adieu?.

C. W. ADAMS."

"How I write a word is more than I can understand, for I certainly am not in the humor. It may be a satisfaction, however, o a chosen few, to have the assurance that I shall ever cherish the friendship and many kindnesses bestowed upon me. I have failed in my undertakings, and I cannot think it was entirely through want of tenacity or strength of purpose—failed in every enterprise and undertaking, both of private and business nature, some of which have been very dear to me. To accom-plish the most promising, my efforts have been the most futile, so that in reality my whole life has been one series of errors, or mistakes and failures. At first, pecuniary ambarrassments stare me in the face, in stern reality. I have already exhausted every available resource, and now have no way whatever to turn for succor. Should my departure occasion grief to any one, they still have the satisfaction of knowing that all earthly sorrows have ceased with me. I am very well aware that my life has not been a faultless one; yet the know-ledge of even one act of kindness, if no more, is a satisfaction none can deny me. If my friends, amidst all the bitterness of memory, can recall to mind one virtue I bossessed, let them cherish it, for I take ny life with feelings of charity to all mankind, and harbor enmity toward none. "As my coming into the world occasioned sorrow and affliction, may my exit occasion much less, is the prayer of CHARLES W. ADAMS."

Officer Gumbert went to the depot yesterday, thinking that the parties in question might have been delayed, and on his arrival there found a man who anspair having always been intimate, Peggy resolved to visit her friend. She came, and so rejoiced was Bridget to meet her old friend that a bottle was brought and innumerable bumpers, in which each drank the health of the other, were gulped down. man and woman, as they were talking in a very earnest manner, and appeared to be quarelling. The officer arfested them and took them before the Mayor, who telegraphed to Harrisburg stating that a man and woman answering the description of the parties wanted had been arrested; and that they had a little girl with them, to which he received a reply that there was no child with the parties who had eloped. The case here assumed another form. The woman, who it appears is engaged in selling stationery, was the widow of a Mr. Frumn, and lately married Frank Carlton aliasHail, whom she alleges does not use her well, and, who she says has another wife. She wishes to get rid of him her well, and, who she says has another wife. She wishes to get rid of him but cannot, as he follows her every place she goes, and compels her to pay his bills from what she acquires from the sale of stationery. The Mayor informed her that he could not grant her a divorce—that she would have to apply to a higher Court. She replied that she did not care, she would not live with that man another day; if she could do nothing better she would take could do nothing better she would take "pizen." The husband insists that she shall return with him to New York, whence shall return with him to New York, whence they came, but she flatly refuses to do so. They left the Mayor's office together, but whether she succeeded in getting rid of her troublesome lord or no, we are unable to say. If she takes the "pizen" we will let our readers know, provided we hear of it.

Fatal Accident-Coroner's Inquest. An accident occurred about nine o'clock yesterday morning on the railroad connecting the Pittsburgh and Connellsville with the Pennsylvania Railroad, at Port Perry, passed over his body, almost completely severing it. He arrived at the Hotel on the 16th | perfect second representation, but as it inst. and appeared to be in a desponding was, it was quite up to the average of the play-goer's experience at this house. As a museum of histrionic curiosities, the stock company of the Opera House reflects the Wednesday. The following letter which highest credit upon the antiquarian rewas found in his room, shows that the act searches of the management, and an occawas a deliberate one, and that the unfortu-sional visit to the collection is attended searches of the management, and an occa-sional visit to the collection is attended with not unprofitable results to the student of the curious in dramatic exhibitions.

It is saddening to witness so many unhappy failures in any walk of life, but it affords at the same time a lesson upon the infirmities of our poor human nature, to contemplate the melancholy delusions which afflict mankind and of which this company of player-folks present such remarkable instances. An old fable embodies the sage wisdom of a venerable parent who illustrated to his children the educations of mice hy chest. a venerable parent who illustrated to his children the advantages of union by showing them that while one stick was easily broken, a bundle of sticks, made up into a faggot, and well tied together, was strong enough to resist all ordinary assaults. This wise parent would be disposed to adopt another illustration if his ill-fortune had condemned him not only to live to our days the test of the state of the him not only to live to our day, but to at-tend occasionally at the Opera House. He would at once perceive the absurdity of the idea that such a bundle of sticks as he would find there possesses any inherent strength whatever. Each stick "brash" through and through, and the "dimnition total," when bundled together, but serves to multiply the individual feebleness to a degree distressing beyond expression.

But the experience of the critical visitor last evening, painful as might have been its sense of the ludicrous, would not have been entirely without compensation. A generous heart could not have failed to be deeply touched with admiration for the deeply touched with admiration for the Spartan horoism of the one or two reasonably good actors who found themselves compelled to accept a temporary martyrdom in being cast in the same representation with the rabble-rout who in the progress of the play strutted their brief moments before the foot-lights. It really gave one an ennobling idea of the dignity to which our poor nature is sometimes permitted to rise to behold the calm courage, the unflinching stoicism with which the worthier actors bore with the extravagances of manner, absurdities of delivery and ruthless disregard of the proprieties of the comedy on the part of the majority of the performrs. Mr. Adams' Young Rover did not promise in the earlier scenes to be worthy of his general reputation. We were gratified to observe that in the third act he warmed to his work, and succeeded A Troublesome Husband.

A case of rather a peculiar and interesting character, came before the Mayor vestige to the reader some faint idea of the ulties with which he found himself struggling, and which he labored with praiseworthy fortitude to overcome. Under favorable auspices, and with an adequate support, Mr. Adams can maintain upon any stage the worthy reputation which he has achieved. With the single exception of one of the ladies of the regular company, his support last evening was such as would have disheartened an acwas such as would may disheartened an ac-tor of less courage and fidelity. With this allowance, we feel that his exertions to make Wild Oats acceptable to the audience were entitled to very high praise. THE CIRCUS.—Owing to the lateness of the hour at which the greatest of all American circuses, that of Thayer & Noyes, arrived in Birmingham yesterday, the grand triumphal procession through the streets was postponed until this morning at ten o'clock, when it will positively take place, proceeding to Allegheny. A grand performance will be given in the afternoon, another to-night, and so to-morrow afternoon and evening at the same place. This noon and evening at the same place. This is the most complete and best regulated circus and menagerie which has ever cast tent in this vicinity. On Monday next it opens at the old Red Lion lot, where a carnival of fun for old and young may be anticinated.

The Concert Last Night. The concert of vocal and instrumental music at the Manchester Presbyterian Church last evening attracted a large and fashionable audience, and all who attended were afforded a rare musical feast. The performances sustained the high reputation enjoyed by the ladies and gentlemen who participated in the programme. The trio on the piano, organ and violin, "La Traviata" by Messrs. Mollor, Ebert and Prof. Manning was a charming execution, displaying the talent and ability of those gentlemen, so well known in musical circles, admirably, and eliciting hearty applause from the audience. The "standard bearer," a vocalization of much merit and thrilling effect, called out to the standard of the standard bearer," thrilling effect, called forth for Mr. Breed a thrilling effect, called forth for Mr. Breed a hearty encore which he graciously acquiesced to and rendered in equally spirited style "I'am affoat," an air that never could prove tedious to the listener, especially when so well rendered as it was last evening. "Se Crudele," a melodious operatiogem, was sweetly given by Mrs. C. C. Mellor. That the audience was delighted was evidenced in the hearty and rapturous encore which followed the rendition. The audience was abundantly rewarded for their exertions to secure another vocalization from the sweet-

The various violus soles of Prof. Manning were warmly received, and the appreciation of the audience for the flow of melody drawn warmly received, and the appreciation of the audience for the flow of melody drawn by the faithful bow by so skillful an artist was attested by the exhibition of hearty applause, which greeted the several performances. In the second part, the concert lost none of its brilliancy. The plaintive melody of "Home, Sweet Home" was warbled in an elegant manner by Mrs. Mellor, who was again called forth to sing the equally sweet song "Tis the Last Rose of Summer." Mr. Breed's "Old Sexton" was finely rendered, as was also the trio from "Faust," instruas was also the trio from "Faust," instru-mental, by Messrs. Mellor, Manning and Ebert. The concert was a decided success in every particular, and the large attendance was a fitting acknowledgment of the merits of the amateurs who participated. Assault and Hattery. —In the Supreme Court of Cincinnati M. Haworth brought an action against J. W. Turner, for the recovery of fifty thousand dollars, the proceeds of a sale of cotton, the produce of the defendant's plantations in Louisiana, which the plaintiff tations in Louisiana, which the plaintiff claimed by virtue of a purchase through an agent in 1894. Defendant was absent in France during the rebellion, and sent Wm. Poyntell as agent, without instructions. The defendant, upon his return, repudiated the contract with Haworth on the ground that Poyntell had no authority to make it, also, that it was void, as being contrary to the commercial than the comm the act of Congress prohibiting commercial intercourse with the inhabitants of the rebellious States. The Court decided all questions against the defendant and awarded the funds to plaintiff after deducting the ontract price.

THE papers at Finley, Hancock county, Ohio, complain that the court there was adjourned, a day or two ago, to give the Judge time to get a drink. Being refused at the saloons, "His Honor," whose other name appears to be Conklin, "staggered to the hotel, and left lawyers, Sheriff, jurors and witnesses to pass the time as best suited them.'

"POOR TOM'S A' COLD." How warm soe'er the genial sun May look in kindness on the earth. In Tom Jones' veins no cheering warmth Dispels the gloomy sorrow of his soul.

Dyspepsia, like a goblin, hunts him down.
