IT is simply just to the friends of Senator WADE to state that the opposition alleged to exist against him among the Ohio Republicans is confined to his own immediate district, is represented by one or two journals at most, is based entirely upon personal siderations connected with the disposal of the Federal offices in that section, and is not shared by any numerically respectable portion of the Republican party. There are several candidates urged at Chicago for the second place on the ticket, who are much less fortunate than Mr. WADE in securing an undivided support from their respective States. Thus much in justice to a sound Republican and deservedly eminent Senator.

GENERAL GRANT'S intention to decline the Chicago nomination was reported yesterday afternoon. The rumor is probably based upon a letter of acceptance already written, modestly deprecating any undue expectations which his countrymen may entertain of his executive abilities. If he should also have added an expression of his belief that the Convention might have found some worthier nomines than himself, his letter will be characteristic of the man, and afford another proof, not that the man seeks the office, but that the office seeks and has found a man really worthy of it. Copper-Leads may represent that as a declination, but the American people will think otherwise in November.

THE Conservative journals complain of the harshness with which they and the recreant Senators are handled. We think this complaint comes from them with a bad grace. Of all the journals in this country, they are most conspicuous for severity of language and uncharitableness of imputation. Indeed, the larger share of the reputation they enjoy for superior intellectua force and acumen has been produced by cheek to say harsh and injurious things of those from whom they have differed, rather than by mental power to develop ideas, or trace analogies, or conduct trains of close argumentation. Their favorite weapon has been the tomaliawk, and they do not relish the application of it to their own skulls
