Doubrs are expressed as to the ability of Republican Senators to carry the bills for the admission of the new States by majorities sufficient to overide a Presidential veto. But it is intimated from Washington that the President will not veto the Arkansas bill, suffering it, when passed, to become a law without his legal assent, and also that the newly-formed political cabal will not oppose the admission of the Southern States; in fact, they prefer them admitted immediately.

The sentiments of Gen Grant, upon two questions which of late, have awakened a lively interest within the hearts of the people have been very plainly declared. THE NATIONAL CONVENTION. The Republicans met in quadrennial council at Chicago yesterday. All the States and territories were fully represented. An organization was quietly and promptly effected at the usual hour, the preliminary Committees were appointed, and a recess taken to five o'clock. The brief addresses of Gov. WARD, Chairman of the Executive Committee, and of Hon. CARL SCHURZ, who was appointed temporary Chairman of the Convention, recognized the living faith of Republicanism, and the vital importance of its mission. The dangers of the hour, from within and without, were fitly alluded to,

MOORHEAD, On taking the chair, the President gave utterance to a speech full of patriotism, which received an enthusiastic reception. Johnson, ordered my arrest and imprisonment. After my release your courts, were open and I was left free to act. I felt then that the time had come when I should make my choice between this land and this Government and some other land with this Government and some other land with some other Government. I still love my own native land the best. [Cheers, cries of "good," "go on."] And with your construction of the Constitution, established by the sword, I still prefer this Government of the United States to any other organized Government. If I remained and the delegates were reminded of the just in this Government. It is remained here, I must seek amnesty of the Government for the past and I must sak its protection for the future. If ityleided me that, I was in honor bound to return ed me that, I was in honor bound to return to my allegiance and make a good citizen if I could. [Cheers of "good," "good," and cheers.] Hence I have advocated every measure from that time till this for reconstruction. [Applause.] When the President of the United States proposed his plan, I advised our people to accept it, because we had fallen and we had no other power to negotiate with but him. He did not call Congress together. When Congress, which had the legitimate control of this question, [Cheers and prolonged applause.]

Then what was the Constitutional Amendment? There was but one lissee in it, and that was the suffrage question and that Congress less with the City.

It is reported at Washington that Johnson's acquittal with the eleventh article has cost the whisky ring three millions of dollars. They could well afford to pay it, and more, to keep him as their screen for nine months longer. It is worthy of note that the investigation into the job is already bearing its first fruits. There is certainly large numbers of original Democrats; there are large numbers of original Secessionists in the south who to-day stand firmly by the Republican party, and will support the great Captain of the age, Gen.
