AN OLD FASHIONED RATIFICATION.

The rousing meeting of Saturday night did honor to the Republicans of these cities and the country. There were no guns, bonfires or fireworks to attract a multitude, the evening was not a disgrace, and beyond the notices printed in the press and the small "posters" which were distributed about the town and its vicinity, there was absolutely nothing but the strength of the ticket, of our political principles, and of the deep and resolute feeling of our Republicans, to call out the overflowing and demonstrative crowd which filled the City Hall.

We print this morning a very full report of the proceedings of the meeting, the resolutions adopted, and of the eloquent speeches which gave expression to Allegheny county's ratification of the action taken at Chicago. But no language of ours can do adequate justice to the enthusiastic spirit which was displayed by this great gathering. Each mention of the names of our candidates, each allusion, however remote, to the services and merits of GRANT and COLFAX, were welcomed with hearty and prolonged applause. The resolutions, which have the true ring of an uncompromising loyalty, were carried in a whirlwind of cheers, while the speeches were effectively pointed and eloquent, and it was noticeable that the more radical the utterances, the more prompt and decided was the popular response.

When a delegate pledged this county for ten thousand majority for GRANT and COLFAX, and when the pledge was ratified by such a demonstration as that of our Republicans on Saturday night, it may as well be understood at once that it was no idle rant. Our Republicans mean business, and intend to back up their opinions.

And now for work, boys!

SENATORIAL PURITY is likely to be most unpleasantly illustrated by the results of the investigation which is now unravelling the mystery of the President's acquittal on the eleventh article by the vote of seven yeas and thirteen nays. Developments of the utmost importance have been made; fully establishing the fact that undue influences were employed to secure that treachery. And the fact is also reported as clearly established that the plot to defeat impeachment included within a scheme for the advancement of CHASE as the Conservative candidate for the next Presidency. Every day reveals additional testimony that the great criminal was not honestly acquitted.

THE EIGHTH RESOLUTION in the Chicago platform presents a powerful impeachment of the President, and declares that he has been justly proceeded against "for high crimes and misdemeanors, and properly pronounced guilty thereof by the vote of thirty-five Senators." A motion by Occurrence, of New York, to add thereto the words, "and improperly acquitted by nineteen Senators," was received by the Convention with an outburst of applause which made it evident that the amendment, if pressed, would be carried. It was felt, however, by judicious and discreet delegates, that the addition was needless, the resolution as reported already expressing the marked judgment of the Convention, and that the spirit of the proposed amendment would be the inevitable inference of the language as it stood. The amendment was therefore withdrawn. Retiring Republicans who are impervious to the censure which the resolution conveys, would be equally indifferent to a more specific denunciation. They are lawyers enough to know that the suggestion of one part is the exclusion of another, and that commendation for the faithful advocacy of the measure is the reproach for the renegade.

REFORMS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

D'Israeli fights every inch of the ground, in the retention of Ministerial power against the Liberal assaults. Mr. Gladstone's motion on Friday for a second reading of the bill suspending the further use of the Royal patronage in the Irish, Church Establishment, was urged by that leader as the legitimate sequence of previous votes of the Commons, and of the assent which the Queen had given to the suggestions of their Address. Ministers, on the other hand, resisted it as a misstatement of Her Majesty's reply, as an abuse of the concession to which she had assented, and as unjustifiably stripping the Crown of its greatest prerogative. The issue of Church and State, and of the supremacy of Protestantism, was directly and unequivocally presented, with a specific precision and confident audacity which manifested the reliance of the Cabinet upon the sectarian fanaticism of the English people for their ultimate triumph. Contending for a great stake, the Administration boldly unmasked their strongest batteries, and the debates, for the first time, in plain words and with the most direct reference to the consequences in their train, dealt directly with the underlying vital issues. It was no longer a skirmish upon the exterior lines, but a hand-to-hand fight for the key of the position. Evidently, the debate of Friday last, and its result, a majority of fifty-four for the Liberals on Mr. Gladstone's motion, was the most significant and decisive development we have yet seen of the tendencies and the strength of Democratic Progress in Great Britain.

Any other Ministry than the present, would now abandon the contest. The last and most effective resistance has been made; Royal prerogative, Protestant supremacy, the hereditary attachment of Englishmen to Constitutional privileges, never before disputed as the right of the Crown, the yet deeper religious feeling of the Nation—all have been appealed to, and the result is an other defeat. The Liberal majority is only reduced from sixty-six to fifty-four, and this result, showing the futility of further argument, leaves Mr. D'Israeli in a minority more than ever hopeless.

The progress of events is rapidly forcing the English Cabinet to a new Parliamentary election or a surrender, and not even their prompt concessions on the Scotch and other points, or the Representative Reform can save them. The defeat of last Friday was a blow of irreparable magnitude. There is no doubt that a corrupt bargain was consummated at Washington, last Saturday week, by which, for a price, the hopes of the country were frustrated, and the expectations of a great party betrayed. So far as this price was pecuniary, Senators, who bartered their oaths, their patriotism and their personal honor, probably received the consideration in hand, and the low cunning of the contracting parties may prove successful in baffling the investigation now going on. And, so far as the plot contemplated the defeat of Senator WADE as a candidate at Chicago, their cabal has also proved successful. But we have good cause to rejoice, that the considerations for this infamous treachery have failed in all other respects. The Chief Justice, who would have ensured his own elevation to the Presidency, has only achieved the extinguishment of all his hopes forever. One week ago, we declared that he would only hereafter be remembered as the chief traitor in an abortive cabal, and events, which these momentous times are rapidly evolving, have already moved the accuracy of the prediction. Mr. CHASE has dragged after him, in his frantic scud from the well defined orbit of an honorable and consistent statesmanship, no following what ever beyond the ruined Senator who were his co-plotters in this intrigue. Neither he nor they have seduced one Republican vote to their support. Even the Southern blacks, who a twelve month since regarded the Chief Justice as the highest embodiment of their hopes of political liberty, now turn from him, disgusted and estranged forever. All the parties to this intrigue are hereafter to be, if not unknown, at least infinitesimal quantities in American politics, and their only remaining hope is that the country which has discarded them may cover their memories and their disgrace with the same mantle of oblivion.

WHEN MR. HORACE GREELEY first entered ball for Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS the Conservative journals denounced him with an unmitigated furor of malignity. They seemed to have two ends in view, and with about equal earnestness; one, to exhibit how demoralized they could be in thought and action; the other, to annihilate the victim of their animosity. Public sentiment was largely on their side; and they improved the opportunity to the utmost. Nor was this an exceptional demonstration. Conservatism uniformly displays itself under this aspect when it has the upper-hand, or fancies it has.

Some of the Conservative journals, which, if they did not instigate, the course of TRUMBULL, FESSENDEN and Company are now exposed to a storm of popular obloquy and contempt. Instead of exhibiting the temper with philosophic composure, they piteously beseech their assailants to show moderation. They dislike the equitable rule, "with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again;" and implore the exercise of charity, forbearance and brotherly kindness. Some of them go so far in whining appeals, as to demonstrate what, measured to you again, by reason of their bravado and insolence when on the strong side, that they have no genuine courage and self-reliance, but only a wolfish ferocity, which leads them to be fierce in gangs, but meekling when assailed by equal powers.

The Evening Advertiser newspaper has been purchased by Messrs. Campbell & Young, and is soon to be issued as a penny paper. The first named gentleman has been heretofore an editor of the same journal and is therefore well and very favorably known to this community. The other gentleman comes here from Philadelphia. They have for some time been engaged in the same business.

REPRESENTATION IN NATIONAL CONVENTIONS.

For many years after the formation of the government of the United States, National Conventions for the nomination of candidates for President and Vice President were not invented. Each of the political parties devolved that duty upon its members of the Senate and House of Representatives. After a time these Congressional Caucuses fell into disrepute. Not that they resulted in the nomination of incompetent and inferior men for the highest places of political trust. So far otherwise, it is not disputed that, throughout the period covered by the use of that instrumentality the candidates presented to the people were of much greater average excellence than those brought forward since the introduction of the existing system. But the politicians became jealous of the additional authority conferred on Congressmen, and it was resolved to take from them the privilege of nominating Presidential candidates. To this end the National Convention was devised.

This body was constituted on the plan of a joint meeting of the two Houses of Congress. The next best thing to the Senate and House combined, as the most equitable arrangement possible. The Senatorial delegates were elected by State Conventions; the District delegates by local conferences. Both these classes of delegates were held amenable to instructions by the power respectively appointing them, and by no other. There was a system of genuine representation; equitable, uniform, consistent, harmonious, and easily understood.

Though it comported exactly with the genius of the government, scheming politicians became dissatisfied with it. Hence, they devised the scheme of having the State Conventions appoint the District delegates; which was analogous to having the members of Congress of each State chosen by the Legislature thereof. With this power of appointment, was logically given the power of instruction; for, by this system, the District delegates no longer represented district constituencies, but were deputies of the State Convention, and bound to do its will. This was a wide and mischievous departure from the idea of keeping the authority as near as possible to the people.

But, it turned out that Delegates appointed in this way, frequently had so much of the instinct of republican loyalty that they would carry out the wishes of the people of their respective districts, rather than the dictates of the State Convention. To prevent this, the Legislature of each State was required to instruct its delegates; and, in accordance with the nature and just use of the National Convention. Of course, the self-constituted managers of the Pennsylvania delegation had to succumb.

The law of National Conventions, so far as relates to the Republican party, may now be taken as settled. We cannot refrain from remarking, moreover, that the law is decided to be the GAZETTE has steadily maintained it was. It is not a few of our political friends in this State have thought us needlessly sensitive and, perhaps, capricious, the National Convention adjudged the point we raised intrinsic, if not vital, and coincided with us in its decision.

It is easy to see how the plan of voting which we condemn, and the enjoined silence, which we deplore, might enable a dozen adroit and unprincipled managers to barter the weight and authority of a delegation in the political scramble, for their own emolument or elevation; but we cannot comprehend that a minority, respectable in capacities and position, will ever submit to the debasement. We rejoice that the minority of the Pennsylvania delegation in the recent National Convention not only asserted their rights, but asserted them as to obtain a judgment in their favor from the highest tribunal of the Republican party.

This decision is not only just in itself, but must tend, if anything can, to allay that bitterness of faction which dishonors the Republican party of this Commonwealth, and puts its continued success in peril. Small there not be a trace to this mischievous contention?

We regret to learn there is a strong probability that the Republicans of the Bradford district will return Rep. GEORGE LAMOND to the State Senate. That he possesses uncommon abilities as a debater is acknowledged on all hands, but he has made a reputation in other particulars which renders it highly desirable that he should be permitted to the duties of private life.

The manufacture of Pittsburgh, and its vicinity, are again reminded of the very important Convention to be held at Cleveland on Wednesday next, the 28th inst. It is desirable that the leading industries of this region should be fully and competently represented; and that the proper arrangements be made at once.

A NEW LINE of railway, leading directly from Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, to the harbor of New York, has been projected, and the surveys for it made. The impetus to this enterprise proceeds from the necessity of additional facilities for the anthracite coal trade.

THE VICE-PRESIDENCY—How the Nomination was Effected.

A Chicago dispatch to the Cincinnati Gazette thus describes the scene, and its prominent actors after the fourth ballot of the Convention for the Vice Presidency: "Suddenly now, waited to adjourn, but the Convention was so excited as a party of gamblers when the bets range among the thousands, and the hands have been dealt out, and no suggestions of dinner could be tolerated, the third ballot, which had few changes save that Colfax gained here and there a few votes. Wilson lost and Curtin ran down to the solitary vote of his own State. The crisis was now known by everybody at hand, when Colfax, Alex. McLure of Pennsylvania, one of the shrewdest wire-pullers in that State of wire-pullers, took the platform to read a letter of withdrawal from Governor Curtin. Pennsylvania instantly rose to its feet. Would they go? Would reason be respected then, and it was pretty certain that wherever their weight was thrown victory would perch. Evidently Pennsylvania's themselves saw their power, and gallantly appreciated the situation. The tendency was to expect them, and toward Wade as the call progressed. Wilson lost all his limbs till Curtin he seemed passing out of the list of candidates, but Colfax was called for. Wade would they go?
