In our ecclesiastical relations there is a something quite analogous. The Chinese is or the Japanese were not more effectually it shut up and secluded from the rest of the world than were the different denomina-tions of professing Christians from each other, until near the middle of this present century. A more liberal policy has been inaugurated. We have reciprocated salu-tations, and this has already mitigated some of the aspertiles, inseparable from the fact of separate denominational existence, and enabled us to feel some interest in each other's welfare, to wish and pray for each gate. The Moderator then addressed the deleother's welfare, to wish and pray for each
