THE RACE. Coultter Breaks an Oar and Stops on the Third Stroke—Hamill Goes Over the Course and Claims the Race—The Stakes Awarded to Hamill.

Special Dispatch to the Pittsburgh Gazette. PHILADELPHIA, June 19, 1868. The excitement regarding the race subsided yesterday, and while many hundred persons lined the banks of the Schuylkill to-day to witness the final feat between Hamill and Coultter, still the general interest had subsided.

At four o'clock, both men made their appearance in their boats and were greeted with a mild form of applause from their respective friends.

Coultter unfortunately broke his right oar in the third stroke, but Hamill rowed on over the course and came back leisurely to the judges' boat, and claimed the race.

Hamill has been awarded the stakes and declared the winner. He hesitated to accept the award but his friends urged him to do so, as it is in strict keeping with the rules of the course.

Hamill was declared the winner. Time thirty-eight minutes and twenty seconds.
