This is a tough story, but the Inquirer, of that city, puts it off as truth. -A foreign correspondent writes that "the Servian business still occupies attention; but to use the stereotyped phrase, does not seem likely to give rise to "political complications." The only probable inference, to be drawn at present from the event which has happened there, is that it has been dictated by the jealousy of the rival families and partisans of Black Georges and the late Prince Michael; the Capulets and Montagues of Belgrade. Russia seems to have no intention of interfering actively at present, and the Servians are to be "left to elect their own ruler;" which seems, however, to me little more than that the party which is uppermost for the moment will be allowed to fill the vacant throne." -Royalty, so far as the young generation is concerned, seems to be every where on the decline. Wales is no worse than the other Crown Princes. The Crown Prince of Holland, as was recently proved in a French court, where Julet Favre said he should be called not his Highness, but his baseness, is a downright scamp. The Crown Prince of Russia, is an illustured, scrofulous youth, who is disliked by nearly every member of his own family. Prince Humbert, of Italy, is the Italian Wales; perhaps a little worse. The Crown Prince of Saxony is a bigoted tool of the priests. The Crown Prince of Denmark was last year Wales' companion in Paris, and at the German watering places. The Crown Prince of Prussia is a good man, but rather dull, and a hen-pecked husband.

-Mr. Longfellow, in his reply to the address of the Carlisle Literary Society, said: "Coming here as a stranger, this welcome makes me feel that I am not a stranger; for how can a man be a stranger in a country where he finds all doors and all hearts open to him? Besides, I'myself am a Cumberland man, I was born in the county of Cumberland, in the State of Maine-three thousand miles from nere-and you all know that the familiar name of a town or county has a home-like sound to all ears. And yet there is much strangeness in this now, when I come to the land of my fathers and find in it no trace of my family or name. If I am to find them at all it will not be in the streets of towns or on the outside of the houses of the living, but in the grave-yards and on the doors of the dead."

-In view of the important eclipse of the sun which is to take place on the 18th of August, the German newspapers are publishing the following singular decree, which Frederick II., Prince of Hesse, issued in 1690, in regard to a similar event. It is as follows:

"SEPTEMBER, 1699. "Whereas, His Highness has been informed that a highly dangerous eclipse of the sun will take place next Wednesday, September 23, at 10 a. m., His Highness, as a good father of his people, deems it incumbent upon himself to advise all persons to keep their cattle at home on the day previous to the eclinse, and for several afterward, to provide the necessary fodder for this purpose, to shut the doors and windows of the stables, to cover the wells carefully, and to secure the cellars and barns. lest the noxious vapors of the air should penetrate into them and breed infection, nasmuch as so dangerous an eclipse may give rise to whooping cough, severe rheumatism, palsy, epilepsy, malignant fevers, and even pestilential epidemics."

Poisoning from Jealousy. A singular story is just now running the rounds of Paris society. In the garden of the Tuilleries, about a fortnight since, a young lady elegantly attired accosted nurse who held a headtiful child of about eleven months old by the hand, and asked permission to embrace it and give it some sweetmeats. The nurse accepted them without distrust, and saw with pleasure the Chicago, stopped her husband from quarrel-ling with a man she loved better, by pour-ing scalding water out of a tea kettle down his back. hand a biscuit, the half of which it swallowed, the nurse eating the other half. The child soon after began to cry, and shortly in her turn, was seized with pains in the stomach and vomitings, and notwithstand ing the efforts made to save her, died at the end of three days. Before she breathed her last, however, she was able to give a deder of Mr. Burlingame. It is of yellow scription of the lady who had administered bunting, thirty feet by twenty, and displays the poison, and the lady has been arrested upon its folds a monster dragon in blue. The story runs that she had been the mistress of the child's father, who has been married only a couple of years, and that it was jealousy which prompted her in the commission of the ed for parts unknown, leaving bills unpaid crime. It is expected that the case will

In concluding his speech he remarks: "The proposal to purchase the fee simple of Aliaska for $10,000,000 in gold is not a joke; some of the wealthiest men in the United States stand ready to make good my proposition."
