THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION. The third day's session of this body yesterday was occupied in the reception of the platform, a brief discussion upon the two-thirds rule, the presentation of the names of candidates, and with six ineffectual ballots for a choice, after which the Convention adjourned to this morning.

Of the platform, we have the text in full and allude to it elsewhere. The Committee were unanimous in reporting it and the Convention nearly so in its adoption. The most strict interpretation of the two-thirds rule was agreed upon, in requiring that a nomination be effected only by that ratio of the full electoral vote. Consequently, the successful candidate must have at least two hundred and twelve votes. Names were then presented and the balloting commenced, as detailed in the regular report. PENDELTON gained steadily from 105, closing at 122; JOHNSON dwindled from 85 at the opening to 21 at the close. New York and Pennsylvania adhered to their respective straw candidates throughout, while the other Eastern and the Southern delegates voted in a small way for a half dozen very respectable Democrats.

Until Mr. CHASE returned to the Democratic party, its ranks held no politicians so inconsistent, so reckless of a decent respect for the opinion of honest men, as the Chief Justice will prove himself to be in accepting a nomination on that platform. Democratic politicians have never been conspicuous for their faithful adherence to a particular line of public policy. Nor has such a fidelity always suited the exigencies of the party. But when Mr. CHASE takes position upon the Democratic platform of '68, he presents an instance of political insincerity without previous example in the history of American parties.

PENNSYLVANIA, on the other hand, is a unit for Asa Packard, and expresses themselves as contented to support his claims to the very last. They are not contented to support him, but they are contented to support his claims to the very last. They are not contented to support him, but they are contented to support his claims to the very last.

THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM.

The Old Bourbons of the party have again shaped its National policy. Copperheadism rules its councils as despotically, and with as little practical wisdom as when, at Chicago, in '64, the war was declared to be a failure. The hope, so freely entertained of late, both within and without the lines of the party organization, that wiser and more moderate utterances would mark the Democratic perception of the progress of events, ignoring dead issues and recognizing a fixed and unchangeable fact to which a reasonable testimony—this hope, that Democracy would be found profiting by the bitter experience of the last eight years, has proved once more a delusion.

The platform commits the party to the most extreme ideas of ultra extreme men, and concedes nothing that indulgent patriotism which would accept the inevitable situation and honestly accept the inevitable situation and honestly accept the inevitable situation.

There are but two courses open before the Government. One is repudiation, either partial or entire. The other, to meet its obligations according to the terms and in the spirit in which they were incurred. To the latter course the Republican party stands pledged, and that pledge, no matter what seeming vacillations may occur, will be redeemed.

THE SUPREME COURT, in deciding the Registry Law to be unconstitutional and void, was guilty of an unwarrantable stretch of authority, which tends powerfully to protect frauds upon the purity of the ballot-boxes.

THE CONSTITUTION of the Commonwealth provides what things shall be necessary to constitute a person a voter. The person must be a male, both free and white, of the full age of twenty-one years, a citizen of the United States, a resident of this State one year, of the particular election district ten days, and must have paid a State or county tax within the year.

THE BETRAYAL OF PENDELTON.

The annexed paragraph, telegraphed from New York late on Monday night, by a disheartened friend of "young greenbacks," to Western Democratic journals, tells probably the whole story of "one more unfortunate." Thus "Mack" writes:

The opposition to Pendleton is becoming more intense every hour and the efforts to effect his defeat are multiplying. The board of candidates now determined to best him, and if he is beaten by any candidate now in the field against him, it will be because money is stronger than principle in the Convention.

THE HENDRICKS movement is another, subdued, but not destroyed. Every hour or so Tammany touches the galvanic battery, the corpse rises and looks in a menacing manner at Pendleton, and then lays down, and the hands, as if praying for oblivion and rest.

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS' CONVENTION. Report of Committee Endorsing the Platform of the Democratic Convention—Dissemination of the Platform of the Democratic Convention in the City of New York.

CHASE is still talked of, and every man who is connected with the banks is in his element. He has votes here and there—some in Maine—some in Georgia—two in North Carolina, and one in Virginia, and can, upon the pinch, secure the solid vote of New York, but the great body of the Convention is hostile to his pretensions.

THE CAPITAL.

WASHINGTON, July 7, 1868. The following nominations were sent in to the Senate by Mr. Lewis D. Wesson, Assessor of Internal Revenue, Third District, Missouri; Tubman Ayres, Register of Land Office at Boise City, Idaho.

THE REPUBLICAN CAUCUS. The Republican Senators held a caucus today to consider the question of adjournment. Many of the Senators favored an adjournment of the session as soon as the tax and appropriation bills had been passed. The funding bill has already been made the special order by the Senate immediately after disposing of the tax bill.

NEW YORK REPUBLICAN CONVENTION. Syracuse, N. Y., July 7.—Nearly all the delegates to the Republican State Convention have arrived, and it is expected that the work of the Convention will be speedily transacted. The nomination of Hon. Lyman Tremain, of Albany, is very generally conceded to-night.

CHICAGO CATTLE MARKET. Chicago, July 7.—Beef cattle—the better grades more active and 25c higher; hogs—$4.62 for common cows to sterling prime hogs. Hogs firm and 25c higher; sales at $7.87, $9.25 for light to extra choice.

THE STEAMER IMPORTER, from the Upper Missouri, arrived at St. Joseph on Monday, with fifty thousand dollars in treasure. Large number of Indians were camped along the river, but they were generally friendly. Father Desmet was at St. Rice with fifty hostile chiefs. A grand council was to have commenced on the 1st instant. A party of seven prospectors in Wind River Valley were attacked by a large body of Indians on the 25th ult., and Henry Seman was killed, and three others are supposed to be killed. The Indians lost eight.

CURE OF FISTULA. Dr. KISTEN writes to thank you for your kindness and scientific management of my disease, for which I called to consult you some time in January last. You will remember that I had a complication of diseases, which finally ended in a terrible fistula, which I had been advised to "let alone," on account of a harassing cough, which it was feared might fasten it on my lungs.
