- AN INCIDENT OF THE WAR. I was with Grant. " the stranger said-
- Said the farmer "say no more. ; Intrest thee here at my cottage porch, For thy feet are weary and sore." "I was with Grant, " the stranger said; Said the farmer: "Nay, no more, I prithee sit at my frugal board And eat of my humble store.
- "How fares my boy—my soldier boy, Of the old Ninth Army Corps, I warrant he bore him gallantly In the smoke and battle's roar."
- "I know him not," said the aged man,
  And as I remarked before,
  "I was with Grant"—"Nay, nay, I know Baid the farmer, "say no more."
- "He fell in battle, I see, alas!
  Thou 'det smooth these tidings o'er—Nay, speak the truth, what c'er it be, Though it rends my bosom's core.
- 'How fell he? with his face to the foe, Upholding the flag he hore?' O, say not that my boy disgraced The uniform he wore?'
- "I cannot tell," said the aged man,
  "And should have remirked before,
  That I was with Grant in Illinois
  Some three years before the wat!"

Then the farmer spoke never a word, But beat with his fist full sore That aged man who had worked for Grant, Bome three years before the war.

CHIEF JUSTICE CHASE,

EDITORS GAZETTE:-Perhaps your prudent cotemporaries have forgiven you for permitting me to use your columns in making "a most infamous attack upon one of the most prominent leaders of our own party," and maybe they will pardon you again, if you give place to a word of apology for him who has fallen from the high estate of one of the world's benefactors, to that of a disappointed Democratic politician. We should not forget that while going down he clung to the roof of the old Liberty tree, a long time, while trying the dead weight of a Democratic platform up to that level, and there anchor it; and that, when his grasp gave way, under the weight which was dragging him down, he caught at something which looked like the support he had lost. "Let him who thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall!" If there is any man who never did, could, would or may yield his better judgment to the coaxing of the bright-eyed darling, that from pulling his whiskers, while he would call her attention to the baby in the mirror—from riding on his shoulder, and using his hair for a bridleand going all the way to "Bambury Cross" on his foot, has gradually come to stand by his chair, with her arms around his neck, or hang on his arm as she unrolls her petition, let him get a whole basket full of stones and throw them at Mr. Chase. Of the hundreds of thousands who risk bankruptcy to gratify wives and daughters in their rivalries of dress, furniture and equipage, not one has a right to hurl a missile. Of those philosophers and casuists who argue that woman should not vote because it is their privilege to influence fathers, husbands and brothers, not one should cast a reproach on the old man who has yielded to that power which they have endorsed as perfectly legitimate. If it is right for women to influence their male relatives, in political matters, it must be right for men to be so influenced. If women are "the power behind the throne," why waste indignation on the poor throne for being trundled over a precipice when the motor pushes it over the edge?

Of course, I reject the doctrine that one may rightfully influence the action of another in any matter in which it would be wrong for him or her to act in person, and condemn all political power which, is regulation by fundamental law. But those what safety, if any, there is for him must who assign to woman the right of governing be found in the ranks; and he rushes at the her governors by wheedling, as a substitute for the right of self-government, should be lenient in their judgment of him who has vielded to one who has wielded this undefined and dangerous power. That Kate Chase, with her ambitious talents, was dangerous, on the wrong side, is a fact that has long been known to a good many people. That she played a conspicuous part in defeating impeachment there can be little doubt. That riolet suit, gloves and all, in which she sat in the Senate gallery, during the trial, and threw Jenkins into ecstacles, would, of itself, have settled poor, old grandfather Fessenden's vote. She, or any other be-witching woman, could twist him around her fairy fingers as easily as her kid glove. The Democratic Convention was a little too tough for her tactics; but is it wonderful that she moved her doting, old father to stake all in his effort to win her the bauble the courted, the place of "First Lady?" Mr. Chase never was a self-sacrificing His early devotion to the anti-slavery cause cost him nothing. On the contrary he was one of the few who, from the first, found it a source of honor and profit. Our own old Dr. Mitchell of Indiana county, ild pay eight thousand dollars for the half of a sheep which he gave to "Jerry," but Mr. Chase was not one of the old Abolitionists who fed the hungry at the cost of his own dinner. The positions assigned him by his co-laborers in the anti-slavery oxygen is traversed by frequent electric field led him to set an undue estimate upon hein ied him to set an undue estimate upon timself, and his family to exaggerate the value of his services. He and they felt that which is sometimes observed after a storm, or even a strong flash of lightning. It was generally admitted by our forefathers that when the Evil One did mortals the honor of paying them a visit, his exit was dency. He and they, as well as Mr. Sew-ard, felt that his claims had been unjustly set ard, left that his clasms had been unjustly set that being very fixe the odor we are and ding to, and most appropriately attributed to the enemy of mankind, who was known to be a great amateur of the electric fluid.

ALL GOODS GREATLY REDUCED! fe, that it is not strange his better judg ment yielded to her importunities. Her constant rudeness to Mrs. Lincoln, and contest for the place of honor, proved that her disappointment was more keen than his; and the same fiery zeal which made her contest the elections until the day of Mr. Lincoln's death, would surely lead her to adopt every art of which she was capable to induce her father to place her in the position she so much coveted. Mr. Chase has been, and is, weak rather than wicked, and so far from turning his back forever on the principles which he has professed during life, I venture to predict that he will be found true tothem in the main. If he had been nomipotash or slaked line. Its property of turning starch blue when impregnated with iodide of potassium has been long used as a test of its presence; but it is a very tothem in the main. If he had been nominated by the New York Convention, and could be elected, he would have labored to bring the party up. He could never be an apostate of the Johnson stamp. He loves Liberty—though incapable of making great sacrifices for her. He loves his country, He never called it into notice again. It has been sacrifices for her. He loves his country, and may yet do her good service. He never was so great a man as many believed, and shown by Dr. Scharr, of Berne, that ozone, he is not, and never will be, so bad a man as well as substances impregnated with it, as millions think him to day.

Horses in Battle.

The extent to which a charger can apprehend the perils of a battle field may be easily underrated by one who confines his observation to horses still carrying their riders; for, as long as a troop horse in action feels the weight and hand of a master, his deep trust in man keeps him seemingly free from terror, and he goes through the fight, unless wounded, as though it were a field day at home; but the moment that death or a disabling wound deprives him of his rider, he seems all at once to learn what a battle is—tol perceive its real dangers with the clearness of a human being, and to be agonized with horror of the fate he may incur for Careless of the mere thunders of guns, he shows plainly enough that he more or less knows the dread accent that is used by missiles of war whilst cutting their way through the air, for as often as these sounds disclose to him the near passage of bullet or round shot, he shrinks and cringes. His evoballs protrude. Wild with fright, he still does not most commonly gallop home into camp.

yet with violence, that he too by right is a troop horse—that he too is willing to charge, but not to be left behind—that he must and will "fall in." Sometimes a riderless charger, thus bent on aligning with his fellows, will not be content to range himself on the flank of the line, but dart at some point in the squadron which he seemingly judges to be his own rightful place, and strive to

Riding, as it is usual for the commander of a regiment to do, some way in advance of his regiment, Lord George Paget was especially tormented and pressed by the riderless horses which chose to turn round and align with him. At one fime there were three or four of these horses advancing close abreast of him on one side; and as many as five on the other. Impelled by terror, by gregarious instinct, and by their habit of ranging in line, they "closed" in upon Lord

George so as to besmear his overalls with blood from the gory flanks of the nearest intruders, and oblige him to use his sword.—
