

The Pittsburgh Gazette.

EPHEMERIS.

Queen Victoria has two hundred hours. —Horse-shoe shaped fans are fashionable in Paris.

—Mrs. Scott Siddons is about ready to start for America. —Rumor says that the ex-lector of Hesse Cassel has gone mad.

—When is a man's foot like a barn? asks a facetious exchange. When there's a corn in there.

—Of the waists pertaining to crowned heads in Europe, that of the Empress of the French is still the smallest.

—Judging by the photograph of the new municipal buildings, which is now on exhibition on St. Clair street, near the bridge, we are soon to have a very elegant addition to the architecture of our city as well as one of the handsomest city halls in the country.

—The editor of the Pittsburgh Evening Chronicle speaks of Gen. Napier's "late triumphant expedition into India," and of "Magdala, the capital of India."

—The expedition of Gen. Napier was into Abyssinia, in Africa, and that Magdala is the capital of that country. Somebody is mistaken.

—Father Secchi, an Italian inventor of well earned fame, has, it is said, just discovered a new motive power which is lighter, stronger, and more economical than steam.

—The Viceroy is at Enns. The first evening he was there, while taking his walk along in the dusk of the evening, he ran against a slightly obfuscated Englishman who had probably taken a little too much beer on the top of his wine.

—The Englishman was very indignant and slapped the face of the vice-regal courier, and called him a condemned Arab. The police then came up and provided an escort for the impetuous son of Albion, but would not accede to the Viceroy's desire to have him decapitated.

—What to Eat in Warm Weather. (From the Philosophy of Eating.) If it be true that in cold weather we need, and the appetite demands, concentrated carbonaceous food, it is also true that in warm weather we need a very different class of articles of food; and the reason is obvious.

—Four-fifths of our food being devoted to the production of heat, we need four times as much in cold weather as in warm. If, therefore, we ate the same articles in summer as in winter, and only what our nature required, the stomach and bowels would collapse into one-quarter of their functions.

—Nature, therefore, provides for warm climates and the summer of cold food in which all elements are greatly diluted, and in which the proportion of carbonates is much smaller than those provided for cold weather. This you will see in the analysis of Southern and Northern corn, in a very remarkable degree.

—While the proportion of Northern corn is six of the carbonates to one of the nitrates, the proportion of these principles in Southern corn are nearly equal. It would, therefore, require six times the bulk of Southern corn as of Northern to support the same degree of heat; and this disparity is still more strikingly seen if we compare Northern corn with some of our Southern vegetables. Corn contains 73 per cent. of carbonates, turnips four per cent., and cucumbers one per cent. Consequently it would require eighteen pounds of turnips, or seventy-three pounds of cucumbers, to furnish as much heat as Northern corn meal.

—The comparative proportions of carbonates and nitrates in wheat, and indeed all cereals that grow both in Northern and Southern climate, as well as those of all other natural products of the soil, plainly declare the will of God in regard to summer and winter food, as also do our appetites and tastes.

—In the spring we lose our desire for butter and buckwheat, and begin to crave fresh, lean beef, and green vegetables. And yet how many thoughtless housekeepers at the North go through nearly the same routine of cooking in summer as in winter, with just about as much butter and fat beef, and even pork and fat gravy, and flour puddings, with sauce, not because they like it as well, or think it is wholesome, but only because their "managers did so before them."

—And so powerful is this thoughtless and absurd habit in the Southern States, that it is said that however plentiful may be the supply of milk and cheese, and green vegetables, fish, lean beef, and fruits, &c., a Southern family always has on the table a smoked ham or a "side of pork," and their vegetables are cooked swimming in fat; and to force an appetite, they use the most stimulating spices and condiments. In short, their food in the hottest weather is suitable only for the coldest northern winter weather.

—It is strange that diseases prevail in a manner or winter, whether using muscles or brains, or neither, every day food containing carbonates for the lungs, nitrates for the muscles and tissues, and phosphates for the vital powers; but we need them in very different proportions, according to the temperature in which we live and our habits of life. These elements are furnished at our hands, varying in proportions so as to be adapted to the different temperatures and habits, and for animals that have only instincts and not intellects to guide them, from the elephant to the smallest animalcule, and the elements are so mixed and prepared, and the appetite so adjusted to them, that they always want, and always have, and always eat the right kind of food at the right time, and in the right quantity. But the man, who has intellect, is expected to understand the laws of his being, and to adapt his food to the wants of his nature, varies it according to circumstance. We are creatures of habit, and our systems have wonderful power in adapting themselves to circumstances; and, therefore, we do not all die, however thoughtlessly we live, and how perseveringly continued the wrong habits to which we have been accustomed; and our appetites falling in with our habits, the evils of wrong living are perpetuated. Still, it is true everywhere that the average amount of health, and the average length of life, are in exact proportions to the care we take to live in accordance with the laws of our being—these statistics show, and our own observations confirm.

—But what a responsibility these considerations place upon wives and mothers, who have, or ought to have, the direction of these matters! To them, in Providence, as the word of God, the Irjunction emphatically says: "Keep my commandments, for length of days, and long life, and peace, shall they add to thee," and to thy family.

Lace Making in Italy.

The women of Italy find lace-making and embroidery a great assistance in eking out their scanty subsistence. At Genoa there are six of lace, who supply the workpeople of the town and country with the raw material and designs to be executed at their own homes.

The lace-makers are principally inhabitants of the shores of the Gulf of Rapallo, fifteen miles southeast of Genoa. The Genoa embroidery, it is stated, is, as regards design, inferior to that of Paris, and superior, as regards workmanship, to that of Switzerland. It is admitted, however, that the workwomen of Genoa cannot compete with the perfection of the one and the cheapness of the other.

The manufacture of lace, however, is in a better state, and the annual production is of the value of from $90,000 to $100,000. In Lombardy 5,000 women and girls are employed in making veils, collars, shawls, mantillas and neck-kerchiefs, which are executed with much accuracy. The material is principally obtained from Germany, France and England. The produce of this industry only suffices for the wants of the country.

At Milan, there are six manufacturers of lace, who give employment to upwards of 5,000 persons, working principally at their own homes, and earning from 4 to 20 cents per day. The price of the veils varies from 30 cents to $3 each, and the annual production of this industry is estimated at $30,000. The two other centres of this industry in Lombardy are at Cantù, 5 miles southeast of Como, and at Angelo, 10 miles northeast of Pavia. At Cantù, which numbers only 6,000 inhabitants, this industry employs 1,700 women, who earn about 4 cents a day, and whose annual produce amounts to $37,600. The traders in this article make a profit of from 30 to 30 per cent. At Sant Angelo the number of women engaged at this industry is about six hundred, and their earnings average from ten to twenty cents per day. The lace made at this place is of ordinary quality, and principally of cotton. The price of the lace varies from two cents to thirty cents per braccio of Milan (equal to about twenty-four inches). The lace made of thread cost from twenty to forty cents, and that of silk costs about forty cents per braccio.

The embroideries on bobbinet and tulle, both of cotton and thread, at Venice, have ready sale in the country, and are also exported to Trieste. A considerable number of persons are employed in this industry. Embroidery and lace made of silk are also carried on extensively at Venice. At Palestrina, an island and town, ten miles south of Venice, the women also make point lace. In the Neapolitan provinces various kinds of lace are made. In 1888 the export of lace from Naples amounted in value to $37,440.

Swinging Sixty Yards from a Hook Through the Arm. A fearful accident occurred on the 23d, at the Washington street Tunnel in Chicago, which is thus detailed by the Republican:

The workmen employed in the construction of the tunnel were being paid off, and the machinery was about ceasing its operations, when a laborer, named...

...who was watching the movements of the steam-derrick, was transfixed in the fleshy part of the upper arm by the hook attached by means of a long iron chain to the boom of the derrick. Suspended by the arm, which was in the air, the poor wretch was slowly swung round by the crane in a circuit of some sixty yards. The machinery was stopped as he hung over the coffee-dish, which is located in the tunnel, and the men on the ground, who were near the work of suspension, it emerged, causing the man to fall to the bottom of the dam. When picked up by his fellow workmen, he was found to be unconscious but alive. His injuries are, as may be imagined, of a very serious character, but in consequence of an extraordinary vitality, he may possibly recover.

QUEEN ELIZABETH'S MUSIC BOOK.—A writer in the Gentleman's Magazine says: "In the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge is Queen Elizabeth's Music-book, containing compositions for the piano-forte, or virginal of her time. The Queen is said to have been a skillful musician. Some pages of the book have been evidently turned over, others not seldom looked at. The leaves that are soiled are those on which the simplest tunes are written; the others contain the variations and more intricate passages. Although her majesty had the gift of a formal virgin, this music book proves that she was wont to skip the more irksome compositions, and indulge in the less laborious pastime of playing the tunes only. It is an easy way of acquiring the reputation of a pianist, to get together many of the most difficult pieces of Thalberg, Liszt and others, and play only the melodies they arrange, avoiding the brilliant passages which are so difficult to master, and often so puzzling to listen to. I rather think Queen Elizabeth did this with the music of Liszt and Thalberg of her day, judging from her music-book."

We find the following anecdote of a Welsh jury in the London Times: "At the Montgomery Quarter Sessions, a tailor named John Welsh was placed in the dock, charged with stealing a milk-can. The prisoner was undefended, and the jury, after hearing the evidence, handed in a verdict of guilty, and Welsh was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, with hard labor. It has since transpired that, so far from finding the prisoner guilty, the jury were unanimous in the belief that he was innocent, and the foreman was charged with the delivery of a verdict accordingly, but that when he stood up to reply to the formal question of the clerk of the court, the unfortunate man lost his presence of mind and delivered a verdict of guilty, and the prisoner was consigned to jail in the presence of the jury, who were too frightened to interfere."

This visit of the Duke of Edinburgh to the Crystal Palace, in London, on the 20th, was the occasion of a series of festivals of unprecedented magnificence. Upward of 30,000 persons were present. The Duke was accompanied by the Princess of Wales and distinguished party. Both Signor Mario and Mile. Adolina Patti took part in the concert; and the new song which has been composed in honor of the Prince was the signal for an extraordinary enthusiasm. The whole system of the fountains was put in operation; and late in the evening there was a display of fireworks.

The Japanese have discovered that a few seconds previous to an earthquake the magnet temporarily loses its power. They have ingeniously constructed a light frame supporting a bar of iron which is attached to a cup of bell metal; to the frame is attached a weight, so that upon the magnet becoming paralyzed the weight drops, and striking the cup, gives the alarm. Every one in the house then seeks the open air for safety.

An Eastern paper says that the Trustees of the Agricultural College of Pennsylvania, at a recent meeting, appropriated $150 for a library, $250 for apparatus and $120 for pig pens.
