SINGULAR ACCIDENT TO AN Ox. - Wednesday morning Mr. Harvey Collins, of Scarboro, Me., found one of his oxen in his pasture with his horn run through one of his hind feet. It was evident the ox had taken the foot to scratch his head or drive the flies away, and caught it on the end of the horn, the horn passing about two inches through the foot and throwing him upon his back, where he remained until found. The ox, which was one of the most valuable in town, was so badly injured by the wounds and bruises that it was found necessary to kill him.
