The Wrong Method. Thomas Morgan, being in need of some articles of wearing apparel, adopted, what seemed to him, the easiest method of what seemed to him, the easiest method of supplying his needs, and while sauntering along last evening, he appropriated a pair of pants and a vest from a box in front of the clothing store of Snodgrass & Bro., No. 41 Ohio street, Allegheny. Unfortunately for Thomas, the attendant behind the counter inside noticed the action and started in pursuit, accompanied by officers Kingan and Shaffer. The Music Committee of the Central Board of Education met on Friday evening and unanimously agreed to nominate Lifting of the Veil. The immortal "J. N.," the great philosopher and martyr, on whose broad shoulders rest the grave responsibilities of lifting the veil which now darkens the intellect of America, and of assuming the pressure, at least until such time as his mission on earth shall have been accomplished, paid our sanctum a visit yesterday. The writer, who he has assured in the golden elo-quence of his soul that the veil must be lifted ere long from his eyes, unfortunately was not in to receive his distinguished hilosophical friend, but received the folphilosophical friend, but received the lor-lowing communication, the original of which will be treasured as an autographic gem worth its weight in diamonds, for "J. N.'s" mission will soon be accom-plished, and when the veil has been lifted and he has passed away from this mun-dane sphere millions may sing his praise and marvel how he alone assumed the pressure without a murmuring word. But ere is the Philosopher and Martyr's letter: Tobacco and Cigars.—At John Megraw's, here is the Philosopher and Martyr's letter:

My dear Friend: I passed through Pittsburgh to-day, on my way to Cleveland, where I will assume the pressure and lift the veil. I will visit you in a few weeks hence and once more lift the veil which appears to enshroud my travels. I ignore politics entirely, for no person can be a lover of truth and at the same time be identified with party prejudice. He must look at truth as truth is. Under no circumstances could I have voted with either party, or during the continuance of the war fought in the ranks of either army. Holding the in the ranks of either army. Holding the great truth alone, assuming myself the pressure, becoming a martyr to the surrounding prejudices on all sides, I stood without a friend to believe that I was sole custodian of the great secret and touch-stone of peace, or held the key to harmony and union. The day is not far distant when all will think as I do, or at least that I dis-charged my duty to my country and the

He now agrees with me that my position is the correct one; says he no position is the correct one; says he no longer entertains prejudice against the Northern people; thinks they did right as patriots in fighting the South from their standpoint, though he was a rebel,—so much for the lifting of the veil from his vision. Now if Gen. Grant can feel the same way from a Northern standpoint then the grand truth I alone hold will be devel-oped and recognized, that both armies fought through patriotism and as patriots. each misunderstanding the motives of the other. Both right, both wrong. The North that the South rebelled; the South that the No th invaded. The veil enveloped them all. I assumed the pressure and the truth is about to burst forth radient with beauty and my great mission of self-niartyr is nigh an end. I speak at Altoona on the 15th inst. Respectfully, "J. N."

The Simonton Robbery. On or about the twelfth of July last the jewelry store of Mr. Simonton, on Liberty street, was entered by burglars, and goods to the amount of $100 taken therefrom. The circumstances connected with the affair were published indetail, and it was also stated that the police had the matter in hand and were "working it up." The case, it appears, was entrusted to officers Moon and Irwin, both energetic and effici-ent officers, and they have in a great meas-ure been successful. As Mr. Simonton was unable to give a definite description of any of the articles stolen, and the thieves having most effectively covered their "tracks," the officers had very little to work upon. They set themselves diligently to work, They set themselves diligently to work, however, and by some means got a clew to one piece of the jewelry which they obtained, and through it recovered a large portion of what had been stolen, captured one of the thieves, and will probably take the other this morning. The job was a difficult one, as the jewelry was scattered promiscuously through the city, and a pertion of it was recovered in Allegheny, and a great portion of it one piece at a place. Most of that recovered was in the possession of the demi monde, and in one instance one of the frail creatures was stopped on the street and relieved of a pin which, it apone hundred and fifty dollars disappeared very mysteriously from Thomas' boarding street and relieved of a pin which, it appears, had been presented to her by one of the thieves. The officers deserve great credit for the manner in which the affair was managed, notwithstanding it was comparatively a small job, as they have not only recovered the property, but have capitalled to go to work but loitered round the

It appears ner of Penn and Canal streets. It appears that Mrs. Wills grocery, at the place named was entered on Thursday evening by a boy, who, during the absence of the proprietress, abstracted two dollars from the till and made his escape. Yesterday another attempt was made which, however, did not prove so successful as the first. While the lady was in the front part of the store she heard a noise in the back part of the room, where the money drawer is located, and upon going back found Winterstein with his hand in the till. He had entered at a back door and had succeeded in getting possession of six or seven dollars, which he had pocketed, and was about to clean the drawer of its contents when detected. The Mayoralty-Is it too Late to do Good !--Accidental Poisoning-Narrow Escape. The family of Mr. Carrell Kotzue, residing on Troy Hill, Allegheny, were accidentally poisoned on Thursday evening, the effect of which would have been very serious, but for the timely arrival of medical assistance.

The circumstances of the case, as near as we could gather them, are about as follows: we could gather them, are about as follows:
A few days ago Mrs. Kotzue purchased a small quantity of arsenic for the purpose of poisoning the rats which had troubled her about the house. Bringing the arsenlc home she mixed it with some ground glass and placed it on a beam or rafter in the kitchen ceiling. By some misthought, it seems, the poison was placed directly over seems, the poison was placed directly over the table from which the framily pattook their meals. On the evening in question Mrs. Kotzue cooked the supper as usual, preparing some of the food used on the ta-ble under the poison.

In the evening after eating the meal Mr. Kotzue and one of the children, a little girl, became very sick, and from the symp-toms manifested it was supposed that they

Mr. Kotzue was almost restored yesterday, and was able to be about, but the little girl, although somewhat improved, is still suffering from the effects. It is suposed that some of the poison was shaker from the rafters down upon the table, and by this means became mixed among the food. It seems strange that none of the family but the two named should have felt the effect, but this is partly explained by the fact both of them seemed to be specially hungry that evening and ate more heartily than usual of the food prepared.

This is but another warning for persons who keep poison around the house for any from the rafters down upon the table, and vno keep poison around the house for any purpose to have more care, for carelessness in this respect is nothing less than criminal.
