EPHEMERIS.

Revenue stamps are en route to Alaska. The spice of a policeman's life—his mace. A pleasant intoxication—to get green-corned.—Et. One hundred thieves were arrested in Chicago one night last week. There are seven large cotton-mills in Chester, Pennsylvania. Shooting matches are popular with the ladies at Virginia watering places. Ole Bull has a daughter who is to marry a young Northman from Christiania. Nilsson can't get $5,000 a week for singing, and so won't sing in Vienna. Fanny Kemble begins another tour of reading at New Haven on the first prox. The Steuenville Grant Guards had a torchlight procession on Tuesday night. Wilkie Collins expects to realize $40,000 out of his new novel "The Moonstone." A monument to the great Mendelssohn is to be erected in Leipzig, the City of Books. Threatening attitudes that never excite journalists ire—Raising clubs for newspapers. A lady and her husband ascended to the summit of Mount Hood, in Oregon, this summer. As a pall-bearer, Horace Greeley seems to be having about as much as he can do just now. Never call on women when they are absent from home; for they can't bear to be found out. Owen Meredith is threatened with consumption, and his physicians have sent him to live in Italy. There is a Judge at Saratoga who takes thirteen glasses of Congress water daily, before breakfast. Democratic papers are beginning to say they don't care whether Secretary Eward endorses Grant or not. New York burglars are having a fine harvest now when the up-town houses are many of them empty. A Boston paper says that the fall and winter season at the fashionable churches promises to be very successful. Parke Godwin went to swim in the Avon and was terribly shocked when two boat loads of women came by. The Pope receives one hundred visitors a day, and treats them with the gentle courtesy for which he is so renowned. Louis Napoleon is writing the biography of Charlemagne, the great last of the Caesars before Nap. I appeared. Baron Haussman is said to be worth $30,000,000, all of which he has made during his unvaried public devotion. The Bavarian nobility are down on Wagner because he bowed acknowledgment to the audience from the King's box. Planchette told some family secrets in a fashionable boarding house the other day, and a row was the immediate result. Mrs. Gaines has only succeeded in getting $18,000 of her $3,000,000 estate, and expects to have still farther law trouble. Senator Hendricks and Governor Baker are to make a "joint canvass" of Indiana, after the manner of Douglas and Lincoln. Hay-making in Western countries is a novel amusement at Saratoga. Feeding sheep would be still more Western-essence. High combs and the hair in loops on top of the head in the style once affected by our grandmothers, are now again fashionable in Paris. One of General Butler's counsels in the Kimberly suit is a certain Mr. Bligh, which is an excellent name for a good attorney. The King of Denmark has invented a new process for refining petroleum, for full particulars apply to the Christianborg Kjobenhavn. A Texas negro named Gilmore sent the first bale of cotton to the Galveston market this year and thus won the prize of a silver pitcher and goblets. 14,000 criminals are sent by the Russian Government on foot to Siberia every year. As the distance is 2,600 miles about one-fifth of them die on the way. Flesh-colored gaiters, with the toes stitched with black to look as if they were bare, are now the newest mode. They are said to have a shockingly natural effect. The cook of a Nashville hotel has been keeping a boarding house, the table of which was furnished from the pickings and shavings which she was able to smuggle off in her crinoline. A soldier, pursued by the man with a poker, fong himself from the heights of Abraham, and after falling 180 feet stopped, unharmed, he then dived himself in the rapids of St. Lawrence. Gov. Oglesby is actively canvassing Illinois for the Republicans. He was announced to make twenty-two speeches at various points between the 12th of August and the 20th of September. Hear the words of F. Wells as written in the Philadelphia Bulletin: A student of Bonn swam eight miles on the Rhine in an hour and three quarters. It was a case of "Bonny Doll" in the Rhine. San Francisco has contributed $100 towards a monument to Fitz Green Halleck. If every city would contribute a proportionate sum, we might have a suitable memorial to one of the sweetest of our dead poets. An exchange, in speaking of the fall in the Irish fortunes, says "it is better to keep a beer shop in Paris than to rule Mexico," or, as Tennyson has it, "better fifty years as Empress than a cycle of Cathay." Snokers beware of imported cigars which do not bear the revenue stamps, for a favorite way with the evaders of the law is to smuggle them in with corpses (often yellow fever victims) from Havana and other Spanish possessions. Although the Artesian well which is going down under the direction of St. Louis county, Missouri, has obtained a depth of 3,300 feet, considerably more than half a mile, but a small quantity of water has yet been obtained. They are boring for Hong Kong now. In Switzerland is now manufactured a watch, which, it is said, is wound up by opening and shutting the case six times, or for four hours by each time it is opened and closed. When the watch is wound up it may be opened and closed an indefinite number of times without effect. Rev. Albert N. Fisher, formerly of Chenango county, N. Y., and a Gentle, lately preached in Brigham Young's Tabernacle, at Salt Lake, tonight, over a hundred. He is the first Gentle who ever preached there by invitation of Brigham. His subject was the "Divinity of Christ."

Frequency of Divorces in New England. In the State of Vermont, for six years after 1860, there was on an average, one divorce annually to every twenty-one and a half marriages. In Massachusetts during four years of the same period, one divorce to about forty-four and a half (44.4) marriages was the ratio. In Ohio it was one divorce to twenty-five marriages. In Prussia—among the Protestant population—the ratio of divorces in 1855 to the marriages of that year was as one to nine. At the foot of this bad-looking list, Connecticut must be placed, there, in the period between 1860 and 1867, the ratio being as one to eleven and four-tenths. Deduct from the whole number of marriages of persons of foreign birth 300 as being marriages of Catholics, who rarely, or never petition for a divorce, and the ratio becomes still more unsatisfactory; we have one divorce to eight and a half marriages. Tried by other measures, the result is the same. Connecticut makes a worse showing than any other State of the Union, or of Christendom—unless we are to except Indiana, which seems to be afraid to collect the statistics of the subject. In that other Connecticut, the Western Reserve of Ohio, the case is about as bad; the counties constituting the district, so-called, furnish much more than their due proportion of the divorces, while the southern counties in which, by the way, Catholics abound, fall below the average in the number of petitions. In the Judicial District of Berlin in 1838-40 there were fifty-seven divorces to every 100,000 inhabitants; in that of Frankfort there were thirty; in that of Magdeburg there were thirty-five; in Rhensia Prussia, under the less lax Code Napoleon, there were but four divorces to each 100,000 people. Now in Vermont, out of the same number of inhabitants (100,000) there are annually thirty-three divorces; in Massachusetts—we speak of the present decade, there are 4-1/2; in Ohio, there are about 33-1/10; and in Connecticut, even if we do not count out the Catholic population, every hundred thousand of the people have amongst them yearly eighty newly divorced couples! There can be no doubt—the statistics, though they may prove a good deal less than Catholic controversialists would infer from them, conclusively prove it—that at least in Connecticut is a dangerously corrupt condition; and these figures ought to make Connecticut legislators look to their divorce laws and study the history of the effect which such relaxation of the law has had on the permanence of Connecticut marriages. The "omnibus clause" of the present law—the clause that relates to incompetibility of temper, and seems to suppose that one human being can make another perennially happy—could never have good results in so hasty and ill-tempered a world as this one, even if everybody were perfectly honest; to the detriment of every facility for ancient living.—The Nation.

A Pearl Incident. A letter from Fort Larned to the Leavenworth Times tells the following: A most fearful and appalling circumstance transpired at the fort last evening. While a party of ladies and gentlemen were dining in front of the beautiful quarters of Col. Ed. Wyncock, Indian Superintendent or Agent of several warlike tribes, the entire party commenced a beautiful song. The melody was ringing in the night air, monotonous, shaggy and rabid wolf dashed madly into the midst of the party, first attacking Lieutenant Thompson, first United States Infantry, tearing and tearing his limbs in a most frightful manner. The monster broke away, pursued by Col. Wyncock and his chief scout, Jas. Morrison, who had lost no time in procuring proper arms. Before either of these fearless gentlemen, however, could overtake him, the wolf had attacked the sentry at the guard-house, whom he also bit savagely, the sentry being fired, but most unfortunately, missed his aim. From the guard-house the wolf next dashed over to the hospital, and madly an assault upon one of the men there stationed, almost tearing his right arm from his body, after first taking off a finger. He then attacked and mutilated a colored soldier of the Tenth Cavalry, and subsequently entered the quarters of the laundress, while she was in bed, owing to the thickness of the bed-clothes, fortunately failed to inflict any serious injury on the poor woman. The maddened creature next caught sight of the sentinel at the hayrack, who, almost providentially, shot him down. Beside Lieut. Thompson, there are three persons badly bitten and mutilated by this monster.

THE SINGULAR SPECTACLE is presented in Austria of an Empire, ruled by a devoted son of the Church, member of a traditionally Catholic family, with a people thoroughly and strongly attached to the papal faith, suffering under the denunciation of the Holy Father. Baron Beust, the Prussian Minister, is a Protestant, but that fact does not account for the boldness with which the thickness of the bed-clothes, fortunately failed to inflict any serious injury on the poor woman. The maddened creature next caught sight of the sentinel at the hayrack, who, almost providentially, shot him down. Beside Lieut. Thompson, there are three persons badly bitten and mutilated by this monster.

HOW TO TELL DISHEARD MEAT.—Healthy meat is firm and elastic to the touch, and hardly mangles the fingers. Diseased meat is soft and wet, and scum often runs from it. Good meat has but little odor, and that by no means disagreeable. Diseased meat has a faint and odorous smell. This is best observed by cutting it and smelling the knife, or pouring a little warm water over it when chopped; it loaves, also, ten percent more weight in cooking than when healthy. Care should be taken to have meat most thoroughly cooked, if consumers wish to avoid all possibility of animal disease.
