LETTERS FROM EUROPE -- NO. 7. BY JOSEPH KING.

thousand, and situated on the right bank of terday pretty much as it was in Paris ancient city of Bonn was of small dimensions, as is evidenced from the walls which surrounded it. These walls are of no use now; first, because they are not necessary. Cities within the same kingdom nor without do not prey upon, and fight with one another, as they did formerly. Our race another, as they did formerly. Our race has made progress in civilization. One city is now willing to let another prosper and live in peace. Even were the walls which now surround European cities necessary gins with Bonn, and extends upward towards its source. We leave this afternoon for points higher up, and hope, in the good providence of God, in a few flays, to see the glorious Alps, the "Palaces of nature," as Byron calls them. for protection and self defence, they would not long stand the battering of the modern implements of war. The streets of the older portions of Bonn, like most other cities in the old world are very narrow and crooked -some of them not more than ten or twelve feet wide, and so angular, and make such frequent turns, that oftentimes one can see but a few feet shead. The city is situated on a flat, but the suburbs are singularly beautiful. From our hotel window (fourth story) the eye rests on grand hills on the right, and across the Rhine, and right opposite the castle of Rolandseck, which is two miles above the city, are the Seven Mountains, each of which is over one thousand feet high, and which are so famous in history, and concerning which many legends have been written. Had we reached Bonn a few days sooner we would have seen, we were told, one of the grandest Festivals and Processions there ever have been in Prussia. It was the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the University, and students, professors and eminent men from all parts of Europe were present. The King and Queen of Prussia were here; also, our own Mr. Baniscroft, who is now the United States Ministroft, who is now the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the United States and the United States are united to the Un ter at Berlin, and upon whom was con-ferred, while here, by the University, the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Mr. Ban-croit, I was told, was admitted to a seat on the platform in the midst of Kings, Royal personages and Professors of world-wide celebrity, and who, according to the European custom, were attired in the most costly and glittering paraphernalia; but he was dressed in a plain black suit with a single rose in the button hole of his coat.

The University of Bonn has one thousand students, two hundred and fifty of whom are in the theological department, and of the theological students two hundred are Roman Catholic, and fifty Protestant. (The city itself is two thirds Catholic.) There is a double theological faculty—a faculty for the Protestant students and a faculty for the Catholic structure. Catholic students. The Professors are appointed by the King of Prussia, who though a Protestant, is favorable to his many Catholic subjects, and of Professors there are eighty. The library of the University contains three hundred thousand volumes, and with it are connected valuable art and scientific museums. Dr. Lange who is known to the whole religious world as the editor (and author of some of the volumes) of a most expansive and excellent commentary, "critical, exegetical and homilitical," reinstantaneous; no disappointment; no resources and sprincipal Professor in the Protestant Evangelical Theological Department of the University. The Doctor At night J. R. Mills, New Brighton, Pa., preaches but seldom, but when he does his sermons are of a high order; and though a hard student and a profound theologian, he hard student and a profound theologian to the student and a profound theologian to the student and a profound theologian, he hard student and a profound theologian to the student and t and mingles freely with the student outside of the lecture room. He laughs at the high price per volume in the United States of his justly celebrated commentary. Matthew, for instance, costs five dollars at home; here the whole New Testament, with the exception of Revelations, which has not yet appeared in German, can be bought for a trifle more than that sum.

While at Bonn we made the acquantance of Rev. Thomas Lawrence, who lived for many years in Allegheny city, whose and sisters now live there, and who, after laboring for several years in the ministry of the United Presbyterian church, and serving for a time as Adjutant of the Christian Commission during the war, resolved to prepare himself more fully, for his life work by studying for a year or two, at a European University. Accordingly he came to Bonn ten months since, and is attending the lectures in the theological department of the university. It will gratify his many friends in Allegheny and vicinity to know that he is well, and feels that he is being benefitted by his sojourn here. We found both him and his wife, most kind, cour teous and pleasant; and this week, as it is now vacation in the university they go to was the centre of attraction for all, wore a Yesterday we enjoyed the rare opportunity of hearing the Bishop of London. On Saturday evening me were told that the Bishop was in the city, and we expected that he would of course preach on Lord's Day. At the appointed hour, in company arranged and ornamented with white flowwith Mr. Lawrence and wife, we repaired to the University Chapel, in which the English Church here holds its services. The Service read by the pastor of the church was exceedingly long, so at least it seemed to those not accustomed to such long introductory services. It occupied one hour and thirtyfive minutes, and at its close the Bishop ascended into the very high but very small pulpit, and delivered a short but good discourse. His theme was prayer, common prayer, and while he said that the outward form and prescribed rule, were necessary he insisted on the uplifting of the soul and elevation of the heart to God. The sermon was evangelical, sound, and no right think. ing man could take exception to a single utterance in it.

His sentences were well composed, and every syllable spoken with distinctness, but there seemed to be a want of energy, of holy energy, of pathos and unction; and the sermon, though good, was not masterly, nor was there a single outburst of genuine eloquence. It was such a sermon as any minister of ordinary culture and plety could have composed. The Bishop of Landon is minister of ordinary culture.

The door means the passage, the doctrine is mediation, and the duty is to enter in through the door without delay for it may soon shut. The sermon was methodically arranged and well delivered. It was here in Bonn yesterday meetly much as it was in Paris one the Rhine, about thirty miles above Cologne.
The city has in itself nothing of peculiar interest, and yet it is known throughout the civilized world as being the seat of one of the calabrated European Universities.

The calabrated European Universities of the calabrated European Universities. the celebrated European Universities. The Europe greatly needs to be reformed in this particular. She has no conscience in respect to a right observance of the Lord's day. Hotel keepers would rather have Protestant than Catholic servant girls for the reason that the latter will go to meeting on a Sunday but the former care little, if anything, about it, so the people here say. BENTLEYSVILLE CAMP GROUND,

This Camp ground is situated about half mile South of the town of Bentleysville, on the lands of Mr. J. W. Stevens. The grove is beautiful in which the meeting is held. The trees stand thickly, and are tall and straight, and their boughs are so closely interlocked as to form a delightful shade. ful shade.

The number of tents on the ground is sixty-two. Many of them are large and permanently built. Their holders evidently expect them to be occupied hereafter.

The meeting commenced on last Friday evening, the 21st inst. The first sermon was preached by Rev. T. J. McClure, of the Peters Creek circuit. His theme was an appropriate one—the Setting up of our Banners in the Name of our God. He discussed it earnestly and pathetically, producing a good effect.

Saturday brought reinforcements of both tents and people. At ten o'clock Rev. J. J. Hays, of Latrobe, Pa., discoursed on "The New Birth." In the afternoon Rev. D. A. Pierce, of California, Pa., showed, in a very simple and affective manner, how perfect love casts out fear. At night Rev. J. D. Stiffy, of Redstone, Pa., preached a good sermon on "How shall we escape if we neglect so great Salvation?"
Sabbath morn dawned on the encampment very auspiciously. At an early hour ment very auspiciously. At an early hour the people began to flow in from all directions. By ten o'clock the multitude was very great, being variously estimated from five to seven thousand.

The eight o'clock hour was occupied with i precious sermon preached by Rev. J. Mc Intyre, of Beallsville, Pa., on the text, McIntyre, of Bealtsville, Pa., on the text, With Joy shall we draw water out of the wells of Salvation,
At ten o'clock Dr. and Mrs. Palmer, of New York, conducted the services, he performing the preliminary part, and she delivering the discourse. Her theme was entire sanctification, which she discussed for about one hour. Her voice, though ordinarily good, was yet too feeble to reach more than about one-third of the vast congregation. In view of this and other congregation. gregation. In view of this and other considerations, very few doubted the propriesiderations, very few doubted the propriety of her occupying this important hour. By those who sympathize with the recuilar views the discourse was well received. She and her husband are devoting all their time to the work of Evangelists.

The meeting thus far has been largely attended and by the most orderly kind. The weather has been most propitious. It is expected the encampment will be broken ap on Friday morning.

The im-mediate production was something immense in appearance. About a quarter of an acre, more or less, of corrugated iron roofing was twisted into a big knot and thrown into the air. Thousands of panes of glass were shattered, oak beams a foot thick were splintered, iron columns were shivered, brick walls split in many fragments, iron rollers of several tons weight tossed about like mere trifles, sections of the boiler and big chunks of machinery thrown 200 feet in the air, hurled in every direction, to the middle of the river on the south and to Third street on the north. In all this destruction of property but one person was injured and that not fatally. The accident is attributed to carelessness on the part of the night engineer. The total loss is esti-mated at about $10,000.

BANGOR, Me., April 24, 1868.

I hereby certify that I have used tobsceo for thirty years past, and for the last afficen years I have used tow pounds per month. I have made attempts to leave off at different times. I have left out one year at at time, but slways continued to hanker for it until I used Orton's Preparation, which has completely cared me of the appetite for tobacco. I would recommend all who are affected with this terrible habit to try the preparation, which will certainly cure it if the directions are followed.

(From E. W. Adkins, Knoxville, Tenn.)

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., August 5, 1867.

This is to derify that I had used tobacco to such an extent that my he sich had become greatly impaired, and my whole system deranged and broken down. In June 1867, I purchased one box of Orton's Preparation. 19 seleve it to be all that it is recommended, and I would advise all who wish to quit the use of tobacco to try one box of Orton's Preparation.
