LETTER FROM BROOKLYN, N. Y.

The Vermont Election—Its Consequences.

(Correspondence Pittsburgh Gazette.)

Brooklyn, September 2d, 1888.

When I came down to the sitting room, this morning, a gentleman guest of the family I am visiting, laid down his paper and prepared to make himself agreeable, by listening to any remarks on the matter which might be in order. To my request that I might not disturb him he replied politely, that it was of no consequence; when I insisted that he should go on reading, he said he had only been looking over the news from Vermont. Think of it! A Union news from which was wounded in the Wilderness, near the close of his three years' service, lay months in the hospital, one fully sensible that a defeat at the polls would compel the boys in blue to shoulder their muskets once more or see their Government under the feet of the Confederacy, sitting reading the news of that victory as calmly as Grant received the reports, or issued orders while the tempest of the Wilderness howled around on every side! I was all out of patience with him, as I have always been out of patience with Grant for not saying something, but I suppose that in the general division of labor, one class of folks always win the victories and another do the talking.

As my silent companion, of this morning, contributed nothing towards this last as well as former victories of freedom, let me help with the talking, as I belong to that division of the army. Let me say, that once he lies in Southern graves, "give thanks to-day!" Not as the fool dyed did they lay down their lives! Not in vain did they pray, arise from Southern charnel houses. Not in vain did they endure the knowings of hunger and vermin, and alternate hope and despair. Not in vain did they bear the coward blow and insult and sneer of the avengers, whose clear eyes lie in Southern graves, "give thanks to-day!"

The following paper was presented by Revs. Clarke and Chapell and passed:

WHEREAS, The American Missionary Association is accomplishing a great and important work in behalf of the four millions of human beings who have so lately been freed from the shackles of slavery, and with a zeal and energy perhaps unparalleled in the world's history, is endeavoring to relieve not only the bodily sufferings, but to develop the mental powers of the Southern Freedmen, but by the neglect of the effort in aiming to impart to their souls the truths which will exalt their enjoyments here and point to a home rest beyond the confines of time forever.

Resolved, That as a religious body we take this opportunity of renewing our expression of the high appreciation of the noble work that this association of the planting, and while we gratefully recognize the Divine blessing which has rested upon the directors, officers and missionaries of this Association, causing the labor of the Holy Spirit to prosper, we earnestly pray that it may descend in larger measure upon all their plans, arrangements and efforts to do new and them with all more abundant success.

And we hereby promise to use our influence in persuading the owners of a free and vital Christianity to contribute toward this philanthropic enterprise that it may be carried on and extended.

The admirers of the late Edgar A. Poe will remember his whimsical notion of a "cavalry coffin," with its cushions for comfort and springs for the moment of waking. A gentleman who does Paris correspond for one of our contemporaries found them on fifty floors under a pillow which the hand of love might turn. Oh, my brave, brave boys, whose noble souls went out from the mangled boards, had pillows on bricks and broken boards, your sacrifice was not in vain. The land you loved and died for will have peace and prosperity in the approving smile of God.

Gossip About the Beecher Family.

A correspondent of a Western paper says: "The other day, riding to Lake Mohopac, I came upon a man with a familiar face. It was about two miles out of Peekskill, near the Hudson. The man was in shirt sleeves, and a grinning hoar in his hand, and directing some workmen at putting down draining tiles. He had a sun-burnt skin, and a pair of trousers, and a pair of boots with a sanguine expression looking for which riding boots upon his legs. This was Henry Ward Beecher, summing on his celebrated Westchester county farm, a place on the top of a high, almost mountain landscape, which was, a few years back, a stony sterile spot. By work and money, liberally applied, he has made it both valuable and beautiful. His house, for the present, is a small frame cottage, chiefly piazza, set far out upon a lawn, and under a large buttonwood tree, if I mistake not, a space before the house, they have held two or three family marriages. Mr. Beecher enjoys life, to all appearances, as much as any living American. He began the study of horticulture and agriculture a good many years ago, when a young preacher at Indianapolis.

"Mr. John DeForest told me the other day, when I was in his library, of Beecher's early advent as a newspaper editor. DeForest then owned the Indianapolis Enterprise, and Beecher was a young preacher, just come to town with a new wife and not very brilliant temporal prospects. His church had agreed to pay him $1,000 a year, but was unable to raise it promptly, so he took to the city, dubbing himself 'Editor of the Journal.' This column became, directly, so popular, that DeForest started an agricultural paper and made Beecher the editor of it.

"It was at Indianapolis that Mrs. Stone visited her brother, and there, it is said, obtained the name and suggestion of Uncle Tom's Cabin, which she derived from a venerable negro, once enslaved, who had just near the city, dubbed by general consent 'Tom's Cabin.' His religious nature and personal dignity and recollections came aptly into the great prose epic against slavery."

REMEDY FOR A BOBBY FELLOW.—We have been handed the following remedy for this painful affliction. The gentleman who handed it to us tested its efficiency with success. As soon as the pulsation that indicates the disease is felt, put directly over the spot a fly blister about the size of a five cent piece, and keep it on for six or eight hours, at the expiration of which time, directly under the surface of the blister will be found the felon, easily taken out with the point of a lancet or needle.—Charleston Courier.
