The London Times on the Elections in England and America—Celebration of the Baptism of the Grecian King Prohibited by the Turkish Government—Arrest of the Greek Attaché of the American Legation.

(By Telegraph to the Pittsburgh Gazette.)

ENGLAND.

LONDON, September 17.—The Times contrasts the political canvass of Great Britain with that of the United States. In both cases the elections are new ones. Here in England there are many contests, differing in men and principles, and the result is a confused hubbub, in which no one sound is heard above the rest. Incidents thus far have been mostly even negative, but the eight weeks remaining before the election may warm the contest now so quiet.

The Times dwells on the violent animosity of the Presidential fight in the United States. It calls an American election an arbitrary carnival. The American people may be serious and interested, but they allow most eccentric and grotesque characters to promenade the streets, which does them some injustice, but less harm than commonly thought.

Benjamin Morgan, the Secretary of the American Legation, has gone on a special mission to St. Petersburg. He also carries a dispatch to the American Embassy at Berlin. Mr. Hatteroff, American Minister at Berlin, is traveling in South Germany.
