This morning we had butter for our toast from the Queen's dairy. It was purchased by one of our party yesterday in the dairy at Windsor Castle. The Londoners are very indignant at this meanness of Her Majesty, as they please to call it.

During the long drought, when every blade of grass was turned to a dead brown, and the cattle had no herbage to feed on, milk and butter were scarce, and the famous Devonshire cletted cream could not be found. But we Americans went to headquarters. The model farm laid out and completed under the supervision of the late Prince Consort, is about a mile from Windsor Castle. At the main lodge we received from the daughter of the keeper a permit to visit the dairy. Approaching a beautiful cottage, as we supposed, in the centre of a large garden, not at the bottom of a hill, under a hazel tree, by a running stream, we could not imagine a dairy on a dry, level plain. But entering the vestibule, lined with marble half way, and frescoed above with beautiful designs, we rang a bell, which was immedidistely answered by a woman past middle age and neatly dressed, one of the Queen's favorite servants. She ushered us into a room about thirty feet square, the roof supported by six octagonal columns of white marble, with richly carved capitals. The floors were of white procelain tiles, the windows stained glass, bordered with May blossoms, daisies, buttercups and primroses.

The floors were lined with tiles of porcelain of a delicate blue tint, with has for some years been well known as an Prince Consort, and each of the the flow of blood from wounds. It is very children. Shields, monograms of the inconvenient to carry a bottle of this sub-Royal family and bas-reliefs of agricultural designs, representing the Seasons, completed the ornamentation of this exquisite model dairy. All around the walls ran a marble table, and through the centre two long ones, supported by marble posts, resting on basins, through which runs a perpetnal stream of spring water. By this means the slabs of table are always cold; and the littering on the brass plates on the covers. In the room where the butter was made, milk skimmed and strained, we feasted our eyes on the rows of metal porcelain-lined cans of all sizes, made to lock, and sent to the royal family even as far as Scotland; so they always have good milk and butter. churn was of metal also, and lined with porcelain, made in two compartments. The outside chamber surrounding the cylinder could have warm or cold water poured in to regulate the "coming of the butter" without disturbing the cream. The lid was screwed on, and the stationary stand on which the whole was turned made the work easy and rapid. But while over sixty cows are daily milked and as many more are out grazing, the royal family are more than sat-lafied and the Londoners more than dissatisfied to see the rolls of golden butter and cans of cream sold from the Model Farm, for saving money for the Queen! I know the butter is sold, for we breakfasted on it this good women should, above all things, take morning, and we paid for it, not as a bribe, but a regular market bargain at the diary.

"Upon his return from the State Conven tion, in July last, Major E. G. Evans planted a beautiful little flag-pole in the yard ed a beautiful fittle hig-pole in the yard fronting his residence, to the top of which a flag is daily run, inscribed, 'Grant, McClurg, Negro Suffrage,' accompanied by a streamer which displays the word 'Progress.' The sight of the flag seemed to arouse the old slave spirit in the 'crew of the Constitution' a company of shoult we the Constitution, a company of about two hundred men that were employed at three dollars per day each, and sent out from St. Louis to 'demonstrate' at Rolla on last Tuesday.

"A squad of this chivalry halted at the gate and notified Mr. Evans that the flag must be taken down. The commander said that if she did not take it down his men would destroy it; that it was offensive to them and to the Democratic citizens, and that she ought to have known that to have it up on the day of the 'grand rally' would not be tolerated. As Mr. Evans was at that time attending the Congressional Convention at Washington, it devolved upon his lady, a little woman of about one hundred and seven pounds, to protect the little children, the house and the flag. This visit was not unexpected, as she had heard of threats being made earlier in the day. In assuming the defensive, she informed this imported posse of regulation that she would not remove the flag; that if they entered the yard they would have trouble, and that the flag could not be more offensive to them than their yelling for Jeff. Davis before the door was offensive to her. They told her that if she would lower the flag and take off the words 'negro suffrage' she would not be interrupted, and the flag would be permitted to float upon the breeze. She replied that when that flag comes down it will all come down together.

"The flag did not come down. Mrs.
Evans remained at her window, in sight of the flag, during the balance of the day, with no other company than her little children and her husband's revolver, which she kept by her side. Still, she had the consolation of approval and encouragement in her spirited course from leading citizens of the town, who sent her word that they would fly to her assistance at the first shot. Mrs. Evans had heard the yell for Jeff Davis from Price's raiders in 1864, and when she heard it repeated by the party now, she could not feel very kindly towards its members. It was a misfortune of this chivalrous 'crew' that she was of a soldier family -she having three brothers who were officers in the blue army, namely : Captain George, Lieutenant Henry and Major Andy Treece. 11 Al about al

Garibaldi's Resignation. The Florence correspondent of the Debats:
says that the resignation of Garibaldi has caused but little sensation. "Garibaldi."
he says, "lives alone in retirement at Caprerat he sees nobody and is said to suffer considerably. As he does not appear in the chamber, it matters little whether he is or is not a member. Nothing indicates that he is medically he is meditating any sort of enterprise, and ne is meditating any sort of enterprise, and as his position as a deputy, was a protection rather than a trouble to him, his resignation would appear to prove that he is really ill, and is withdrawing from the scene." The Italian journals do not, however, hold this view. The Movimento, of Genoa, says that General Garibaill has resigned because he feels that the Opposition is nowerless for feels that the Opposition is powerless for good, as it can merely assist in the realization of the plans of a fallen Minister. The Gazetto d'Rulka declares that the General Gazetta d'Itulta declares that the General Considers the union of the men of Aspromonte and Mentana with those who fired on him and twice made him prisoner as an act widths just received from factory.

Opening of the Tomb of William Rufus. The tomb of William Rufus, in Winchester Cathedral, England, was opened a fortnight ago. The London Telegraph says:

"From their first hasty grave William's remains were, at some time unknown, removed to a sarcophagus near the altar. This sarcophagus occupies an inconvenient si uation; and the dean and chapter were desirous, if they found that the sarcophagus contained no human relics, to remove it to another site. The doubt whether it held the dust of Rufus dated from the disturbance of the cathedral tombs by the Parliamentary soldiers, who used the bones of the dead to break the painted windows. At the Restoration the remains thus violated were collected into six chests, ranged on either side of the altar; and one of these actually bore an inscription to the effect that William's remains were there con-tained. If the sarcophagus had been sacked in 1642, and the frail contents mingled with the ashes of an inferior yet illus-trious crowd in the six mortuary chests, there seemed no reason why the obstacle should not be removed from the choir: and this was what the cathedral authorities designed. But the sarcophagus was not empty; t disclosed to the sight of the exploring surgeons a nearly perfect male skeleton, presenting evidences of a previous removal, the remnants of some insignia of authority, and, as one account states, even the remains believed' to be that of William Rufus; and the relics, after accurate memoranda had

This is to derify that I had used tobacco to such an extent that my be alth had become greatly impaired, and my whole system deranged and broken down. In dune, 1867, I purchased one box of Orton's Preparation, and after using it I found that I was completely cured. I have not lind any hankering or desire for tobacco sluce using the preparation. I believe it to be all that it is recommended, and I would advise all who wish to quit the use of tobacco to try one box of Orton's Preparation.
