Confidence Game.

The latest sensation in the way of confidence games transpired in this city during the present week. A young woman, who, like all other confidence operators, is a stranger in the city, a few days since succeeded in gaining the confidence of a prominent young gentleman in the city, and after inducing him to go with her to a house of ill fame, attempted to extort money from him by prosecuting him for rape. The deluded young man was arrested and gave bail for a hearing, which took place yesterday. In the course of the hearing it transpired from the testimony of the prosecutrix that the man was the victim. That she had previously been at the nouse referred to and made arrangements for the second visit. The Alderman, before whom the in-fermation was made, after hearing the tesformation was made, after hearing the tes-timony of the prosecuting witnesses, dis-charged the accused and dismissed the case at the cost of the prosecutrix.

Not having succeeded in this operation, the energetic operator, whose perseverance appears to be her particular forte, sought to gain in another direction what she had ailed to obtain from her first victim, and o a certain extent succeeded. She peared before the Mayor and made infor mation charging the woman who kept the house, where she had taken the young man, with keeping a bawdy house. The accused was arrested and the case compromised by the payment of ten dollars to the confidence, woman by the propietress of confidence woman by the proprietress of the bagnio

Audacious Attempt. Yesterday afternoon the driver of a one horse wagon left his vehicle in front of a grocery store on Liberty street while he went inside the establishment to transact some business. | Coming out in a few minutes he found the horse and vehicle missing, and on looking down the street he saw them in charge of a man who was hurrying off as fast as the horse could trayel. He immediately raised an alarm and started after the thief, followed by several policemen and a large crowd of people. The retreating thief turned down St. Clair street and from that to Duquesne Way, still continuing the rapidity of his flight and followed by the crowd. At lasta flank movement was made by the pursuing party, heading off the runaway as he was returning from the Point by way of a secluded cross street. The thief, however, finding himself foiled, jumped from the vehicle and disappeared. The owner of the turnout was glad enough to get his property back, and made no further exertions to catch the bold operator. The affair occasioned considerable excitement in the velocity, but when the result was known it cuickly sulpad down. For audactous ing, and on looking down the street he saw the vicinity, but when the result was known calmed down. For audacious mpudence and reckless daring, the operation was certainly an unusually conspicu-ous one, and almost terminated with suc-

Isabella Scahill relates a story which n substance is as follows: She resides in Lawrenceville, and on Wednesday evening started out in company with a male friend to take a walk. They had not proceeded far when an acquaintance of her companion joined them and was introduced as Mr. Kelley. Soon after the friend with whom she had started out excused himself and left her in charge of Kelley. The two continued the walk, turning off from Butler street toward the Aliegheny river. Reaching the track of the Aliegheny Val-ley Railroad they walked along it a short ley Railroad they walked along it a short distance when, on arriving at a secluded spot, Kelley made indecent proposals to ner which she indignantly spurned, and endeavored to get away, but he detained her, and by force succeeded in accomplishing his villanous design, after which he fled. she made her way home and yesterday made information before Alderman McMasters against Kelley for rape. Kolley, it is said, is employed at the United States Arsenal at Lawrenceville, to which place an officer proceeded with a warrant for thearrest of the alleged criminal.

MESSRS. EDITORS GAZETTE: The East ern circulars received to-day, showing the condition of the markets up to Saturday, 12th inst., give us the following indications for the fall trade:

The stock of refined oil in Philadelphia including that already on board ves-sels, is just about equal to the tonnage engaged.
Some two weeks will be required to load and clear this stock out of the markets. In the mean time the shipments from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia average 3,000 bar-layer day on the partels per month.

rels per day, or 90,000 barrels per month.
We find also that the clearances for the last six days amount to ne rly 2,000,000 (two mil ion) gallons, or 50,000 (fifty thousand) barrels of oil. We find also that we have exported this year 69,000,000 (sixty-nine million) gallons, against 41,500,000 (forty-one million five against 41,500,000 (forty-one million five nundred thousand) last year, up to this time, or about 66 (sixty-six) per cent. more oil has gone out of the country this year than last year, up to this date. Af er seeing these facts, let us imagine what has become of this great excess of oil. Has it been consumed? thereby making further shipments sumed? thereby making further shipments a necessity, or is it still on hand in Europe, awaiting a market.

From our foreign circulars just received, and from foreign correspondence, deemed reliable by the writer of this, as it consists of letters written from one merchant to anof letters written from one merchant to another, we find first: that the stock on hand in Antwerp is forty thousand barrels in excess of stock there same time last year, whilst her "expeditious" (shipments to the interior) are only four thousand barrels per week, against six thousand same date last

Second, Stock in Marseilles twenty thous

Second, Stock in Marsellies twenty thousand barrels in excess of last year, which for this port is perfectly tremendous.

Third. Stock in Bremen is difficult to ascertain, but all accounts agree in naming it as unprecedentedly large, so much so that it is impossible any longer to get insurance on oil.

on oil.

Bremen is doing a larger business than formerly, but not sufficiently so, in the judgment of the writer, to use up the large excess of stock. Last year the trade of this city was largely made up of orders from the Malkagragan but our advices this city was largely made up of orders from the Mediterranean, but our advices this year agree that the stocks through all Southern Europe are largely in excess, and some think that this part of Europe has sufficient refined oil to last during this and the next season. We are inclined to be-lieve this, because we find ino orders in lieve this, because we find "no orders in the market now for any of these ports."

The shipments for the past week or two have been mainly on English account, very few orders having been received from Continental Europe, and the demand for the former is now filled.

These facts argue strongly against any permanent advance in the price of oil. The fact appears to be that during the first part of the year we had an advancing market, of the year we had an advancing market, and the shipments to all ports were largely in excess of the actual demand for consumption. Now, the stocks being everywhere tion. Now, the stocks being everywhere larger than the trade requires, the consequence is, there are almost literally no orders for further shipments and prices are tumbling rapidly. Add to this the fact now established, and admitted by all informed dealers, that the production is fully thirteen thousand barrels per day and still indealers, that the production is fully thirteen thousand barrels per day and still increasing, and the problem of prices of petroleum for 1868 is easily solved. On the other hand the bulls are not yet all dead, and intend even yet to make a desperate affort some time and in some way to revive effort some time and in some way to revive at least to those in this section of the counthe present drooping market, in order to try. Either has its province, to deck the brow of worth the one o bare the aim of knaves the other. Arto bare the aim of knaves the other. Argument on hypothesis alone is as idle as legitimate reasoning is ineffective on narrow and imbecile minds, and there is no surer evidence of the absence of proof, in a discussion or controversy, than an offer to bet; in fact it is an old maxim that 'betting is a fool's argument." Wherever a man makes money, the convincing power, his subject and resources of argument are exhausted, and this was, in truth, the point reached by the nondescript agent of the Weed Sewing Machine, when he offered to venture one hundred machines on an issue that had no existence in law—nothing but a newspaper war, wherein words are cheap

> Yesterday the Democracy obtained from some mysterious source the intelligence that Maine would not give more than seventeen thousand majority. This inspired the Democrats somewhat, and their money was readily offered in wagers on the result not being over seventeen thousand. Their batts, we need not say, were readily taken by the Republicans. Later in the day the news from Maine confirmed the majority newarrom Maine contrmed the majority as "over 20,000," and betting again became spirited, the Republicans this time being the offerers on the latter figures. FITTSBURGH, Sept. 17, 1868. I wish to say that the statements of Messrs. Carson Bros. in regard to myself, published in yesterday morning's Dispatch are incorrect. It was the "Empire" and "Wilcox & Gibb" which would not do my work—(not the Weed.) I have no more to say concerning their works to return to say concerning their refusal to return me the Weed or their repeated perversions of the facts as originally stated by me. I am a defenceless woman and shrink from such a controversy. I will say, however, that I have secured another "Weed," and nothing could persuade me to exchange it for all the Empire and Wilcox & Gibbs' ma-

Small Favors Thankfully Received-But

Thankful that the Maine majority was not fifty thousand, the Democrats arranged to fire several hundred guns last night at the Monongahela wharf in henor of the victory their neighbors obtained. The Secretary of War was telegraphed for guns; he complied, willing that the party should have an all day's honor in sporting with a war toy, entirely new to themat least to those in this section of the country. Horses were procured and in imitation of "experienced artillerists" dashed out to the Allegheny Arsenal, presented the order to the commandant and received the artillery. With much pomp and show and an occasional cheer for Seymour and Blair, in order to assure the people along the line of march that some folks can do things as well as others, the squad moved to a livery stable, on Diamond alley, and there unhitched, awaiting the darkness of night to fire the salute. Night came, night to fire the salute. Night came, but, unfortu ately for them, with it adampening dispatch from Maine which fixed the majority much pagarer fifty thousand than they imagined. A consultation was held.

The powder cost money; nobody present had ever assisted in the firing of a cannon; those experienced artillerists, Captains Cook, Floyd and Collier, had re-Captains Cook, Floyd and Colley, had to fused to accept duty in that camp, and, af er all, Maine was'nt such a great State that they should risk their precious lives in honoring her for doing just what they did'nt want her to do by a long shot.
