FARM, GARDEN AND HOUSEHOLD.

CROP PROSPECTS. The crop reports received at the Agricultural Bureau of August and September, are of a decidedly encouraging character. that of last year, the increased area sown will secure an agregate somewhat larger. A few localities have suffered to a limited extent from rust or the chinch bug. The corn crop is in a fine condition generally. Since June the season has been very favoreble, and with the unprecedented increase in the area planted-2,000,000 of acres, or about nine per cent.—there must be an immense aggregate yield of this great staple. There Illinois, which reports a decline of two per cent. The value of the crop is likewise will be a full yield of oats, also of rye and barley. A slight increase in the average of buckwheat is reported. Potatoes have suffered considerably from the bug. Little injury has as yet been produced, however, by the rot. Wool shows a general decline in weight of fleece of from three to five per cent. as compared with an average product.

Though a smaller area of cotton was planted than last year, the culture is generally better and the prospect of a fruitful yield more promising. Hops show a large increase in acreage. There will be an average yield of tobacco and a full crop of apples,

The report of the Bureau is a model of conciseness and definiteness. GATHERING FRUIT.

If the bloom is rubbed off the peach by rough handling, its beauty of appearance is injured, and it will decay much sooner than if untouched. Formerly it was supposed that the peach must be gathered before ripe in order to ship it any distance; but practical experience has proved that ripe fruit, not quite soft, will carry as well as unripe, and command a much better Pears and apples should never be picked less the stem will separate freely from the tree, the fruit is not ripe; it will neither eat nor cook good, and is only fit for those who where we observed similar results from a similar cause. The whole secret of the thing is, that the rocks absorb the heat of the cook and give it off at night. as soon as gathered, may be sent direct to market; but nearly every variety of pear is improved in appearance and quality by keeping in close, dark drawers, wrapped in flannel or soft paper, or packed in bran a few days. For profit, and in order to obtain the highest price, all fruit pays to be assorted into two or more grades. A few scattering large berries, apples or pears, in a quart or a bushel, do not assist in advancing the price; but if carefully packed by themselves will bring the highest price, and often induce the dealers to buy the small fruit in order to get the large.

ARRANGE TO SOW MORE CLOVER. The value of red clover as a renovator of the soil is not generally appreciated. It makes excellent hay, and when consumed makes a manure very rich in nitrogen. A ton of good clover hay contains about fifty pounds of nitrogen, probably not more than one-tenth of which is lost by passing through animals. It is worth as manure the passing through animals. It is worth as manure Bergen and Byron have raised crops that we commonly cart from the yard in the spring. The crop is of very great value for Monroe bave realized thirty-five per acre. pasture, or to turn in as a good crop. The usage of good farmers differs somewhat in we have realized thirty-five per acre. The largest yields from selected fields that we have been of ore 550 bushes that the treatment of clover. Some turn in the twelveacees, raised by Ed. Emmens, of Riga, crop when full grown in June. Others pasture it the first season, and turn in what is left for wheat. Others let it stand without pasturing, and turn it under for wheat. Others take off two crops, and turn it under the second season. The most intelligent farmers are now favoring the practice of cutting and pasturing through one season, believing that the soil improves more by the growth of the roots. It is a very strongrooted plant, and penetrates the soil to a great depth. The mechanical condition of the soil is very much improved by the decay we glean from a brief article upon the subof these long tap roots. However used, it ject in the Essex Banner, says: cannot fail to benefit the soil, if the manure that is made from the plant is carefully saved and returned to the fields where it grew. Clover ought to have its place in every rotation. The farmers of the interior and of restoring the fertility of their wheat fields, and securing as large crops as the virgin soil yielded. Arrange to grow more clover. MANURE THE TEST OF GOOD FARMING. We farm for profit as a rule, however many exceptions there may be. This profit which we all seek comes from the sale of the products of the land, or that of animals fed upon them. This divides farming operations into two classes, and determines the nature of them, and the system pursued on different farms, or on different fields on the same farm. By far greater numbers of farmers pursue a mixed system, deriving their income in part from crops sold, and in part from animal products. With such animal manure is a necessity, and the success of a farmer may be predicted upon the amount he makes and uses. A temporary exception to this rule is seen on some of the virgin lands of the West, and wherever apparently inexhaustible fertility of the soil renders manure superfluous. Where a system of green manuring for wheat and Indian corn, with the addition of lime and plaster, and perhaps bone-dust occasionally, is sufficient with good tillage to maintain fertility, farmers have an economical substitute for animal manures. This system may often be profitably applied to "out fields," and occasionally to entire farms. Manure-barnyard manure, or more properly, barn ma. nure, for the yard is a poor place, at best, to make it-regarding both quantity and quality, must be considered the measure of good

UPRIGHT TREES.

It is a great mistake in orchardists and planters of shade trees to allow them to grow in a leaning attitude. And this comes of a decidedly encouraging character.

Though the average yield of wheat per acre over the whole country is scarcely equal to up; and in all places they are apt to get out of the perpendicular.

It makes the head of an upright, systematic man ache, to see such trees. And to obviate this, every newly planted treeshould be staked and tied up with soft, broad bands to prevent chafing, or they should be well ballasted over the roots with heaps of stone. The first plan is the best, if the work is carefully done.

In case a tree gets out of true line, it can be righted up by loosening the soil over the has been an increased product of hay in all the Northern States, with the exception of may sometimes be necessary to cut off an may sometimes be necessary to cut off an obstinate root to get the tree erect. SELECTING CATTLE.

Let breeders select dams that have size, plenty of milking properties, with ribs out of their loins, like a bulleck that is shown for a prize; standing on short legs, wide and square made, regardless of registered improved sires, however numerous, attached to their pedigrees. Use only true, fine, purely bred bulls, descended from dams of note, wide, deep and compact made when matured, with hides that fill the hand, covered over with plenty of fine hair; animals naturally hardy in constitution—not so long as a barn in their middle, and high on the leg, with flat sides, nipped in waist, and slack loins. Select the best of sires from The appearance and value of fruit depend very much upon when and how it is gathered.

Peaches should be left on the trees until value and the red.

The appearance and value of fruit depend up alloyed gentlemen, full of cart-horse blood, which give substance only in appearance, and that is not propagated in the stock. Avoid under-breeding in your bulls;

> Our attention was once attracted to this same subject by observing that the melon vines in a hill around which some stones had been placed were much larger at the end of a few weeks than those in the hills that had not been so treated. The same principle is observed in cities, where grape vines are trained in front of brick walls which absorb the heat by day and reflect it when most needed by the vine. We protreatment for the vine by placing stones about the roots of several bearing vines, in different parts of the vineyard where they failed this year to ripen a single grape.—
