Punshon as a Lecturer. Perhaps no living English orator has an equal reputation as a lecturer with that of the Rev. W. Moreley Punshon, who is to deliver two lectures in these cities during the month of October. His celebrity in Eugland is so great that the most capacious halls have been unable to hold the multitu les that flock to hear him. A like rush to hear him promises to attend his visit through this country. The editor of Zion's Herald, Boston, thus measures him with other distinguished orators, living and

His reputation will win him great crowds and praise. Un ike Newman Hall in di-rectness, simplicity and a sort of childish manliness, he is as great a man, if not a greater soul. More hidden in himself, more seemingly cold and exclusive, he omes forth from the depth of his own ing with far greater majesty and glory. It like the sun in its strength. Bascom, Chapin and Storrs are his American connecterparts. He has more of unction than either of them, and a harder finish, but with less magination, and perhaps of pen-erritive analysis. His set orations are his wonderful works, and all the world of America will run after him as they have after Dickens and Hall. Two distinct, separate American worlds fellowed these two distinct and separate Englishmen. Punshon will unite both of their auditories in willing and abundant admiration of his disinguished genius. Rev. T. M. Green, a Baptist minister, while visiting recently in Canada, hap-pened to be a fellow passenger with Pun-shon in one of his journeys. He thus writes of him:

Among English preachers he ranks high Among English preachers no ranks night perhaps highest in some departments of public speaking. His greatest power, however, seems to be wielded from the platform of the platform the platf rather than from the pulpit. Without the simplicity of Newman Hall, yet the roll of his resonant periods, delivere With a ready and strong utterance, is entrangeing to his eager listeners. Without the power to make men feel themselves sinners, and he pless, which belongs to Spurgeon, yet he excels him in the brilliancy of his thoughts and the charms of his oratory.
