From that moment, there has been but one question, and while they were on one side, the other was held by ANDREW JOHNSON, the Southern rebels, the Northern Copperhead Democracy, and by none else.

The power of the Union ought not to be and has not been thus resisted successfully. Congress immediately resumed the function imposed upon it by the Constitution: It swept away Mr. Johnson's assumptions to the last. and his bastard creations with a word; it took measures for bringing about the establishment of legal State governments ; it had no right to exclude any free citizen of those States from the duty of participation in the orderly and republican reconstruction of their local institutions; it made temporary provision for the maintenance of peace and order in the disorganized States by military authority, but in the same act directed all loyal citizens of such States to proceed forthwith in making governments for themselves. Slavery, with all its adjuncts, its peculiar privileges and its peculiar disabilities had gone forever ; here lay the territory of ten States, States in area, States in population, | remits all municipal questions to the people States in everything but the possession of of each State ; that, lawfully revised and any legally existing form whatever of civil amended as these may choose, the supergovernment, populated by twelve millions vision of Congress is thereafter lawful only of citizens, all of whom had equal natural rights, which God gave them and that all the State governments shall be rewhich neither man nor man's government' publican in form; that each and all of the could take away, and none of whom, no not reconstructed states is the sole judge of the one, white or black, had in the extinguishment of his rebellion, any political rights whatever except such as he might hold under the Constitution and laws of the Federal Union. Not one State law remained extant and valid throughout the South, which could take political rights from one class or confer them solely upon another. Slavery and all that sayoured of its curse had been blotted out forever. The removal of that great foundation made the entire fabric of municipal legislation, based upon its inclusions and exclusions of political right to topple prostrate and indistinguishable into the dus .

Thus, then, the Congress of the united and loyal people approached this business. They came to deal with twelve millions of natural persons within their several State went further in his Zanesville speech, and limits; they came to pronounce the extent and nature of what political rights they might, individually and collectively, enjoy BLAIR Democracy take issue with us. and exercise; they came to say who should They say that they can abolish such exist-Gold closed in New York yesterday at struction. This is all that reconstruction has accomplished. And it has been done so well that it can never be unlence with which BLAIR, HAMPTON and their compeers are madly dashing out the mains of a once respectable and great idle "

party against the immoveable and impregable bulwarks of the Federal Constitution Those walls are immovable because they are builded on the eternal foundations of Liberty and Justice; they are impregnable, because their rampurts are crowned by the might of twenty-four millions of loyal people, vigilant and courageous to defend them

We hold it to be clear that Congress had iswful control over Reconstruction ; that. reconstruction was necessary for the peoples who had no lawful governments existing; that Congress might lawfully impose conditions; that the conditions imposed were in their essence just and right; that, as to the suffrages in the preliminary popular action, the only question for Congress to consider was not the race of the citizen, but his fitness for the trust, the loyalty of his motives, of his submission to the terms offered, and how far his exercise of the right would be compatible with the public safety; that reconstruction thus perfected to satisfy the Constitutional requirement suffrage now, as absolute in the future as powerless to dispute the results which have preceded its restoration.

The Republican party demands only this that the conditions imposed upon and now accepted by the late rebel peoples, as specified in the outset of this article, shall be ever held to be, as of right and in fact they are, a part of the Federal Constitution. They regard all the steps taken to secure this acceptance as no longer in question. They remit Negro Suffrage and all other ques tions of political rights to the States respectively, and these may dispose of them how and when they please, provided only that their action be orderly and lawful; they may adopt new constitutions every month if they choose, but they must and shall take for that only the lawful and orderly means. No rebellion, no violence, no anarchy shall be permitted. Here is where the ment has shown additions to our debt.'" He knew better than this, and must have known that every intelligent man who heard him knew it to be a falsehood, and that the Debt has actually been lessened by nearly three hundred millions of dollars. This deliberate mis-statement, with his equally false insinuation that the National banks derive "some eighteen or twenty millions" from the Treasury, paying nothing back, reminds us that he had better have stuck to his old idea that "all talk about greenbacks, the debt, banks and taxation is

His declaration that the Supreme Court has decided the reconstruction acts to be unconstitutional; that the great body of the Southern whites were loyal at the beginning of the war; that the negroes were disloyal from its beginning to its end; that Gen. GRANT has continuously approved the policy of President JOHNSON, and other assertions which might be specified, were all equally gratuitous and discreditable to his intelligence and honesty. We have to thank him for his re-endorse ment of the Brodhead letter, and for the tissue of falsehoods and fallacious reasonings by which he sought to defend it. The country needs only to comprehend the full import of that remarkable document, and of the Democratic platform builded upon that as its corner-stone, and to know that such dangerous opinions are still maintained by the candidate who first propounded them, to be thereby advised of its own duties and amply prepared for the issue at the polls.

It is noticeable that the whole of his argunent, based upon the alleged fact of the general loyalty of the Southern people in 1861, but that they were deserted by our own Government, (BUCHANAN's,) and dragged by the conspirators into the rebellion for their self-preservatien, is entirely omitted from the written address which has been palmed off upon the public as the real speech by our Democratic neighbor of the Post. We are half inclined to forgive the unscrupulous audacity of BLAIR in his fabrications of fact, his puerile weakness of ar gument, and his shameless invitation of the people to anarchy and bloodshed, in con sideration of the candid admission which the Post would not print, but which arraigned a Democratic administration as a guilty accomplice in the first rebellion. Here is testimony conclusive and upon authority not to be disputed by the Democracy, that every citizen should remember: "The people of the South, the loyal men of the South, voted against these ordi-nances (of secession) at the very moment nances (or secession) at the very moment of time the Government of the United States were arming the conspirators of the South—the Knights of the Golden Circle— and furnishing them with arms out of the public arsenals, with which to put down the loyal men of the South who stood up for the government."

the government." This is the public testimony of General BLAIR, the present Democratic candidate for the Vice Presidency, delivered in a speech

A WELL informed journal in Georgia mays: We now begin to see and feel that Georgia will go for Grant after all. He will get from forty to fifty thousand white votes. This, added to an overwhelming colored vote, together with the grit daily displayed by the Legislature, will do the work up nicely for the General. The State is now Grant-ed beyond a doubt.

They might have added to their resolution "and unnecessary," as they have not the remotest chance of making any combination to defeat the popular Republican nominees at the approaching election.

A DEMAGOGUE IN DESPAIR. General BLAIR is unfortunate in being a BLAIB in his politics. The Democracy are still more unfortunate in having been utterly debauched and ruined as a party by the fatal counsels which this reckless politician has been induced to represent, in the interests of the late rebel South. We would rather speak of him as a General, for his military record comprises all of him that is creditable as a public man. As a politician he was long since completely "played out" and shelved, with the rest of his family, by the disgusted friends of the Union.

His speech in this city on Monday night was plainly made with the hope of arresting the same sentiment of disgust which be gins to pervade his new associates of the Democracy. Three years since, General BLAIR was so completely "used up" as a politician that nothing remained to him except the destruction either of himself or of his Republican associates. Attempting the latter, he has achieved only the former. It is true that he may flatter himself in the temporary possession of very doubtful honors. once intensely hated, but it may be considered as certain as fate that these honors have been purchased by so base and shameless an abandonment of his former principles, by a surrender so unjustifiable and disgraceful to the Copperheads and rebels who use him and despise him, that his inevitable defeat will be followed, if he be still capable of the sentiment of shame, by the keenest remorse. Being a BLAIR, he may be above any weakness of that sort, but, if he were any body else, the sense of deeply irretrievable disgrace 'and self-humiliation which awaits him, would be crushing to the last degree. Imagine the assurance of this demagogue,

WE ARE NOT CAST IRON.

Cast Iron undergoes marked changes under the alternate action of heat and cold, and the human bedy is not cast iron. On the contrary, it is a combination of delicate tissues and fibres, which are exquisitely sensitive to atmospheric changes, and, unless protected against sudden and violent variations of temperature by wise precautions, are sur to be disastrously affected by them.

At this season the difference between the temper-nture of night and day is greater than at any other period of the year, and the stomach, the liver, the bowels and the nervous system are apt to receive violent shocks from these changes, resulting in indigestion, billous attacks, debility, low nervous fever, fover and ague, remittent fever, &c.
