Judge Sterrett charged the jury with his usual entire fairness and impartiality. Reviewing the evidence, he said the jury were to find, first, whether the arrest was lawful — whether there was anything in Mrs. Dake's conduct to cause the officer to believe she was a "street walker," thus justifying her arrest under the city ordinance authorizing the apprehension of such characters. Second, assuming the arrest was lawful; (which his Honor did not,) was there such an excess of authority and violence as to justify the conviction of the defendants of assault and hattery. Then, it is the man williams ordered the ropes there such an excess of authority and violence as to justify the conviction of the defendants of assault and battery. Then, if the jury should find the defendants guilty

Dake at the hands of defendants, she had suffered grievous bodily harm. If so, the defendants were guilty, as charged, of ag

Their movements, however, were such as to excite her apprehensions, and she entered a grocery for protection, which she there requested, giving her name and residence. The defendants entered the grocery and she endeavored to avoid them, passing behind the counter and coming through an opening near the door where she was seized. She again gave her name and residence, (as she had previously, in the presence or hearing of defendants,) and told these who held her that they were mistaken. Was Mrs. D. informed for what she was arrested? Did she know that Raubb or Kellar were officers, or did they so inform arrested? Did she know that Raubb or Kellar were officers; or did they so inform her? If the jury could not say from the evidence that either of these facts appeared, the case of defendants was aggravated. The conduct of the defendants then, was certainly such as to terrify a delicate and refined lady such as Mrs. Dake appeared to be and her resistance was but natural.

Mr. Mueller interrupted His Honor to suggest whether the fact that no violence was required in arresting the colored box Taylor should not be considered in connecor as indicating that the officers used no more violence than was necessary in overcoming her resistance.

His Honor replied that a colored boy was one thing and a delicate, refined lady quite a different one. The defendant, as stated in the report of the preceding case, participated to a certain extent in the arrest of Mrs. Dake, assisting in conducting her to the Mayor's office, after she had been brought some distance by officer Ranbb and Kellar.

From the evidence adduced it appears Williams first-took hold of Mrs. Dake on Smithfield street, opposite the site of the new City Hall, at first seizing her quite roughly by the arm as she was stooping to to speak to some little girls, who were upon the sidewalk. The crowd offinered for the release of Mrs. D., and after proceeding to nearly the corner of Smithfield and Fifth ayenue, after being twice requested, Williams ordered Raubb to take the gyves from her wrist, and himself took exclusive charge of her, expressing an intention to take her to the look aip, (tombs.) but, at the suggestion of a citizen, Mr.

Those called for the de-fence, and who testified that Williams' conduct was in all respects humane and gentlemanly, saw him from points beyond that at which he was called on for assistance by by officer Raubb. One witness testified that Mrs. Dake consented to go with Williams, after the gyves had been taken from her hand.

Mr. Woodward, for the prosecution, objected on the ground of irrelevancy.

Mr. Swartzwelder was aware the question was not strictly relevant, and he offered it more in defense of the Mayor, who had been assailed in the public prints concerning his, "woman order," than as having anything to do with the case in hand.

Judge Sterrett thought the offer entirely irrelevant, and to admit it would be equivalent to allowing the Mayor to make a "stump speech" in Court in his own defense.

There was, however, a very important ques-tion in the case which had not been adverted to by counsel on either side. As far as the case stood before the jury there was no authority shown for the arrest of Mrs. Dake, and so far as the evidence went it appeared to be a great outrage. So, assuming that the arrest was unlawful, is the defendant liable for answering the call to assist a another officer without inquiring whether the arrest was authorized or not. This, His Honor thought, was about the whole question in the case. It was an important one, and he had some doubt about it. Gen. Cellier said he had not examined Judge Sterrett expressed a desire to have the case in some shape by which the point might be raised.

Gen. Collier said he had argued to the jury upon the other point in the case, viz: whether the defendant used unnecessary violence or force in the assistance he had

The second proposition his Honor repeated he considered of great importance, as it involved on the one hand the public safety, and on the other the efficiency of the public as it involved on the one The jury had not agreed upon a verdict at

It is also true that the same Bitters were made and sold in the Island of St. Thomas over fortigen. of St. Thomas, over forty years ago, as any old planter, merchant or sea captain doing business in the West Indies will tell you.

It is distinctly within my recollection that on the return of my father (who was a on the return of his an extensive trade in the tropics,) he would invariably have the Bitters among the ship's stores, and our family sideboard was nevar without them. For any sickness, it matters not how severe or trifling, the decanter of these Bitters, by a different name, was always resorted to as a sovereign remedy.

A SLANDER NAILED. The following card explains itself fully: EAST BIRMINGHAM, Sept. 30, 1868. Messes. Editors Gazette: In the issue of the Pittsburgh Post of the 29th there was discharged for not participating in the procession of the 24th. In justice to the firm and the undersigned, we wish you to publish this as a flat denial to the above charge; for, instead of discharging men for not parfor, instead of discharging men for not par-ticipating in the procession, it was only by the solicitation of some of their employes that they were represented. Although it was but by a small delegation, yet we prom-ise the editor of that delectable sheet, the Post, that should an opportunity again offer they will turn out a proper part of the property of the process. they will turn out a much larger delegation, and this, too, without having resort to the threats insinuated by the Post. As to the assertion that there were some who represented the above firm who would vote for seymour and Blair, we also pronounce it itterly false, as the undersigned constituted the entire party, and if the editor of the Post expects any votes for his candidates from this crowd he had better start in right
