NEW YORK CITY.

Accident to a Ferry Boat—Loss of 1868. The following particulars show the cause of the accident to the ferry boat on Saturday. The Hamilton left her slip on the Brooklyn side at 7:30 with a great number of passengers, and a steamer of the New York side encountered the flood tide. The boat was headed down stream in order to meet the counter tide and enter the slip. At this time it is alleged a Southern propeller, which was endeavoring to enter a neighboring slip, let go her stern line and swung around, thus blocking up the entrance to the Fulton slip. The helmsman of the Hamilton then headed the boat between the propeller and the Bullwhacker, and the latter was run between the propeller and the slip. There was not sufficient room between the propeller and the slip, and a collision became inevitable. The propeller was moved, and in a moment the Hamilton crashed against the ferry boat, Union, which lay between the slip and the Hamilton. About one thousand passengers were on board the Hamilton, coming to the ferry boat in the city, fully one-half of whom had crowded the forward part of the boat. This large number caused the forward deck of the Hamilton to sink several inches, which latter boat had a light load on board. The momentum of the Hamilton carried her guards under those of the Union. The forward deck of the Hamilton was very densely packed with passengers, and the warning was so brief that it was impossible for them to retreat, and a number were caught between the boats and terribly crushed. The ladies' cabin of the Hamilton was the scene of a most heart-rending and ghastly scene. Veritable women and children screamed for help. The cheeks of strong men were blanched with fear. For a moment those in the cabin expected to see the boat go down or crushed. An effort was made to reach the shore, but the boat was about to sink, and several persons were knocked down and trampled on. Five persons were killed or mortally wounded, and twenty seriously injured.

He alleges that the whole country is devoted upon a wealthy Havana, who is Carlos and Maximo, and who so far has furnished all the funds necessary to the expedition. A public meeting in the Union League hall, to be held in the city on Monday next, to discuss the contribution tax, and the United States Consul, as well as other representatives of foreign Governments, advise American citizens to contribute to the expedition tax is enforced by the President and they will be forwarded to Washington. He regards the contribution as an extraordinary tax, and the various Commissions have written in a remonstrance against it, which is to be laid to the President.
