AS LATE as the 17th ult. the weather continued favorable for operations on the Pacific Railway, and the managers entertained a strong conviction that they could reach Oregon, a point thirty-two miles north of Salt Lake City, by the first of January.

THE Speakership of the Assembly interests politicians just now. Messrs. WILSON, of Allegheny, STRONG, of Tioga, and HARRIS, of Dauphin, are named as the Republican candidates, while Mr. JONES, of Berks, is to receive the barren honor of a Democratic nomination.

IN THE face of a duty of $4.00 per ton, of 2,000 lbs. for iron, and of forty-five per cent on the invoiced value of steel, the importation of foreign railway bars has trebled within three years, showing, for the same period of nine months, in 1866, 70,405 tons; in 1867, 137,994 tons; in 1868, 209,868 tons.

MR. DIBAZZINI declines Her Majesty's offer to raise him to the peerage, but accepts it for his wife, who thus becomes Viscountess Beaconsfield, taking her title from the borough which her husband has so long represented in Parliament.

A NEW and most profitable source of wealth has been very lately developed in Louisiana. The rice-culture of the State was, only a few years since, confined to a few small coast-planters, whose product attracted little or no attention in the local markets.

DATA, compiled from the official record, show that we have had, in the past forty years, seven Indian wars, (the last still pending) and an almost countless number of less important outbreaks.

One peculiar feature of this Indian question is the impartial freedom of opinion with which people differ upon its merits. That latitude of discussion and judgment which a jealous patriotism would forbid, were a foreign and powerful nation concerned, has the amplest expression in relation to Indian affairs.

The political insignificance of Germany, through centuries, has undoubtedly its source in the character of its people, the latter may, in turn, have been somewhat influenced by the former. Deprived of the opportunity of a practical development of their genius by stupid, petty tyrants, and too easy and phlegmatic in their disposition to resist their despotism by means of force, they naturally turned their attention to the arena of science and roved through the spaces of speculative philosophy, simply because they were prevented from exercising their talents on a field of practical utility.

It is more carefully we consider the restoration-policy, as lately adopted by the Government, the more heartily we can approve it. If, therefore, the pending hostilities, as reported by an adequate force, and in accordance with what seems to be a well-devised plan of campaign, shall be successful in enforcing the acquiescence of the Indian tribes, it will prove a long step toward the amelioration of their former state, and the remission of the whole question to the quiet but real influence of those natural causes which, unimpeded, will yield an inevitable solution.

GERMAN EMIGRATION AND ITS CAUSES.

Germany, though a densely populated country, is by no means a poor one, and in that respect is superior to France or Italy, from both of which countries but few emigrate in pursuit of a new home.

There may be something in the fatalistic movements, adding its weight to other previous inducements of emigration. Prussia's preponderance in the north, and the annexation of various smaller States to her body, may have given offense to some shortsighted individuals, and the general obligation to bear arms and do military service may have driven many young men from the new provinces across the ocean; still, these circumstances are far from giving sufficient light for the explanation of the phenomenon.

THE essential elements of true Republicanism are as sealed books to the entire Latin race. Neither in France, in Spain, nor in Italy, have these radically essential ideas effectively penetrated the masses of the people, preparing them adequately for the reception of a plan of self-government, which, from a traditional age, has found favor and a measure of recognition from another race in Northern Europe.

THE New York Spirit of the Times makes a very interesting statement concerning the precise origin of those terms of capitulation, the concession of which by Mr. SHERMAN to the Confederate General awakened, at that day, such indignant manifestations of public feeling throughout the North.

LETTERS FROM MRS. SWISHELM.

The Mysteries of Physical Death, and of the Roads Which Lead to Death Eternal. (Correspondence of the Pittsburgh Gazette.)

For some time, scientific men have been discussing the probability of the human head retaining consciousness, and suffering pain, for hours, after being severed from the trunk. The subject is worthy of grave attention, but it is probable that it never can be satisfactorily settled.

When our inexperienced traveler came to the depot, where she expected to meet her friend, no friend was there. She had been instructed that this concourse, where they would take the omnibus labelled for a particular hotel—the first in the place—and there wait for her friend.
