RAILWAY FRIGHTS.

We understand that the consolidated companies are now revising their rates of freight, and the occasion will furnish a most favorable opportunity to exhibit their liberality and spirit of reciprocity towards our citizens which they expect the representatives of the city, in their official capacity, to exhibit towards them.

Our contemporary begins to have a faint and indistinct comprehension of the fact we have long sought to impress upon its understanding, that one railway company, constituting a link in a trunk line, but acting independently, cannot determine what through prices shall be for passengers or freight.

Meanwhile other people are aware that while even co-operation, and much more consolidation, between the three main lines which connect in this city, will enable them to adjust their tariff of rates with a larger reference to the welfare of our business men, as well as of their own, neither the combination so far accomplished nor the absolute consolidation of those roads, will make their managers completely masters of the situation.

THE MANUFACTURE OF IRON.

One of the most remarkable facts in the History of Practical Science is the tenacity with which the persons who pursue any particular branch thereof hold on to old methods and instrumentalities. This has been, and still is, particularly conspicuous in respect to two of the larger industries of this city—the manufacture of Glass and Iron.

Whoever has taken pains to inform himself of the details of the manufacture of Iron during the last few years must be aware that inquiry has been greatly stimulated as to means for cheapening both the absolute and relative cost of the product.

It has been apparent, moreover, for many years, that the person or persons who should discover a process or processes by which iron could be made for thirty, or twenty, or even ten per cent. less than by the methods heretofore pursued, and who should secure a patent or patents for their knowledge, would be able, through combinations, to defy rivalry, drive all other manufacturers of the commodity either out of the business or into bankruptcy, and roll up fortunes that should be limited only by their desires.

THADDEUS STEVENS.

During the proceedings of the House on Thursday last, in memory of the late distinguished Pennsylvania statesman, our own Representative, Gen. J. K. MOORHEAD, spoke as follows:

Mr. Speaker, my acquaintance with Thaddeus Stevens began during the administration of Governor Ritner, of Pennsylvania, about the year 1836. He was then a bold and daring leader of his party.

While he was at times terribly severe, and more rarely disconcerting, and sometimes in the intensity of political excitement, he formed his own opinions, and acted on his own convictions.

THE TRUE MEDICAL DOCTRINE.

Nature, which struggles with disease, indicates unmistakably the kind of assistance she requires. In cases of nervous weakness and general debility, the feeble pulse, the lack-lustre eye, the attenuated frame, the faccid muscles, the melancholy visage, informs us as plainly as if each organ had a tongue, that a medicinal stimulant is needed.
